JERSEY OFFICERS SAY HAUPTMANN IS 'BROKEN' MAN

Prisoner Loses His Stoic Calm In Hunterdon County Bastile

IS VISITED BY WIFE

Extraordinary Precautions Are Taken To Guard Kidnap Suspect

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Bruno Hauptmann, nervous and restless under the eyes of three vigilant guards, was called "broken" tonight by Jersey officials as they pushed plans for his arraignment on a charge of slaying the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The prisoner, palid and thin, lost his stoic calm after he was brought to the Hunterdon county jail last night from the Bronx.

He slept fitfully and ate little. For a while he paced rapidly along his narrow cell and the adjacent "bull pen." Then he sat silent on his cot, staring straight ahead.

Mrs. Hauptmann and the prisoner's attorney, James M. Fawcett of New York, came to the jail in mid-afternoon and were given permission to see Hauptmann.

Mrs. Hauptmann, dressed in a blue suit and dark hat, hurried through a knot of persons in front of the jail and went quickly into the warden's office. With her and Fawcett was Harry Whitney, an associate of the attorney.

Sheriff John H. Curtis said he had not expected the visitors today but promptly announced he would let them talk to the prisoner.

Mrs. Hauptmann smiled as she greeted her husband in German. A four-foot barred space separated them.

Fawcett, who said he could not translate the brief conversation between husband and wife, reported Hauptmann appeared cheered by the visit.

Mrs. Hauptmann will attend the trial, the attorney said, staying with friends near Flemington.

Announcing he would confer again with his client Monday, Fawcett said he expected to present three or four new defense witnesses at the trial. He declined to give their names.

He said he would ask for a delay of a month or five weeks after arraignment to prepare the defense, and added he had not yet considered the retention of New Jersey counsel to aid him.

Headquarters for the defense, Fawcett announced, will be established at a Trenton hotel shortly after the arraignment.

Earlier Hauptmann had asked for a cigarette. A guard lighted it after refusing to let him have a match.

He declined the customary prison breakfast of cereal but drank some coffee. At noon he also refused food, although later he ate an apple and requested more coffee.

For the first time the ex-convict showed interest in the developments of his case. His request for newspapers was refused by the sheriff, who continued precautions begun in the Bronx jail after Hauptmann had fashioned a makeshift knife from a spoon.

Hauptmann wore no belt, necktie or shoe laces, and he was fed from paper plates and cups with paper spoons.

Two state troopers and a deputy sheriff remained in the cell block with him. He was the only prisoner in the tier, the others having been assigned to other parts of the jail.

The "bull pen" in which he is allowed to walk is 30 feet long and four feet wide. A guard stands at each end when the prisoner paces the enclosure. When he is in his cell, they stand in front of the open door.

Officers planned to fasten a tight mesh screen over the pen to prevent anyone passing a weapon to Hauptmann.

The guards worked in six-hour details, arranged so that fresh men would be on duty all the time, Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said. He and the sheriff pooled their forces in establishing the heavy guard.

POINCARE IS GIVEN FUNERAL OF HERO

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Raymond Poincare, France's war president and post-strife financial savior, was given a battle hero's funeral today by a saddened people.

The body was taken on a gun carriage from the Pantheon, the necropolis of the country's great, to Notre Dame cathedral with full military honors.

Dripping fog under a leaden sky provided a sorrowful setting for the day of national mourning and obsequies in which Premier Gaston Doumergue eulogized the dead statesman.

President Albert Lebrun, just returned from the funeral of the assassinated King Alexander of Yugoslavia, led the cortege of noblemen and commoners behind the flag-covered casket between a mile-long double-wall of armed men from the Pantheon to the cathedral where Cardinal Binet, archbishop of Beasoncon, gave absolution.

Premier Doumergue, from the crepe-covered rostrum facing the high catafalque in the Pantheon peristyle, gave Poincare "our last farewell."

BEFORE THE FEDERAL commission investigating aviation (may it do something more than merely investigate) Igor Sikorsky, who knows flying, said that super-flying boats, immediately after a declaration of war, would drop bombs at the rate of five or six a second, cutting wide swaths across any city. He predicted early development of liquid hydrogen as a fuel which would enable an air boat to fly from Europe to New York, carrying twenty thousand pounds of bombs.

FRANK HAWKS, one of the best American fliers, told senators that he himself could fly today from Tokio or Shanghai to New York in forty-eight hours, and plenty of Asiatic flyers could do the same.

MAY COMPROMISE VANDERBILT CASE

Conferences Held Looking To Possible Settlement Of Suit

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Conferences looking to a possible settlement of the Vanderbilt-Whitney court battle over the custody of 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, heiress to $4,000,000 were understood tonight to be in progress during the week-end.

Counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt denied that any overtures had been made by the Whitney side, however, and said the case would go on Monday as scheduled. Mrs. Whitney's lawyer was not available for comment.

If accepted, this settlement would leave little Gloria in the care of her aunt, the wealthy sculptress and art patron, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, her mother, would continue to draw the $48,000 which the court allows her yearly from her young daughter's estate.

Mrs. Whitney, nervous and weary, has offered in event of a settlement to close her case without delay and make no further opposition to Mrs. Vanderbilt's application for a writ of habeas corpus declaring her legal right to the custody of Gloria.

It is argument on this application which has been heard for the past three weeks by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew, and which has brought testimony from her former servants that Mrs. Vanderbilt drank excessively, was intimate with Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe, and neglected her child.

When Reginald Vanderbilt died in 1925 his wife was only 20, and therefore George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist were appointed guardians of the child's fortune. Mrs. Vanderbilt now seeks to become guardian herself.

Four Men Charged With Having Counterfeit Money

Four Lincoln parish men were brought before Allen B. Guthrie, United States commissioner, here Saturday for arraignment on charges of possessing and passing counterfeit federal reserve notes. Bonds of the men were fixed and they were placed in the parish jail to await the next regular term of federal court.

Bonds of $2,500 were fixed for two of the accused men, Sam Dye, 25, and Clyde Holstead, 47. Bonds of the other two, Garland Choat, 36, and Travis Traylor, 57, were fixed at $500.

MOLLISONS LEAD IN AIR RACE TO AUSTRALIAN CITY

Jim And Amy Roar Away From Baghdad With 19 Ships Behind

SCOTT, BLACK FOLLOW

Two American Entries Hold Fifth Place In 'Longest Contest'

MILDENHALL AIRDROME, England, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The flying Mollisons roared away from Baghdad tonight in the van of 19 competitors in the London-to-Melbourne air derby with another British team close behind them and two Dutchmen in hot pursuit.

C. W. A. Scott and Malcolm Black in a long distance British machine swooped into Baghdad 12 minutes after the Mollisons had taken off for Allahabad, India. Scott had been unreported until he reached Iraq, suddenly looming up as a major contender.

The Scott-Black flying team remained on the ground at Baghdad for 33 minutes, resuming the aerial chase at 9:33 p. m. (G. M. T.), exactly 45 minutes behind the Mollisons.

K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll, of Holland, in their American machine stopped 40 minutes at Alleppo, Syria, then dashed off in pursuit of the Mollisons and Scott.

Parmentier and Moll swooped down on the Baghdad airport at 11:11 p. m. (G. M. T.), and hastily made preparations to be off again.

Only one machine out of 19 remained unreported, that of Cathcart Jones and Ken W. Waller, Britishers, flying a plane just like that of the two leading entries.

Capt. and Mrs. Mollison, Jim and Amy, led their competitors all the way across Europe at a speed of 200 miles an hour and set their big British airplane down at Baghdad, a distance of 2,533 miles from Mildenhall, in 12 hours and 40 minutes.

The two American entries, Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, who took off from Athens for Baghdad at 6 o'clock, were in fifth place. British News Agency dispatches reported they had flown over the top of Mont Blanc. They had encountered strong winds and dense fogs on

SOLONS TO NAME CENSUS WORKERS

Congressmen, Not Senators, To Make Louisiana Appointments

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(Special)—Appointment of the 437 enumerators and six supervisors who will conduct the coming farm census in Louisiana will be made by Democratic congressmen and not by senators as originally planned. Director William Austin of the census bureau announced today.

Recommendation of men for the jobs will not, however, be strictly limited to congressional districts because of the fact that there are only six districts to be used for the census in Louisiana, while there are eight congressional districts in the state. Thus, the census districts will in certain instances overlap the congressional districts.

In a case where a census district is completely contained in a congressional district, the congressman from this district will recommend the supervisor and all enumerators for the district. Where a census district overlaps two or more congressional districts, the congressmen representing these districts will name the supervisor and enumerators by mutual agreement.

Headquarters for the six census districts in Louisiana will be located at New Orleans, Minden, Ruston, Alexandria, Ville Platte and New Iberia.

Men 'Too Old To Work' Set Up Their Own Shop

Branded by the present industrial age as too old to work, a group of men in their sixties and seventies have set up a shop at 122 South Grand street. There the members of this group are demonstrating that, although they may not have the muscle and brawn of their more youthful days, they possess the same skilled artistry with tools that once enabled them to earn good livings.

The men were among those which the ERA had termed "unworkables." They were denied the right to work as ordinary ERA workers do, they were said to be too old to get into ditches and wield picks, shovels and axes.

But these men were not satisfied to accept straight doles. They felt sure that their days of usefulness were not entirely ended and were convinced that they could still turn out valuable work if they only had an opportunity. They realized they were not strong enough for hard, rough labor, but they could not believe that their ability to make useful things with their hands was valueless.

With these facts in view, they began telling ERA officials that if they only had a shop they could make many articles which the ERA could sell or otherwise use. Finally they succeeded in getting their project approved.

At first the small group of men began working outdoors at the rear of the old postoffice building, having as tools only a few hammers, saws, knives, files and braces and bits. They demonstrated that with only these few tools they could turn out other tools that were as good as those to be bought in the hardware stores.

One of the men working at the present shop, which is much better than the original shop, though still not adequately equipped, is R. A. Evans. On a display board Mr. Evans has placed some of the things he has fashioned with his own hands. Most of them have been made recently,

Bread Truck Driver Robbed, Bound To Tree In Carefully Planned Holdup Near City

One Bandit Conceals Self In Machine; Other Follows Behind

Yegg Reveals Self At Nutland Road, Forces Victim Into Woods

Two holdup men who had carefully planned their robbery, one of them concealed in a bread truck returning to Monroe and the other trailing behind in an automobile, Saturday afternoon in a lonely stretch of woods off the Nutland road, southeast of Monroe, robbed the truck driver, A. P. Colvin, 33, of approximately $100 and sped away, leaving the victim with his arms tied around a tree.

Colvin broke loose from his bonds after working at them for about two hours, according to his estimate of the time, and drove his truck to Monroe, where he reported the robbery to peace officers. Police and members of the sheriff's department were investigating the holdup.

Driving to Monroe Saturday from Wisner, the end of his route, Colvin had reached a point near the Nutland road when he heard a stealthy movement about the empty bread boxes in the truck. He half turned around and had a glimpse of a tall, dark man pointing a pistol at his body.

"Buddy, do you see that road that turns off up there?" the highwayman asked, roughly.

Colvin answered in the affirmative.

"Then turn off there," the robber ordered.

Colvin drove the truck into the road and after traveling a distance was ordered to drive on a road which turned off to the left. When he had driven about a mile from the paved highway, he was ordered to stop the truck.

The confederate in the trailing automobile, a black Ford sedan, reached the lonely spot just behind the truck and the two robbers made short work of taking Colvin's money

Discovery Will Make Radium Out Of Salt, Magazine Announces

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A discovery that will make radium out of common table salt, the first practical transmutation of elements that man can use in daily life, was announced today in the "Physical Review."

This salt radium remains common table salt except that it gives off rays even more powerful than those ordinarily used by physicians from pure radium.

The salt radium rays last for several days, then automaically stop. As salt is harmless anywhere in the human body, the discovery offers medicine a new tool for experimenting with cancer, and biologists a new type of figurative scalpel.

Table salt is a combination of sodium and chlorine. The transmutation is made on the sodium alone, by Dr. E. O. Lawrence, professor of physics at the University of California.

SHUSHAN PUTS UP BOND OF $10,000

United States Grand Jury Is Recessed Subject To Call

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The United States grand jury today was in recess subject to call in its wide-spread investigation of income tax returns filed during the past few years by Senator Huey P. Long and his high political associates.

Al (Abe) Shushan, head of the wholesale drygoods firm of Shushan Brothers on Canal street, who was indicted late yesterday on eight counts alleging evasion of income tax on his returns for the years 1929-32, inclusive, appeared today before United States Commissioner Reginald H. Carter, Jr., and posted bond of $10,000.

Shushan, a close personal and political friend of Long, is the fourth person indicted by the grand jury during its income tax investigation.

The government charged that there was a deficiency aggregating $53.919.34 in the returns he made for the years 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932.

The indictment alleged that Shushan realized an income for the four years of $461,404.63, but that his income tax returns showed that he paid tax only on $83,927.35.

The other three indictments were returned about two weeks ago against Harry B. Nelson and his two brothers, John P. and Willis W. Nelson, of a Baton Rouge contracting company which furnished large quantities of road materials to the state during the $80,000,000 road building program of the Long and Governor O. K. Allen gubernatorial administrations.

Secession Splits Church Faction In German Nation

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Secession split the Protestant church of Germany today with a resolution of the confessional synod, claiming 80 per cent of Protestant churchgoers, ordering all church councils to refuse obedience to Reichschurch authorities and to follow the synod's orders alone.

The synod, chief opposition to Hitler's German Christian church, adopted the resolution virtually unanimously, climaxing a year and a half of bitter opposition to Reichschurch dictatorship.

The document asserted that "we communicate this statement to the Reichs government and demand that it shall also recognize that in ecclesiastical affairs the church has sole jurisdiction under the supervisory powers of the state."

MISSING MEXICAN CHURCHMAN FOUND

MEXICO, D. F., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Monseignor Pascual Diaz, archbishop of the City of Mexico who was reported to have gone into hiding because of the government party's movement to expel high officials of the Catholic church, was found tonight at a new residence.

He pronounced the situation of the church in Mexico "very serious" but said no immediate action is contemplated by religious leaders.

The archbishop said he was informed by the ministry of the interior that there was no order for his expulsion.

Deportation of bishops and archbishops, accused by the government party with leadership of opposition to the plan to introduce socialistic education in all primary schools, was demanded yesterday by the chamber of deputies. The demand is to be submitted to President Abelardo Rodriguez.

Archbishop Diaz denied he had issued a pastoral letter on the subject of socialistic education.

KIDNAPERS FREE FORMER FOOTBALL STAR AT CORINTH

Olen Burcham Hurled From Automobile With His Wrists Tied

IN DAZED CONDITION

Officers Believe Abductors Snatched Youth By Mistake

CORINTH, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Olen Burcham, 26-year-old former college football star, was thrown out of an automobile here today by kidnapers who officers said snatched him from the streets of Russellville, Ala., two days ago in the belief he was another person.

His wrists tightly bound by a small rope, Burcham, seated on a curb, was in a dazed condition when found by police.

After being given food and taking light exercises, Burcham was taken to a Corinth hospital for treatment. He is said to have been suffering from the effects of a drug he said was administered by his captors.

Because of his dazed condition, officers were unable to obtain a coherent story of the alleged abduction from the victim. However, it was determined that the youth was released after his captors had decided he was the wrong person.

Since he was snatched from the streets of Russellvile two days ago Burcham told officers that he had been riding continuously in an automobile, stopping at a small frame house only once during the time.

He declared that he would be able to recognize his captors.

Other than being drugged and weakened by lack of food and exercise, Burcham apparently was none the worse for his experience.

Relatives were notified and were reported en route here from the Alabama town to return Burcham to his home.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

LASVEGAS, Nev., Oct. 20.—(Special)—The madame and I just been visiting "Hoover dam," that's not a typographical error, it's Hoover dam, there must be some justice left among us. Well, you should see it under construction, it will be finished in less than a year, two and one-half years ahead of time. They have done a great job, if they decided to plow under every third dam, they are going to have a tough time with this one. Found the best way I ever went to Arizona, by a cable and a bucket. The dam grows a foot high a day, that sounds like Oklahoma weeds. One old boy got fired from down in there the other day, and as he walked out he got a high peek and declared, "I hope she leaks." That sounds like a rich Republican's wish to the New Deal. They "hope it leaks."

LUMBER HEARING SLATED MONDAY

Dawkins To Decide Whether To Make Injunction Permanent

A hearing on whether a temporary injunction restraining three Louisiana lumber dealers from violating the minimum price provisions of the lumber code shall be made permanent is scheduled to come up before Judge Ben C. Dawkins in federal court at Shreveport Monday. The temporary injunction was granted in Monroe by Judge Dawkins on October 12, on a petition filed by the federal district attorney.

If Judge Dawkins should order a permanent injunction, following the hearing Monday, an appeal probably will be filed, as it is expected the issue must eventually be settled by the United States supreme court.

Four judges in this section of the south have been called upon recently to make decisions as to whether or not the lumber companies have the right to sell their products at a price below that fixed by the NRA lumber code authority. Two of these judges apparently decided that the code was unconstitutional, while the action of the other two indicated they considered it constitutional.

The judge other than Judge Dawkins who granted an injunction was Judge John E. Martineau of the eastern federal district of Arkansas. Judge Harry Anderson of the western district of Tennessee and Judge Edwin R. Holmes of the southern district of Mississippi had previously refused to grant injunctions.

Lumber companies cited in Judge Dawkins' order were the Roy O. Martin company of the Alexandria division, in two cases, Shannon Brothers of the Lake Charles division and Lendel Lumber company of the Monroe district.

The brothers completed in 1877 one of the country's early railroads, the Ligonier Valley, in western Pennsylvania. In 1898 he entered banking, a profession in which he has been an important figure many years.

Mellon maintained a winter home at Palatka, Fla.

ARREST OF STOLL KIDNAP SUSPECT EXPECTED HOURLY

Federal Grand Jury Indicts Robinson, His Wife And Father

CHARGES EXPLAINED

Chart Is Found Which Indicates Man's Den In Indianapolis

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Capture of Thomas Henry Robinson, Jr., was expected by the department of justice tonight within a few hours.

This announcement came from Washington after a federal grand jury here had indicted the fugitive, his wife and father for the abduction of Alice Speed Stoll in terms that made the death penalty possible for all three in the event of conviction.

Federal officers announced discovery in Nashville of a chart which indicated by mystic symbols the location of the kidnaper's den in Indianapolis. They asserted that Mrs. Robinson and her father-in-law knew the whereabouts of young Robinson prior to the dispatch of the $50,000 ransom from Nashville.

Mrs. Robinson is alleged to have carried the money north.

Had this information been given the authorities, the justice department announcement said, restoration of Mrs. Stoll, daughter of one of Kentucky's foremost families, would have been effected sooner, payment of the ransom been unnecessary and the arrest of the kidnaper been made.

The case assumed an international aspect when reports came from Fort Erie, Ont., that a hotel man had seen Robinson there. The story was that Robinson was accompanied by two men, one from Flint, Mich.

Explaining the indictments, United States Attorney Thomas J. Sparks said the extreme penalty for the three accused could be exacted if the trial so recommended and the court concurred.

"I will hold him without bond, if it can be done," said Federal District Judge Charles I. Dawson referring to young Robinson, a former insane asylum inmate. Sparks told the court the man, when caught, could legally be held without bond.

Asked if he intended to press for the death penalty for young Robinson, Sparks replied, "I say unhesitatingly that I will do so."

Toward the other defendants, the wife who is in jail here in default of $50,000 bond, and the father, free in Nashville under $25,000 bail, he was more lenient.

"I don't know whether I'll ask for capital punishment for them or not yet," he said. "It depends on the proof."

PRISONER'S RETURN TO MONROE DELAYED

Although a decision granting extradition of Henry Frankinson to Monroe was rendered after a habeas corpus hearing Saturday at Vicksburg, Frankinson's attorney secured an appeal to the Mississippi circuit court and Sheriff Milton Coverdale and George W. Lester, assistant district attorney, who went to Vicksburg to return Frankinson here, were faced with a delay in the legal proceedings. The appeal will be heard in December.

Frankinson is wanted here to answer a charge of giving a bad draft to F. Strauss and Son. He was said to have obtained merchandise valued at $447.50 by giving the draft.

Armed with extradition papers signed by Governor Sennett Conner of Mississippi, Sheriff Coverdale and the assistant district attorney won Judge Thigpen's decision in the habeas corpus hearing, the judge ordering Frankinson released to the Louisiana sheriff, but under the Mississippi law Frankinson could secure the appeal either by posting bond of $1,000 and securing release from jail, or by taking an oath that he was unable to provide the bond and remaining in jail. Frankinson took the oath and was returned to jail in Vicksburg to await the December hearing.

FOOTBALL INJURIES FATAL FOR YOUTH

MERIDIAN, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Roland Eddins, 18, captain and one of the star players for Pachuta high school football team, died in a hospital here today of an abdominal injury he suffered in a game against Quitman high school at Quitman yesterday.

He was injured on the first play of the game which Quitman won 39 to 0. Feeling his removal from the game would seriously handicap his team which had only 14 players in uniform, young Eddins begged to remain in the game despite his injury. He failed to realize the seriousness of his condition until fully 15 minutes after the accident when he collapsed.

His attempt to block out an opposing player and clear a path for his teammate who received the ball on the kick-off resulted in the injury.

Coach McMahon said tonight the team probably would be disbanded, partly because of the tragedy and because of the crippled condition of his squad.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Bruno Hauptmann, nervous and restless under the eyes of three vigilant guards, was called "broken" tonight by Jersey officials as they pushed plans for his arraignment on a charge of slaying the kidnaped Lindbergh baby.

The prisoner, pallid and thin, lost his stolo calm after he was brought to the Hunterdon county jail last night from the Bronx.

He slept fitfully and ate little. For a while he paced rapidly along his narrow cell and the adjacent "bull pen." Then he sat silent on his cot, staring straight ahead.

Mrs. Hauptmann and the prisoner's attorney, James M. Fawcett of New York, came to the jail in mid-afternoon and were given permission to see Hauptmann.

Mrs. Hauptmann, dressed in a blue suit and dark hat, hurried through a knot of persons in front of the jail and went quickly into the warden's office. With her and Fawcett was Harry Whitney, an associate of the attorney.

Sheriff John H. Curtis said he had not expected the visitors today but promptly announced he would let them talk to the prisoner.

Mrs. Hauptmann smiled as she greeted her husband in German. A four-foot barred space separated them.

Fawcett, who said he could not translate the brief conversation between husband and wife, reported Hauptmann appeared cheered by the visit.

Mrs. Hauptmann will attend the trial, the attorney said, staying with friends near Flemington.

Announcing he would confer again with his client Monday, Fawcett said he expected to present three or four new defense witnesses at the trial. He declined to give their names.

He said he would ask for a delay of a month or five weeks after arraignment to prepare the defense, and added he had not yet considered the retention of New Jersey counsel to aid him.

Headquarters for the defense, Fawcett announced, will be established at a Trenton hotel shortly after the arraignment.

Earlier Hauptmann had asked for a cigarette. A guard lighted it after refusing to let him have a match.

He declined the customary prison breakfast of cereal but drank some coffee. At noon he also refused food, although later he ate an apple and requested more coffee.

For the first time the ex-convict showed interest in the developments of his case. His request for newspapers was refused by the sheriff, who continued precautions begun in the Bronx jail after Hauptmann had fashioned a makeshift knife from a spoon.

Hauptmann wore no belt, necktie or shoe laces, and he was fed from paper plates and cups with paper spoons.

Two state troopers and a deputy sheriff remained in the cell block with him. He was the only prisoner in the tier, the others having been assigned to other parts of the jail.

The "bull pen" in which he is allowed to walk is 30 feet long and four feet wide. A guard stands at each end when the prisoner paces the enclosure. When he is in his cell, they stand in front of the open door.

Officers planned to fasten a tight mesh screen over the pen to prevent anyone passing a weapon to Hauptmann.

The guards worked in six-hour details, arranged so that fresh men would be on duty all the time. Col. H. Norman Schwarzkopf said. He and the sheriff pooled their forces in establishing the heavy guard.

POINCARE IS GIVEN FUNERAL OF HERO

PARIS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Raymond Poincare, France's war president and post-strife financial savior, was given a battle hero's funeral today by a saddened people.

The body was taken on a gun carriage from the Pantheon, the necropolis of the country's great, to Notre Dame cathedral with full military honors.

Dripping fog under a leaden sky provided a sorrowful setting for the day of national mourning and obsequies in which Premier Gaston Doumergue eulogized the dead statesman.

President Albert Lebrun, just returned from the funeral of the assassinated King Alexander of Yugoslavia, led the cortege of noblemen and commoners behind the flag-covered casket between a mile-long double-wall of armed men from the Pantheon to the cathedral where Cardinal Binet, archbishop of Besancon, gave absolution.

Premier Doumergue, from the crepe-covered rostrum facing the high catafalque in the Pantheon peristyle, gave Poincare "our last farewell."

BEFORE THE FEDERAL commission investigating aviation (may it do something more than merely investigate) Igor Sikorsky, who knows flying, said that super-flying boats, immediately after a declaration of war, would drop bombs at the rate of five or six a second, cutting wide swaths across any city. He predicted early development of liquid hydrogen as a fuel which would enable an air boat to fly from Europe to New York, carrying twenty thousand pounds of bombs.

FRANK HAWKS, one of the best American fliers, told senators that he himself could fly today from Tokio or Shanghai to New York in forty-eight hours, and plenty of Asiatic flyers could do the same.

MAY COMPROMISE VANDERBILT CASE

Conferences Held Looking To Possible Settlement Of Suit

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Conferences looking to a possible settlement of the Vanderbilt-Whitney court battle over the custody of 10-year-old Gloria Vanderbilt, heiress to $4,000,000 were understood tonight to be in progress during the week-end.

Counsel for Mrs. Vanderbilt denied that any overtures had been made by the Whitney side, however, and said the case would go on Monday as scheduled. Mrs. Whitney's lawyer was not available for comment.

If accepted, this settlement would leave little Gloria in the care of her aunt, the wealthy sculptress and art patron, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, her mother, would continue to draw the $48,000 which the court allows her yearly from her young daughter's estate.

Mrs. Whitney, nervous and weary, has offered in event of a settlement to close her case without delay and to make no further opposition to Mrs. Vanderbilt's application for a writ of habeas corpus declaring her legal right to the custody of Gloria.

It is argument on this application which has been heard for the past six weeks by Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew, and which has brought testimony from her former servants that Mrs. Vanderbilt drank excessively, was intimate with Prince Gottfried zu Hohenlohe, and neglected her child.

When Reginald Vanderbilt died in 1925 his wife was 20, and therefore George W. Wickersham and Thomas B. Gilchrist were appointed guardians of the child's fortune. Mrs. Vanderbilt now seeks to become guardian herself.

MOLLISONS LEAD IN AIR RACE TO AUSTRALIAN CITY

Jim And Amy Roar Away From Baghdad With 19 Ships Behind

SCOTT, BLACK FOLLOW

Two American Entries Hold Fifth Place In 'Longest Contest'

MILDENHALL AIRDROME, England, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The flying Mollisons roared away from Baghdad tonight in the van of 19 competitors in the London-to-Melbourne air derby with another British team close behind them and two Dutchmen in hot pursuit.

C. W. A. Scott and Malcolm Black in a long distance British machine swooped into Baghdad 12 minutes after the Mollisons had taken off for Allahabad, India. Scott had been unreported until he reached Iraq, suddenly looming up as a major contender.

The Scott-Black flying team remained on the ground at Baghdad for 33 minutes, resuming the aerial chase at 9:33 p. m. (G. M. T.), exactly 45 minutes behind the Mollisons.

K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll, of Holland, in their American machine stopped 40 minutes at Aleppo, Syria, then dashed off in pursuit of the Mollisons and Scott.

Parmentier and Moll swooped down on the Baghdad airport at 11:11 p. m. (G. M. T.), and hastily made preparations to be off again.

Only one machine out of 19 remained unreported, that of Cathcart Jones and Ken W. Waller, Britishers, flying a plane just like that of the two leading entries.

Capt. and Mrs. Mollison, Jim and Amy, led their competitors all the way across Europe at a speed of 200 miles an hour and set their big British airplane down at Baghdad, a distance of 2,533 miles from Mildenhall, in 12 hours and 40 minutes.

The two American entries, Col. Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, who took off from Athens for Baghdad at 6 o'clock, were in fifth place. British News Agency dispatches reported they had flown over the top of Mont Blanc. They had encountered strong winds and dense fogs on

Congressmen, Not Senators, To Make Louisiana Appointments

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(Special)—Appointment of the 437 enumerators and six supervisors who will conduct the coming farm census in Louisiana will be made by Democratic congressmen and not by senatorial patronage as originally planned. Director William Austin of the census bureau announced today.

Recommendation of men for the jobs will not, however, be strictly on congressional districts because of the fact that there are only six districts to be used for the census in Louisiana, while there are eight congressional districts in the state. Thus, the census districts in certain instances overlap the congressional districts.

In a case where a census district is completely contained in a congressional district, the congressman from this district will recommend the supervisor and all enumerators for the district. Where a census district overlaps two or more congressional districts, the congressmen representing these districts will name the supervisor and enumerators by mutual agreement.

Headquarters for the six census districts in Louisiana will be located at New Orleans, Minden, Ruston, Alexandria, Ville Platte and New Iberia.

Men 'Too Old To Work' Set Up Their Own Shop

Branded by the present industrial age as too old to work, a group of men in their sixties and seventies have set up a shop at 122 South Grand street. There the members of this group are demonstrating that, although they may not have the muscle and brawn of their more youthful competitors, they possess the same skilled artistry with tools that once enabled them to earn good livings.

The men were among those which the ERA had termed "unworkables." They were denied the right to work on ERA projects because of their age. They were said to be too old to go out into the fields with picks, shovels and axes.

But these men were not satisfied to accept straight doles. They felt that their days of usefulness were not entirely ended and were convinced that they could still turn out valuable work if they could but find the opportunity. They realized they weren't able to do the hard, rough labor, but they believed that their ability to make useful things with their hands was valueless.

With these facts in view, they began telling ERA officials that if they could have a shop they could make many articles which the ERA could sell or otherwise use. Finally they succeeded in getting their plan approved.

At first the small group of men began working outdoors at the rear of the old postoffice building, having as tools only a few hammers, saws, knives, files and braces and bits. They demonstrated that with only these few tools they could turn out other tools that were as good as those to be purchased in the hardware stores.

One of the men working at the present shop, which is much larger than the original shop, though still not adequately equipped, is R. A. Evans. On a display board Mr. Evans has placed some of the things he has fashioned with his own hands. These include some items which he has been made recently,

Bread Truck Driver Robbed, Bound To Tree In Carefully Planned Holdup Near City

Yegg Reveals Self At Nutland Road, Forces Victim Into Woods

Two holdup men who had carefully planned their robbery, one of them concealed in a bread truck returning to Monroe and the other trailing behind in an automobile, Saturday afternoon in a lonely stretch of woods off the Nutland road, southeast of Monroe, robbed the truck driver, A. P. Colvin, 33, of approximately $100 and sped away, leaving the victim with his arms tied around a tree.

Colvin broke loose from his bonds after working at them for about two hours, according to his estimate of the time, and drove his truck to Monroe, where he reported the robbery to peace officers. Police and members of the sheriff's department were investigating the holdup.

Driving to Monroe Saturday from Wisner, the end of his route, Colvin had reached a point near the Nutland road when he heard a stealthy movement about the empty bread boxes in the truck. He half turned around and had a glimpse of a tall, dark man pointing a pistol at his body.

"Buddy, do you see that road that turns off up there?" the highwayman asked, roughly.

Colvin answered in the affirmative. "Then turn off there," the robber ordered.

Colvin drove the truck into the road and after traveling a distance was ordered to drive on a road which turned off to the left. When he had driven about a mile from the paved highway, he was ordered to stop the truck.

The confederate in the trailing automobile, a black Ford sedan, reached the lonely spot just behind the truck and the two robbers made short work of taking Colvin's money

Discovery Will Make Radium Out Of Salt, Magazine Announces

BOSTON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A discovery that will make radium out of common table salt, the first practical transmutation of elements that man can use in daily life, was announced today in the "Physical Review."

This salt radium remains common table salt except that it gives off rays even more powerful than those ordinarily used by physicians from pure radium.

The salt radium rays last for several days, then automatically stop. As salt is harmless anywhere in the human body, the discovery offers medicine a new tool for experimenting with cancer, and biologists a new type of figurative scalpel.

Table salt is a combination of sodium and chlorine. The radium is made only from the sodium alone, by Dr. E. O. Lawrence, professor of physics at the University of California.

SHUSHAN PUTS UP BOND OF $10,000

United States Grand Jury Is Recessed Subject To Call

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The United States grand jury today was in recess subject to call in its widespread investigation of income tax returns filed during the past few years by Senator Huey P. Long and his political associates.

Al (Abe) Shushan, head of the wholesale drygoods firm of Shushan Brothers on Canal street, who was indicted late yesterday on eight counts alleging evasion of income tax on his returns for the years 1929-32, inclusive, appeared today before United States Commissioner Reginald H. Carter, Jr., and posted bond of $10,000.

Shushan, a close personal and political friend of Long, is the fourth person indicted by the grand jury during its income tax investigation.

The government charged that there was a deficiency aggregating $53,919.34 in the returns he made for the years 1929, 1930, 1931 and 1932.

The indictment alleged that Shushan realized an income for the four years of $461,404.63, but that his income tax returns showed that he paid tax only on $83,927.35.

The other three indictments were returned about two weeks ago against Harry B. Nelson and his two brothers, John P. and Willis W. Nelson, of a Baton Rouge contracting company which furnished large quantities of road materials to the state during the $80,000,000 road building program of the Long and Governor O. K. Allen gubernatorial administrations.

Secession Splits Church Faction In German Nation

BERLIN, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Secession split the Protestant church of Germany today with a resolution of the confessional synod, claiming 80 per cent of Protestant churchgoers, ordering all church councils to refuse obedience to Reichschurch authorities and to follow the synod's orders alone.

The synod, chief opposition to Hitler's German Christian church, adopted the resolution virtually unanimously, climaxing a year and a half of bitter opposition to Reichschurch dictatorship.

The document asserted that "we communicate this statement to the Reichs government and demand that it recognize that in ecclesiastical affairs the church has jurisdiction under the supervisory powers of the state."

KIDNAPERS FREE FORMER FOOTBALL STAR AT CORINTH

Olen Burcham Hurled From Automobile With His Wrists Tied

Officers Believe Abductors Snatched Youth By Mistake

CORINTH, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Olen Burcham, 26-year-old former college football star, was thrown out of an automobile here today by kidnapers who officers said snatched him from the streets of Russellville, Ala., two days ago in the belief he was another person.

His wrists tightly bound by a small rope, Burcham, seated on a curb, was in a dazed condition when found by police.

After being given food and taking light exercises, Burcham was taken to a Corinth hospital for treatment. He is said to have been suffering from the effects of a drug he said was administered by his captors.

Because of his dazed condition, officers were unable to obtain a coherent story of the alleged abduction from the victim. However, it was determined that the youth was released after his captors had decided he was the wrong person.

Since he was snatched from the streets of Russellville two days ago Burcham told officers that he had been riding continuously in an automobile, stopping at a small frame house only once during the time.

He declared that he would be able to recognize his kidnapers.

Other than being drugged and weakened by lack of food and exercise, Burcham apparently was none the worse for his experience.

Relatives were notified and were reported en route here from the Alabama town to return Burcham to his home.

MISSING MEXICAN CHURCHMAN FOUND

MEXICO, D. F., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Monseignor Pascual Diaz, archbishop of the City of Mexico who was reported to have gone into hiding because of the government party's movement to expel high officials of the Catholic church, was found tonight at a new residence.

He pronounced the situation of the church in Mexico "very serious" but said no immediate action is contemplated by religious leaders.

The archbishop said he was informed by the ministry of the interior that there was no order for his expulsion.

Deportation of bishops and archbishops, accused by the government party with leadership of opposition to the plan to introduce socialistic education in all primary schools, was demanded yesterday by the chamber of deputies. The demand is to be submitted to President Abelardo Rodriguez.

Archbishop Diaz denied he had issued a pastoral letter on the subject of socialistic education.

ROGERS HAS HIS SAY

LASVEGAS, Nev., Oct. 20.—(Special)—The madame and I just been visiting "Hoover dam," that's not a typographical error, it's Hoover dam, there must be some justice left among us. Well, you should see it under construction, it will be finished in less than a year, two and one-half years ahead of time. They have done a great job, if they decided to plow under every third dam, they are going to have a tough time with the fish. Found the best way I ever went to Arizona, by a cable and a bucket. The dam grows a foot high a day, with the water it sounds like Oklahoma weeds. One old boy got fired from down in the bottom of the dam and he walked out he got a high-peak straw hat on his head and declared, "I hope it leaks." That sounds like a rich Republican's wish to the New Deal. They "hope it leaks."

Yours,

Will Rogers.

LUMBER HEARING SLATED MONDAY

Dawkins To Decide Whether To Make Injunction Permanent

A hearing on whether a temporary injunction restraining three Louisiana lumber dealers from violating the minimum price provisions of the lumber code shall be made permanent is scheduled to come up before Judge Ben C. Dawkins in federal court at Shreveport Monday. The temporary injunction was granted in Monroe by Judge Dawkins on October 12, on a petition filed by the federal attorney.

If Judge Dawkins should order a permanent injunction, following the hearing Monday, an appeal probably will be filed, as it is expected the issue must eventually be settled by the United States supreme court.

Four judges in this section of the south have been called upon recently to make decisions as to whether or not the lumber companies have the right to sell their products at a price below that fixed by the NRA lumber code authority. Two of these judges apparently decided that the code was unconstitutional, while the action of the other two indicated they considered it constitutional.

The judge other than Judge Dawkins who granted an injunction was Judge John E. Martineau of the federal district of Arkansas. Judge Harry Anderson of the western district of Tennessee and Judge Edwin R. Holmes of the southern district of Mississippi had previously refused to grant injunctions.

Lumber companies cited in Judge Dawkins' order were the Roy O. Martin company of the Alexandria division and in two cases, Shannon Brothers of the Lake Charles division and Lendel Lumber company of the Monroe district.

ARREST OF STOLL KIDNAP SUSPECT EXPECTED HOURLY

Federal Grand Jury Indicts Robinson, His Wife And Father

CHARGES EXPLAINED

Chart Is Found Which Indicates Man's Den In Indianapolis

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Capture of Thomas Henry Robinson, Jr., was expected by the department of justice tonight within a few hours.

This announcement came from Washington after a federal grand jury here had indicted the fugitive, his wife and father for the abduction of Alice Speed Stoll in terms that made the death penalty possible for all three in the event of conviction.

Federal officers announced discovery in Nashville of a chart which by mystic symbols the location of the kidnaper's den in Indianapolis. They asserted that Mrs. Robinson and her father-in-law knew the whereabouts of young Robinson prior to the dispatch of the $50,000 ransom from Nashville.

Mrs. Robinson is alleged to have carried the money north.

Had this information been given the authorities, the justice department announcement said, restoration of Mrs. Stoll, daughter of one of Kentucky's foremost families, would have been effected sooner, payment of the ransom been unnecessary and the arrest of the kidnaper been made.

The case assumed an international aspect when reports came from Fort Erie, Ont., that a hotel man had seen Robinson there. The story was that Robinson was accompanied by two men, one from Flint, Mich.

Explaining the indictments, United States Attorney Thomas J. Sparks said the extreme penalty for the three accused could be exacted if the trial so recommended and the court concurred.

"I will hold him without bond, if it can be done," said Federal District Judge Charles I. Dawson referring to young Robinson, a former insane asylum inmate. Sparks told the court the man, who was, could legally be held without bond.

Asked if he intended to press for the death penalty for young Robinson, Sparks replied, "I say unhesitatingly that I will do so."

Toward the other defendants, the ex-federal district attorney said he would ask that each be held in default of $50,000 bond, and the father, free in Nashville under $25,000 bail, be made more lenient.

"I don't know whether I'll ask for capital punishment for them or not yet," he said. "It depends on the proof."

PRISONER'S RETURN TO MONROE DELAYED

Although a decision granting extradition of Henry Frankinson to Monroe was rendered after a habeas corpus hearing Saturday at Vicksburg, Frankinson's attorney secured an appeal to the Mississippi circuit court and Sheriff Milton Coverdale and George W. Lee, who went to Vicksburg to return Frankinson here, were faced with a delay in the legal proceedings. The appeal will be heard in December.

Frankinson is wanted here to answer a charge of giving a bad draft to F. Strauss and Son. He is alleged to have obtained merchandise valued at $447.50 by giving the draft.

Armed with extradition papers issued by Governor Sennett Conner of Mississippi, Sheriff Coverdale and the assistant district attorney won Judge Thigpen's decision in the habeas corpus hearing, the judge ordering Frankinson released to the Mississippi law Frankinson could secure the appeal for $1,000 and securing release from jail, or by taking an oath that he was unable to make the bond, he could stay in jail. Frankinson took the oath and was returned to jail in Vicksburg to await the December hearing.

FOOTBALL INJURIES FATAL FOR YOUTH

MERIDIAN, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Roland Eddins, 18, captain and one of the star players for Pachuta high school football team, was dead tonight as a result of an abdominal injury he suffered in a game against Quitman high school at Quitman yesterday.

He was injured on the first play of the game which Quitman won 39 to 0. Feeling his removal from the game would weaken his team when the team had only 14 players in uniform, young Eddins begged to remain in the game, failing to realize the seriousness of his condition until fully 15 minutes after the accident when he collapsed.

His attempt to block out an opposing player and clear a path for his teammate who received the ball on the kick-off resulted in the injury.

Coach McMahon said tonight the team would probably be disbanded, because of the tragedy and because of the crippled condition of his squad.

ADULT CLASSES READY TO START

State Educational Director For ERA Visits In Monroe

At least 12 of the 24 classes for adults authorized for Ouachita parish are expected to be started this week, some of them on Monday, it was announced Saturday, following a visit here by M. S. Robertson, state educational emergency relief administrator for Louisiana. While here Mr. Robertson conferred with T. O. Brown, superintendent of Ouachita parish schools; Mrs. Chrissie Williams, assistant superintendent; E. L. Neville, superintendent of city schools, and A. H. Nanney, district educational emergency relief supervisor.

Of the 12 classes apparently ready to start work Monday, five are white and seven are negroes. When all classes have started work there will be 12 white classes and 12 negro classes.

One thousand teachers for adult work have been allotted to Louisiana by the relief administration. This allotment was divided according to population, with Orleans parish having 80. Fourteen were allotted to the Ouachita parish school system and 10 to the city of Monroe, but school officials of the parish and city agreed to pool the allotment and to make an equal division among the whites and negroes.

Parishes in this district, over which Mr. Nanney has supervision, include Ouachita, Webster, Claiborne, Benville, Lincoln, Jackson, Caldwell, Union, Morehouse, East Carroll, West Carroll, Madison, Tensas, Franklin and Richland.

The present project calls for schools to continue until July 1. Plans for the opening have been under way since August.

Under the plan, the classes must be organized by their respective teachers, who must possess the necessary educational qualifications and who must be certified by the ERA as being eligible for such work.

A range of courses covering almost every subject is offered. An instructor may have an entire class in one subject or may have a group of students studying several subjects. Each class is expected to have not less than 10 nor more than 20 students.

Since some of the parishes have practically no unemployed teachers, it was thought that the allotment for this parish might be raised. Mr. Robertson, however, said he did not believe this was likely. It is possible that unemployed teachers from this parish may be allowed to go into parishes in which there are no unemployed teachers for the purpose of forming classes.

It is expected that names of the teachers who have been certified will be announced this week, so that those desiring to take courses may get in touch with them.

St. Joseph

The marriage of Miss Mary Jane Yourtee and Mr. John Bolin was quietly celebrated on Wednesday morning, October 10, at the plantation home of the bride's parents with only members of the two families present. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was unusually lovely in a gown of green crepe with brown accessories. She wore a corsage of yellow rose buds.

Mr. Bolin had as his best man, Mr. V. Clinton Rives, a brother-in-law of the bride. The nuptial music was played by Mrs. Holliman Cook. The spacious living room of the home was tastefully decorated with the greatest profusion of autumn flowers under the soft glow of candles that impressive ceremony was performed. Rev. Mr. J. D. Fomby, pastor of the Methodist church, officiating. A wedding luncheon was served immediately after the ceremony. The bride is the younger daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Tillman Yourtee, is one of the most popular members of the younger set in St. Joseph. She attended college in San Diego, California, and has since been filling the post of secretary to the Tensas Parish Health unit. Mr. Bolin, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bolin of Ruston, La., is an engineer at Camp Bruen here. After the ceremony, Mr. and Bolin left for Little Rock, Ark., where they will visit for a week, after which they will be at home to their friends in St. Joseph.

The dance at the Paradise night club on Friday night was very much enjoyed by all the younger set and there were a great many present. Mr. Magruder Smith, Jr., promoted the dance. Celestin's Tuxedos from New Orleans played. At the twelve o'clock intermission the crowd gathered at the River Road inn and enjoyed a plate supper. Among the many present were Mr. and Mrs. Myles Smith, Mrs. Fred Cassil, Mrs. Anne Rose, Mr. and Mrs. Stripling, Misses Edna Mae Ryther, Elise Coar, Edna Howard, Lola Kate Clarke, Cornelia Smith, Carolyn Ratcliff, Alverne Noble, Leah Knott, Susan Howard, Messrs. Curry MacPherson, Jr., William Clarke, Mina Standiford, Vernon Ratcliff, Magruder, Jr., and Jimmie Smith, John Sanford, Charles Hyde Richard Bourgeois and many others.

A delightful gathering was on Friday afternoon when the Reverend Skardoni D'Aubert entertained at a tea, in honor of the faculty of the Joseph M. Davidson high school. The tea was given in order to introduce this year's teachers to everyone in St. Joseph. The honorees included Miss Occhie Draughon, Miss Olivia Scott, Miss Nellie Neal Jackson, Miss Lucille Reiber, Miss Elsie Coor, Miss Alverne Noble, Miss Leah Knott, Miss Mabel Skinner, Miss Myrtis King and Mr. Jack Crigler. The daintily spread tea table was placed under the picturesque shade trees in front of the rectory, where the guests assembled. Tea and delicious cakes of every variety were served to the fifty guests who called during the afternoon. The scene was a very attractive one, with many pretty gowns worn by the guests as they gathered on the lawn in the bright sunlight of a perfect October day. Tea was served by Mrs. Philip Watson, Mrs. Joseph T. Curry, Mrs. Joseph Whitaker, Mrs. John Coor, Mrs. Fred Skinner and Miss Ethel Reiber.

'CHAN' TO THE RESCUE

Warner Oland, appearing once more as the canny Chinese sleuth, comes to the aid of Drue Leyton and Raymond Milland, who must solve a two-murder mystery in sixty-five hours to save a life, in the Fox screen drama, "Charlie Chan in London," at the Capitol today and Monday.

Fireman Makes Models Of Downtown Buildings

Firemen are required to know a lot of facts about downtown buildings. They are required to know the location of entrances and exits, holes in the roofs, ventilators, fire escapes, water plugs, stairways, the physical composition of the buildings and a hundred other facts.

All of these facts every fireman writes in a notebook, studies and stamps indelibly in his mind.

Now comes a fireman who goes a step further. He builds minature replicas of downtown buildings and in the building of these models acquires a particularly thorough knowledge of facts concerning the buildings. The models also serve other firemen for demonstration purposes.

The fireman, L. H. Patrick, the department's genius with tools, is building a model of the downtown block bordered by DeSiard street, St. John, Grammont and South Grand streets. At this time the models which have been nearly completed are the Ouachita National Bank building and buildings fronting on St. John street. When completed, the model work will include buildings on the west side of South Grand.

The model of the bank building is about 16 inches tall, scaled proportionately as are all real models. Before Patrick could build and place ventilators on the roof of the model, he had to measure their size on the bank roof and take measures of their respective locations. The location of entrances, exits, water plugs and fire escapes, and other objects of study, similarly, had to be determined exactly.

The work is an outlet for Patrick's hankering to build things with his hands. but before he could begin this work he had to build his tools. From scrap materials, he built an electric motor driven jig saw that operates as smoothly as a twelve-cylinder sedan. He also built a lathe powered by the electric motor and which runs as though it has floating power.

Veneer board is the principal material used in construction of the models.

Prior to beginning his present models, Patrick built smaller models of buildings in the downtown block which is bordered by North Second, DeSiard and North Third streets, and the Illinois Central railroad tracks. These models, given coats of paint and finishing touches, were so attractive that they, in some manner, found their way into Mayor Bernstein's office in the city hall. They are still there.

NOISE SIFTED IN RADIO RECEPTION

Triple Filtering Is One Of Outstanding, Exclusive Improvements

A process of sifting noise from world-wide radio reception and known as "triple filtering" is one of the outstanding exclusive features in the new 1935 Zenith radios, announced H. E. West, sales director of the Monroe Hardware company (wholesale) distributors of Zenith Radio corporation products in this section. Over twenty retail outlets in this trade area will display the new 1935 Zeniths backed by an extensive newspaper advertising campaign to acquaint the public with its new advanced improvements.

"Zenith sponsors the dawn of a new day in radio," said Mr. West Saturday, "and just as progress in the arts and sciences is marked by certain epochal "mile-posts" which point to hitherto undreamed of realms of knowledge, radio has been no exception. Wireless telegraphy startled and thrilled the world when it became radio telephony. Few people could have imagined that it would one day be possible to talk back and forth through the ether with the ease of face to face conversation. When finally continents were spanned by broadcasts, the ultimate possible achievement in this new, revolutionary means of communication seemed to have been reached.

"But today we know that was only the beginning. While standard wave radio was reaching its highest degree of development, a few visionary experimenters were exploring with breathless interest, an entirely new radio realm. They had discovered the possibilities of short wave broadcasting. Foremost among the short wave pioneers was Zenith.

"Today perfected short wave reception is an accomplished fact, 1935 marks the dawn of another epochal new radio era. Zenith presents a complete line of short wave sets with power enough to circle the globe. And in addition to power, Zenith offers 'triple filtering,' an exclusive Zenith feature, which adds that quality to short wave reception which distinguishes mere audibiity from delightful entertainment. That is why Zenith enjoys predominant pubic preference."

The following dealers in Monroe, West Monroe, north Louisiana and Mississippi are now displaying the new 1935 Zeniths:

ADULT CLASSES READY TO START

State Educational Director For ERA Visits In Monroe

At least 12 of the 24 classes for adults authorized for Ouachita parish are expected to be started this week, some of them on Monday, it was announced Saturday, following a visit here by M. S. Robertson, state educational emergency relief administrator for Louisiana. While here Mr. Robertson conferred with T. O. Brown, superintendent of Ouachita parish schools; Mrs. Chrissie Williams, assistant superintendent; E. L. Neville, superintendent of city schools, and A. H. Nanney, district educational emergency relief supervisor.

Of the 12 classes apparently ready to start work Monday, five are white and seven are negroes. When all classes have started work there will be 12 white classes and 12 negro classes.

One thousand teachers for adult work have been allotted to Louisiana by the relief administration. This allotment was divided according to population, with Orleans parish having 80. Fourteen were allotted to the Ouachita parish school system and 10 to the city of Monroe, but school officials of the parish and city agreed to pool the allotment and to make an equal division among the whites and negroes.

Parishes in this district, over which Mr. Nanney has supervision, include Ouachita, Webster, Claiborne, Benville, Lincoln, Jackson, Caldwell, Union, Morehouse, East Carroll, West Carroll, Madison, Tensas, Franklin and Richland.

The present project calls for schools to continue until July 1. Plans for the opening have been under way since August.

Under the plan, the classes must be organized by their respective teachers, who must possess the necessary educational qualifications and who must be certified by the ERA as being eligible for such work.

A range of courses covering almost every subject is offered. An instructor may have an entire class in one subject or may have a group of students studying several subjects. Each class is expected to have not less than 10 nor more than 20 students.

Since some of the parishes have practically no unemployed teachers, it was thought that the allotment for this parish might be raised. Mr. Robertson, however, said he did not believe this was likely. It is possible that unemployed teachers from this parish may be allowed to go into parishes in which there are no unemployed teachers for the purpose of forming classes.

It is expected that names of the teachers who have been certified will be announced this week, so that those desiring to take courses may get in touch with them.

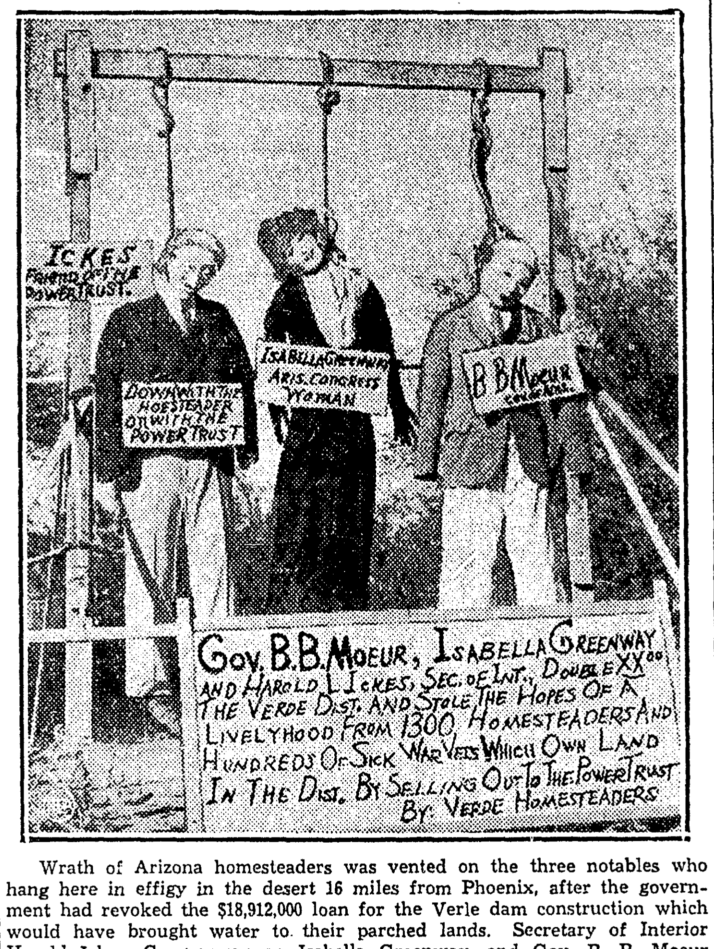
HOMESTEADERS' 'VENGEANCE'



Wrath of Arizona homesteaders was vented on the three notables who hang here in effigy in the desert 16 miles from Phoenix, after the government had revoked the $18,912,000 loan for the Verle dam construction which would have brought water to their parched lands. Secretary of Interior Harold Ickes, Congresswoman Isabella Greenway, and Gov. B. B. Moeur were blamed by the farmers for the decision and the effigies were burned after dangling from the crude scaffold.

TOY COLLECTING PLANS ARE MADE

One General Program Will Be Held Here Before Christmas

One general toy collecting and repairing program will be conducted here this year preceding Christmas, instead of separate programs being conducted by individual welfare agencies, it was decided Saturday at a luncheon meeting of the Monroe council of social agencies.

Miss Lucile Godwin, director of the Monroe recreation department, was elected chairman of the general program. Lieutenant James of the Salvation Army staff here was elected "coach" of the program.

The council elected Miss Bernice Wright to the office of secretary, filling a vacancy caused by the resignation of Rev. M. R. Gremillion, whose regular duties and other obligations would not permit him to remain an active member of the council. Miss Wright will have charge of the next meeting, November 17.

Mrs. W. L. Walker, Sr., who was in charge of Saturday's meeting, presented several negro social workers who spoke on negro welfare work here, including activities at the Mary Goss home. A negro quartet rendered songs.

SCHOOL NEWS

NEVILLE

The Neville Junior Hi-Y met Tuesday night at 7 o'clock at the school. An invitation was held. Those initiated were Bob Hardenburg, Charles Reagan and George Patterson. The new members were read in by the president and the Hi-Y emblem was explained by the vice president.

A business meeting followed the program. Refreshments were served by Pat Reardon and John Terrell. Sackman Marx and Louis Masur will have charge of the next program.

On Thursday night the Neville Senior Hi-Y held its regular meeting. The program was planned by Landon Miles. The first number on the program was a kangaroo court. John Reitzel was accused of murdering his mother-in-law. Richard Sackett was the judge, Charles Paine was the prosecuting attorney and Barry Stubbs was the attorney for the defense. He was found guilty. After a short business session the meeting was adjourned with a prayer.

WISNER

WISNER, La., Oct. 20.—(Special)—The boys' glee club of Wisner high school has been organized with 20 members.

Miss Gladys Roach, a member of the high school faculty and talented musician, recently organized a girls' glee club which is progressing nicely. She will also have charge of the boys' glee club.

Few high schools in this section of the state can boast of a boys and girls glee club.

Mr. and Mrs. T. L. Owen, Mrs. M. D. Peel and Miss Lula Lee Smith attended the Central Louisiana fair in Olla Wednesday where Miss Smith served as one of the judges in home economics exhibit department while Mr. Owen assisted in the judging of the high school and elementary exhibits.

Home economics instructors of Catahoula, Richland and Franklin parishes attended a meeting in the home economics department of the high school here under the direction of Miss Clyde Mobley, state supervisor of the home economics department of the state board of education.

An important stride for the benefit of the school children has been inaugurated in the local school here and that is a fire drill which will be held once each week throughout the year.

Although the grammar school building is a one-story unit, Principal Owen feels that it is just as necessary that the fire drills be put in use in this building as in the high school building which is of two-story constructon.

CHOUDRANT

The junior class of the Choudrant high school met Monday afternoon for the purpose of electing officers for the ensuing year.

C. L. Madden, principal of the high school, acted as chairman during the election.

Working Together For Good

"All things work together for good to them that love good."

Undoubtedly you will observe in the foregoing quotation that a certain liberty is taken with a sacred and time-honored declaration.

Whether the word "God" comes from the word "good," or whether the word "good" comes from the word "God" may be a point for theologians to argue. No matter, the terms have a similar significance; they are interchangeable in the higher sense of their definition.

If we love that which is good, we do not need to worry, for eventually all things will work to bring about the best things in life. There may be certain steps, certain experiences, certain operations that will not be pleasant and that will not seem good. The removal of an ulcerated tooth, for illustration, is not a joyous experience, but the final result is happy. You have knowledge enough to know that. If you did not have knowledge enough to understand the workings of cause and effect in that particular experience you would have to take the removal of your unwholesome tooth on faith, provided, of course, you put the operation in the hands of one in whom you could have faith.

But the illustration is not altogether sound. It begins to break down when you start to argue that the removal of a harmful tooth would work good even to a person who did not love good. Quite so. We have yet to find a physical, a material illustration that could aptly and accurately be carried to its logical conclusion and made to fit throughout the working of a spiritual law.

But if you love good you have nothing to worry about except that you be certain every move you make is governed by your best conscience and your best judgment. Of course, firm adherence to the foregoing principle will at times cause you a certain amount of worry that you may be sure you are moving according to your best conscience and your best judgment.

Most human beings find that we need a certain degree of worry sometimes to make them concentrate on a problem as they should. They do not like to concentrate; they do not like to study. The fact is, that most of us do not like to work. To most of us, inexorable circumstances have required us to do things we do not like to do. But the man who loves the "good" that is in life, who is determined to get the best out of his experience, will battle his own natural inertia as a foe that needs to be conquered if he is to succeed.

It makes no difference how sorry things look to you or how uncomfortable things are for you, all things will work out favorably in the eternal scheme of things if you really love good. For what you love, you will eventually draw to you. By an immutable law, the exercise of traits that are in harmony with right thinking will bring right results.

If we do not love good we should learn to love it. The thing is possible of accomplishment through reading constructive thoughts and thinking constructive thoughts. He is employing his time poorly who reads trashy literature and ponders unwholesome ideas.

We haven't any too much time here as it is to get ourselves equipped for a more desirable existence. So we should get busy just as soon as possible, learning to love good, that all things may begin as soon as possible to work together for our good.

GERMANY'S EXPERIENCE

How stifling bureaucracy can be to economic life is finding illustration now in Germany, where the government recently took over control of foreign trade and with it the greater part of industry.

Twenty-five control boards were established as the plan went into effect September 24. These were to have supervision over all import commodities. According to a special dispatch, "the result has been an almost complete paralysis of business, and virtually all foreign trade has been at a standstill since the plan went into effect."

The causes are described as many, among them being the vast amount of red tape and the bureaucratic machinery that operates the new system. Business men are represented as storming the boards, but without obtaining any satisfactory results. Some of the boards admit their helplessness. Others refuse personal interviews.

The situation brings out sharply some of the evils of government interference in private business.

The hard part is to keep Junior in paths of virtue while boastfully telling him what a hellion you were at his age.

But your income from property doesn't decrease in hard times if you are the tax man.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

TOO LATE

Parents should be models for the rising generation.—President Roosevelt.

Dear F. D. R.—If men today
Should get it in their noodles
To heed your words, which is to say
That parents should be models,
And give their thoughts to constant toil
And serious contemplation
Of cosmic problems, you would spoil
The rising generation.

We parents weary years have spent,
Both in and out of college,
In helping kids, to some extent,
To find the path of knowledge.
But now, whatever we may say,
The youngsters will not heed us;
They're condescending, in a way,
But they don't really need us.

And anyhow, we've done our part,
And when we look about us
We find the rostrum and the mart
Can get along without us.
The days of youth have passed us by—
Moreover, I may mention
That when to set boys right we try
They give us no attention.

Best leave us poor old birds alone,
We're growing old and jaded,
And we have troubles of our own,
Our youthful days have faded.
We've studied in a vanished school,
I say this to my sorrow—
The models, Frank, by which we rule
Won't answer for tomorrow.

IT STAYS PUT

The America's cup must be that immovable object we used to read about when we studied physics.

WAITING FOR A SIGN

PRECAUTION

An Omen Of Evil

By BRUCE CATTON

The fevered post-war world has given many symptoms of mortal sickness. But nothing has been quite as ominous, quite as terrible in its reflection of deep, malignant distress, as this tragic "suicide strike" of the Hungarian coal miners.

Here is something new in the way of strikes. When more than a thousand men are willing to lock themselves in lightless underground corridors and invite death to come to them in one of its most frightening forms, it becomes dreadfully clear that no ordinary capital-labor dispute is involved.

What we get, rather, is a struggle against a whole society, a whole order of living; the kind of struggle that has sent revolutionists out to die on bloody barricades in forlorn hope madness of desperate despair.

Indeed, this reaching for suicide in the mine pits is more appalling than any revolt could be. For men who rise in revolt, even when the odds against them are a thousand to one, still have that outside chance of success.

They still get a savage emotional release from getting to grips with their oppressors. They are in the open air, they die beneath the sky and they take some of their foes to death with them.

But these men had none of these incentives. Their threat simply meant that life on the old terms was insupportable. In the darkness of the depths of the earth, they could invite the specter which miners fear above all things; and by doing so they revealed a frenzy of discontent which is the most frightening thing Europe has shown us since the war.

For a thing of this kind could not happen in a world that was even moderately healthy. It bespeaks a sick society, sick with a complication of ailments that are beyond mere palliatives.

A land in which a thousand men can deliberately plan to commit suicide as a protest against working conditions is a land almost at the point of death.

The peculiar inability of modern society to solve the problems of production, consumption and employment generates dangerous social pressures in even the mst fortunate of countries.

In Europe the case is made infinitely worse by the stupidity of the post-war treaties, widespread denial of liberty and a vicious network of racial, national, and class hatreds.

This miners' strike is ominous proof that the pressure thus generated is reaching the explosive point. To read about it is like hearing the rumble within a volcano. An eruption is near; will Europe be able to survive it?

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—The tidal wave of pathetically eager support for old age pension plans that is sweeping across the country threatens to complicate congress' problem in adopting such program this winter.

Congressional leaders are worried, because they feel that hopes are being aroused which the country, with the best will in the world, cannot fulfill. And the actual proposals which will be the administration program this winter are not yet formulated.

The special presidential committee on economic security, which is to report Dec. 1 on old age, unemployment, health and similar protective laws, will have some preliminary reports soon.

It can't be too soon for certain congressional leaders, who watch a little aghast the promises and proposals of certain unofficial leaders of pension movements and the support that is rolling up behind them.

The cabinet committee, consisting of the secretaries of labor, treasury and agriculture, the attorney-general and FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins, has met once, and a special subcommittee of 19 "brain trusters pro-tem" has met at least once to assist them.

Lewis Warns Aged

Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland, who has been active in old age pension legislation, has warned elderly people to look before they leap into pension associations which make extravagant promises and raise high hopes.

He cites one association which advocates a federal pension of $200 a month to everyone over 60, the money to be raised by a 10 per cent retail sales tax.

That's two billions a month in pensions, Lewis points out, or 24 billions a year, when the entire income of all U. S. people last year was less than 40 billions.

That would mean payment to less than 10 per cent of all the people (that is, to those over 60) more than half the entire national income.

Lewis doesn't consider this either possible or desirable, and he is afraid that old people who pay money to such associations are apt not only to be bitterly disappointed, but to prejudice the cause of really workable old age pensions.

Virtual certainty of some old age pension legislation is well indicated by the fact that 10 years ago men like the Socialists Meyer London and Victor Berger were supporting it.

But in 1929 it was the conservative Hamilton Fish who began to be interested in it. Now it has the definite presidential stamp of approval, and only the questions of "How?" and "When?" remain.

Doubtful Safety

Quite a row was raised during recent cloudbursts here when it was found that the expensive Archives building, now being completed to safeguard priceless public records, shipped 14 inches of water in the basement.

'Tisn't finished yet, reply government architects, who swear it'll be tighter than sister's new shoes when it's finished.

Skeptics point out that it's located very near to the place where "Tiber Creek" once flowed right across Pennsylvania avenue—one of the lowest points of the District.

Many people wish to see the president about many things. That he isn't here now didn't deter one man from prowling near the White House grounds. Suspicious park police picked him up and asked what he wanted with the president.

"It's about my sister," he explained. "She's a gold fish."

Police provided a temporary aquarium for the goldfish's brother.

One of the conservative squawks lately has been that through the Johnson act prohibits defaulting nations from peddling their bonds here, Soviet Russia gaily advertises her 7 per cent gold bonds and pushes them with the sales argument that "U. S. money isn't safe."

That's rubbing it in, the protesters feel. Question being, of course, in whether the present Russian government is actually a defaulter.

No Slacking on This Job

If the report of the Winant committee doesn't give a basis for settlement of the textile strike, it won't be because the committee didn't work hard enough at it.

For seven days it sat in a small room in a dingy building across the street from the state department, from 8 in the morning until—some of the secretaries marked the quitting times: 7:30, 9:15, 12:45, 10:20, etc, etc.

On a rainy Sunday the committee worked nearly 15 hours.

Furuseth Still Fighting

Andrew Furuseth, venerable head of the Seamen's Union, is ill in California, but is expected to recover in time to make a fight before the A. Court in the parish begins on November 19. The charges range from timber cutting on property of others to murder and manslaughter. All of the persons accused of murder and manslaughter are negroes.

EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE BLOODIEST CLAN FIGHT—On July 15, 1544, near Kinlochlochy, was fought the Battle of Blar-na-Leine, the most famous in Highland history. The McDonald-Clanranalds, numbering about 600 men, led by John Moydartach, ambushed the Frasers led by Ranald Gallda, who was accused of having usurped John's estates. The battle lasted several hours, both sides fighting with grim determination. The McDonalds won in the end although they too were practically exterminated. Only four Frasers survived the battle, while the number of the McDonald survivors was five. John Moydartach replaced Ranald as the owner of the McDonald estates. The Fraser clan was saved from extinction by the wives who subsequently all gave birth to boys.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Alley

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—On Park avenue penthouses, the leaves of pampered little trees turn brown. On Hester street, Mada, the old charcoal woman, adds a lining of newspapers to the thin coat she wears.

Autumn has come. In Manhattan, nature isn't prodigal in her heralding of the seasons. The only red and golden leaves in the city are those backgrounding the fall models in department store windows. Smoke and noxious gases produce a grayish deadness on the few trees rooting for life in the island's sour soil.

Central Park trees, sheltered by apartment skyscrapers, remain green longer than their country cousins, and those in smaller parks won't learn until November that the autumn is here. People along East Fifty-Fifth street, where there's a row of Ginkgo trees, are waiting eagerly for the leaves to fall and be burned (illegally) in the gutters. "Reminds me of Indiana," they'll say nostalgically. Or of Oklahoma or Pennsylvania, or wherever they came from.

Outdoing Jack Frost

But even while nature proves laggard, the town takes on vigorous colorings. Brightly costumed huntsmen are seen around the railroad stations. Co-ed cheeks and checks are gay spots in the bleachers at football games. Gypsies in red and yellow shawls are establishing winter quarters on the lower east side. Apple carts ply the side streets; fi' pounds—fi'teen cents. Tons of lush purple grapes overflow the sidewalk markets, and there's bittersweet in the flower shops. Theater marquees blaze with light. Tenement fire escapes cascade with blankets and rugs, put out for a last airing before the windows are hermetically sealed for the winter.

Kids who never have set foot on turf play football in the one-way streets. (City rules make it mostly a kicking and catching game.) Ladies finger autumnal woolens in the shops, and jewels are taken out of storage. Sopranos rehearse arias in the redecorated Metropolitan Opera house, and hand-organ players along the sidewalks quicken their languid summer tempos to keep warm. Gas-logs are aglow in Greenwich Village tea rooms, and in waterfront "jungles," hoboes hover over furtive little fires.

Football and Furs

Mrs. Vandergould has ordered out the town car, and new livery for the servants. On Broadway, blue-jowled gamblers calculate the odds on football games. Suburban roadhouses are boarded up for the season, and raucuous noises come from city night clubs. Vaudeville and band agents tell each other reassuringly that this will be a terrific season; best since 1928. Fur storage warehouses are delivering sables to dowagers, and Mamie O'Rourke is patching her old lapin jacket.

The few places dispensing chile con carne have lighted the fires in their steam tables. And a cabaret has added "Real Mexican tamales" (three little canned ones for $1.50) to its menu. On Sixth and Eighth avenues, youths push traffic-cluttering hand carts from the fur district northward to the garment district. Radiators in office buildings smell of scorching paint. Rodeo cowboys are straggling into town. Proprietors of popcorn stands are wondering why New Yorkers don't cultivate a taste for their product. The sun moves to the south, and smiles but briefly into the city's canyons. A hungry man pulls his thin coat tightly about him and glances apprehensively at the northern sky. Autumn has come to Manhattan.

Revival Meetings Are Scheduled At Wisner

WISNER, La., Oct. 20.—(Special)—A series of revival meetings will begin at the Methodist church here on Tuesday and continue for eight days.

Working Together For Good

"All things work together for good to them that love good."

Undoubtedly you will observe in the foregoing quotation that a certain liberty is taken with a sacred and time-honored declaration.

Whether the word "God" comes from the word "good," or whether the word "good" comes from the word "God" may be a point for theologians to argue. No matter, the terms have a similar significance; they are interchangeable in the higher sense of their definition.

If we love that which is good, we do not need to worry, for eventually all things will work to bring about the best things in life. There may be certain steps, certain experiences, certain operations that will not be pleasant and that will not seem good. The removal of an ulcerated tooth, for illustration, is not a joyous experience, but the final result is happy. You have knowledge enough to know that. If you did not have knowledge enough to understand the workings of cause and effect in that particular experience you would have to take the removal of your unwholesome tooth on faith, provided, of course, you put the operation in the hands of one in whom you could have faith.

But the illustration is not altogether sound. It begins to break down when you start to argue that the removal of a harmful tooth would work good even to a person who did not love good. Quite so. We have yet to find a physical, a material illustration that could aptly and accurately be carried to its logical conclusion and made to fit throughout the working of a spiritual law.

But if you love good you have nothing to worry about except that you be certain every move you make is governed by your best conscience and your best judgment. Of course, firm adherence to the foregoing principle will at times cause you a certain amount of worry that you may be sure you are moving according to your best conscience and your best judgment.

Most human beings find that we need a certain degree of worry sometimes to make them concentrate on a problem as they should. They do not like to concentrate; they do not like to study. The fact is, that most of us do not like to work. To most of us, inexorable circumstances have required us to do things we do not like to do. But the man who loves the "good" that is in life, who is determined to get the best out of his experience, will battle his own natural inertia as a foe that needs to be conquered if he is to succeed.

It makes no difference how sorry things look to you or how uncomfortable things are for you, all things will work out favorably in the eternal scheme of things if you really love good. For what you love, you will eventually draw to you. By an immutable law, the exercise of traits that are in harmony with right thinking will bring right results.

If we do not love good we should learn to love it. The thing is possible of accomplishment through reading constructive thoughts and thinking constructive thoughts. He is employing his time poorly who reads trashy literature and ponders unwholesome ideas.

We haven't any too much time here as it is to get ourselves equipped for a more desirable existence. So we should get busy just as soon as possible, learning to love good, that all things may begin as soon as possible to work together for our good.

GERMANY'S EXPERIENCE

How stifling bureaucracy can be to economic life is finding illustration now in Germany, where the government recently took over control of foreign trade and with it the greater part of industry.

Twenty-five control boards were established as the plan went into effect September 24. These were to have supervision over all import commodities. According to a special dispatch, "the result has been an almost complete paralysis of business, and virtually all foreign trade has been at a standstill since the plan went into effect."

The causes are described as many, among them being the vast amount of red tape and the bureaucratic machinery that operates the new system. Business men are represented as storming the boards, but without obtaining any satisfactory results. Some of the boards admit their helplessness. Others refuse personal interviews.

The situation brings out sharply some of the evils of government interference in private business.

The hard part is to keep Junior in paths of virtue while boastfully telling him what a hellion you were at his age.

But your income from property doesn't decrease in hard times if you are the tax man.

More Truth Than Poetry

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

TOO LATE

Parents should be models for the rising generation.—President Roosevelt.

Dear F. D. R.—If men today
Should get it in their noodles
To heed your words, which is to say
That parents should be models,
And give their thoughts to constant toil
And serious contemplation
Of cosmic problems, you would spoil
The rising generation.

We parents weary years have spent,
Both in and out of college,
In helping kids, to some extent,
To find the path of knowledge.
But now, whatever we may say,
The youngsters will not heed us;
They're condescending, in a way,
But they don't really need us.

And anyhow, we've done our part,
And when we look about us
We find the rostrum and the mart
Can get along without us.
The days of youth have passed us by—
Moreover, I may mention
That when to set boys right we try
They give us no attention.

Best leave us poor old birds alone,
We're growing old and jaded,
And we have troubles of our own,
Our youthful days have faded.
We've studied in a vanished school,
I say this to my sorrow—
The models, Frank, by which we rule
Won't answer for tomorrow.

IT STAYS PUT

The America's cup must be that immovable object we used to read about when we studied physics.

WAITING FOR A SIGN

We'll feel a bit more cheerful if we hear that Santa Claus thinks it will be worthwhile this year to stage a comeback.

PRECAUTION

An Omen Of Evil

By BRUCE CATTON

The fevered post-war world has given many symptoms of mortal sickness. But nothing has been quite as ominous, quite as terrible in its reflection of deep, malignant distress, as this tragic "suicide strike" of the Hungarian coal miners.

Here is something new in the way of strikes. When more than a thousand men are willing to lock themselves in lightless underground corridors and invite death to come to them in one of its most frightening forms, it becomes dreadfully clear that no ordinary capital-labor dispute is involved.

What we get, rather, is a struggle against a whole society, a whole order of living; the kind of struggle that has sent revolutionists out to die on bloody barricades in forlorn hope madness of desperate despair.

Indeed, this reaching for suicide in the mine pits is more appalling than any revolt could be. For men who rise in revolt, even when the odds against them are a thousand to one, still have that outside chance of success.

They still get a savage emotional release from getting to grips with their oppressors. They are in the open air, they die beneath the sky, and they take some of their foes to death with them.

But these men had none of these incentives. Their threat simply meant that life on the old terms was insupportable. In the darkness of the depths of the earth, they could invite the specter which miners fear above all things; and by doing so they revealed a frenzy of discontent which is the most frightening thing Europe has shown us since the war.

For a thing of this kind could not happen in a world that was even moderately healthy. It bespeaks a sick society, sick with a complication of ailments that are beyond mere palliatives.

A land in which a thousand men can deliberately plan to commit suicide as a protest against working conditions is a land almost at the point of death.

The peculiar inability of modern society to solve the problems of production, consumption and employment generates dangerous social pressures in even the mat fortunate of countries.

In Europe the case is made infinitely worse by the stupidity of the postwar treaties, widespread denial of liberty and a vicious network of racial, national, and class hatreds.

This miners' strike is ominous proof that the pressure thus generated is reaching the explosive point. To read about it is like hearing the rumble within a volcano. An eruption is near; will Europe be able to survive it?

New Deal In Washington

WASHINGTON.—The tidal wave of pathetically eager support for old age pension plans that is sweeping across the country threatens to complicate congress' problem in adopting such program this winter.

Congressional leaders are worried, because they feel that hopes are being aroused which the country, with the best will in the world, cannot fulfill. And the actual proposals which will be the administration program this winter are not yet formulated.

The special presidential committee on economic security, which is to report Dec. 1 on old age, unemployment, health and similar protective laws, will have some preliminary reports soon.

It can't be too soon for certain congressional leaders, who watch a little aghast the promises and proposals of certain unofficial leaders of pension movements and the support that is rolling up behind them.

The cabinet committee, consisting of the secretaries of labor, treasury and agriculture, the attorney-general and FERA Administrator Harry Hopkins, has met once, and a special subcommittee of 19 "brain trusters pro-tem" has met at least once to assist them.

Lewis Warns Aged

Representative David J. Lewis of Maryland, who has been active in old age pension legislation, has warned elderly people to look before they leap into pension associations which make extravagant promises and raise high hopes.

He cites one association which advocates a federal pension of $200 a month to everyone over 60, the money to be raised by a 10 per cent retail sales tax.

That's two billions a month in pensions, Lewis points out, or 24 billions a year, when the entire income of all U. S. people last year was less than 40 billions.

That would mean payment to less than 10 per cent of all the people (that is, to those over 60) more than half the entire national income.

Lewis doesn't consider this either possible or desirable, and he is afraid that old people who pay money to such associations are apt not only to be bitterly disappointed, but to prejudice the cause of really workable old age pensions.

Virtual certainty of some old age pension legislation is well indicated by the fact that 10 years ago men like the Socialists Meyer London and Victor Berger were supporting it.

But in 1929 it was the conservative Hamilton Fish who began to be interested in it. Now it has the definite presidential stamp of approval, and only the questions of "How?" and "When?" remain.

Doubtful Safety

Quite a row was raised during recent cloudbursts here when it was found that the expensive Archives building, now being completed to safeguard priceless public records, shipped 14 inches of water in the basement.

'Tisn't finished yet, reply government architects, who swear it'll be tighter than sister's new shoes when it's finished.

Skeptics point out that it's located very near to the place where "Tiber Creek" 'once flowed right across Pennsylvania avenue—one of the lowest points of the District.

Many people wish to see the president about many things. That he isn't here now didn't deter one man from prowling near the White House grounds. Suspicious park police picked him up and asked what he wanted with the president.

"It's about my sister," he explained. "She's a gold fish."

Police provided a temporary aquarium for the goldfish's brother.

One of the conservative squawks lately has been that through the Johnson act prohibits defaulting nations from peddling their bonds here, Soviet Russia gaily advertises her 7 per cent gold bonds and pushes them with the sales argument that "U. S. money isn't safe."

That's rubbing it in, the protesters feel. Question being, of course, in whether the present Russian government is actually a defaulter.

Harry Woodring of Kansas, assistant secretary of war, has a quaint name for his country home near the nation's capital. He calls it "His Lordship's Kindness."

No Slacking on This Job

If the report of the Winant committee doesn't give a basis for settlement of the textile strike, it won't be because the committee didn't work hard enough at it.

For seven days it sat in a small room in a dingy building across the street from the state department, from 8 in the morning until—some of the secretaries marked the quitting times: 7:30, 9:15, 12:45, 10:20, etc, etc.

On a rainy Sunday the committee worked nearly 15 hours.

Furuseth Still Fighting

Andrew Furuseth, venerable head of the Seamen's Union, is ill in California, but is expected to recover in time to make a fight before the A. EXPLANATION OF YESTERDAY'S CARTOON

THE BLOODIEST CLAN FIGHT—On July 15, 1544, near Kinlochlochy, was fought the Battle of Blar-na-Leine, the most famous in Highland history. The McDonald-Clanranalds, numbering about 600 men, led by John Moydartach, ambushed the Frasers led by Ranald Gallda, who was accused of having usurped John's estates. The battle lasted several hours, both sides fighting with grim determination. The McDonalds won in the end although they too were practically exterminated. Only four Frasers survived the battle, while the number of the McDonald survivors was five. John Moydartach replaced Ranald as the owner of the McDonald estates. The Fraser clan was saved from extinction by the wives who subsequently all gave birth to boys.

HAMBONE'S MEDITATIONS

By Alley

Lights of New York

By Paul Harrison

NEW YORK.—On Park avenue penthouses, the leaves of pampered little trees turn brown. On Hester street, Mada, the old charcoal woman, adds a lining of newspapers to the thin coat she wears.

Autumn has come. In Manhattan, nature isn't prodigal in her heralding of the seasons. The only red and golden leaves in the city are those backgrounding the fall models in department store windows. Smoke and noxious gases produce a grayish deadness on the few trees rooting for life in the island's sour soil.

Central Park trees, sheltered by apartment skyscrapers, remain green longer than their country cousins, and those in smaller parks won't learn until November that the autumn is here. People along East Fifty-Fifth street, where there's a row of Ginkgo trees, are waiting eagerly for the leaves to fall and be burned (illegally) in the gutters. "Reminds me of Indiana," they'll say nostalgically. Or of Oklahoma or Pennsylvania, or wherever they came from.

Outdoing Jack Frost

But even while nature proves laggard, the town takes on vigorous colorings. Brightly costumed huntsmen are seen around the railroad stations. Co-ed cheeks and checks are gay spots in the bleachers at football games. Gypsies in red and yellow shawls are establishing winter quarters on the lower east side. Apple carts ply the side streets; fi' pounds—fi'teen cents. Tons of lush purple grapes overflow the sidewalk markets, and there's bittersweet in the flower shops. Theater marquees blaze with light. Tenement fire escapes cascade with blankets and rugs, put out for a last airing before the windows are hermetically sealed for the winter.

Kids who never have set foot on turf play football in the one-way streets. (City rules make it mostly a kicking and catching game.) Ladies finger autumnal woolens in the shops, and jewels are taken out of storage. Sopranos rehearse arias in the redecorated Metropolitan Opera house, and hand-organ players along the sidewalks quicken their languid summer tempos to keep warm. Gas-logs are aglow in Greenwich Village tea rooms, and in waterfront "jungles," hoboes hover over furtive little fires.

Football and Furs

Mrs. Vandergould has ordered out the town car, and new livery for the servants. On Broadway, blue-jowled gamblers calculate the odds on football games. Suburban roadhouses are boarded up for the season, and raucous noises come from city night clubs. Vaudeville and band agents tell each other reassuringly that this will be a terrific season; best since 1928. Fur storage warehouses are delivering sables to dowagers, and Mamie O'Rourke is patching her old lapin jacket.

The few places dispensing chile con carne have lighted the fires in their steam tables. And a cabaret has added "Real Mexican tamales" (three little canned ones for $1.50) to its menu. On Sixth and Eighth avenues, youths push traffic-cluttering hand carts from the fur district northward to the garment district. Radiators in office buildings smell of scorching paint. Rodeo cowboys are straggling into town. Proprietors of popcorn stands are wondering why New Yorkers don't cultivate a taste for their product. The sun moves to the south, and smiles but briefly into the city's canyons. A hungry man pulls his thin coat tightly about him and glances apprehensively at the northern sky. Autumn has come to Manhattan.

Revival Meetings Are Scheduled At Wisner

The young people's meetings will be held each evening before the regular services begin.

TO SET COTTON LIMIT IN 1935

Percentage Of Acreage Reduction Is Not Made Known

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The south's cotton growers were told today by Secretary Wallace that there would be a crop limitation for the staple in 1935.

The announcement, however, did not reveal the percentage of acreage reduction that would be required, nor how much the growers would receive for their curtailment.

Although no decision has been made, present indications are that the planting of about 31,000,000 acres will be the AAA goal for 1935 and that the terms of payment will be similar to those this year.

The fact that an adjustment program for cotton would be continued in 1935 apparently has been taken for granted in the south. About the only disclosure in the announcement today was that producers who did not sign the 1934-35 contract would be given an opportunity to join next year's program.

The statement issued today emphasized that the secretary's announcement was not the formal proclamation required by the cotton act. This must be issued not later than December 1. It will tell the farmer just how many acres he is to retire from cultivation and how much he is to be paid for it.

One reason for the statement asserting there would be a voluntary adjustment program for 1935 was to prevent any misunderstanding between this plan and the Bankhead cotton control act.

Numerous new "wildcat" wells have restored some of the old boomtime prosperity to Wink and other west Texas oil towns.

TRUCK DRIVER IS ROBBED AND TIED

and binding him to a tree. The rope with which he was bound was taken from the truck, being a regular part of its equipment.

Colvin said that the men gruffly ordered him to "shut up" when he asked questions and attempted to remonstrate with them. "Don't be so talkative," they ordered.

His arms encircling a tree and his wrists tightly bound, Colvin twisted them, painfully, until they were finally freed.

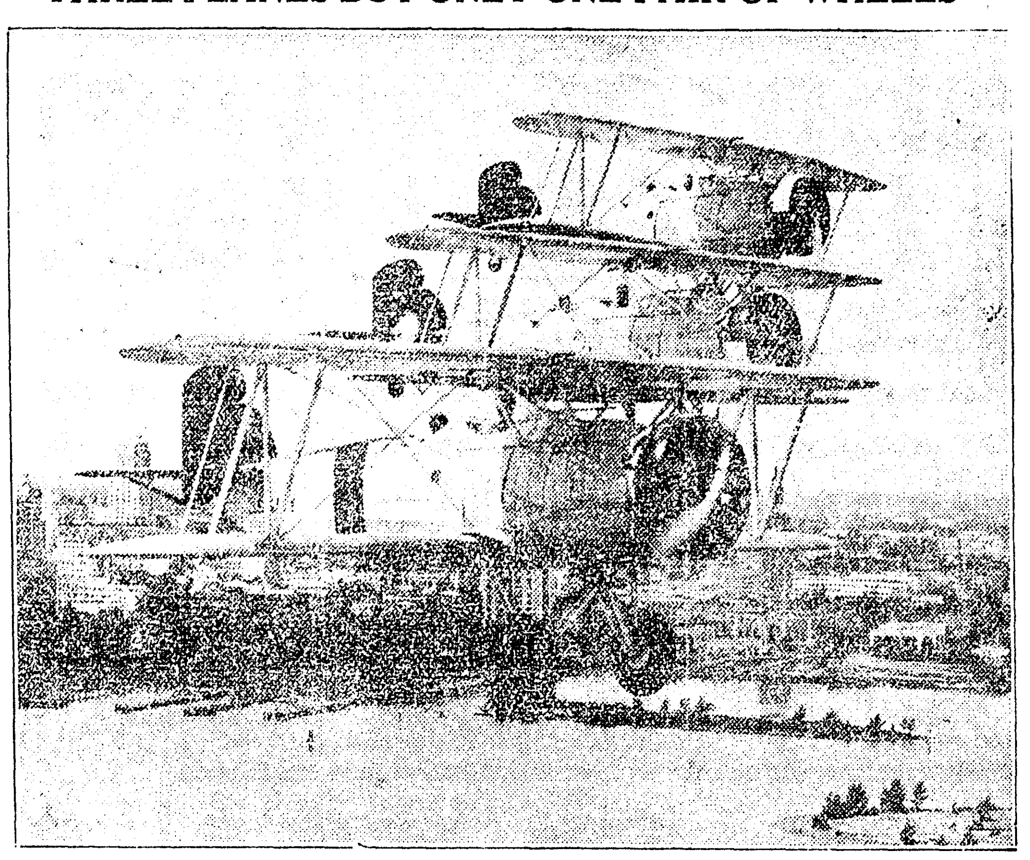
Returning to Monroe about 5:45 p.m., Colvin reported to his employers, and police and sheriff's departments were notified by telephone.

The robber who had concealed himself in the truck probably entered the machine at Alto, but it was possible that he took his place of concealment at Mangham, Colvin reported. This robber was described as having a dark complexion, dark hair and being about six feet. He was about 35 years of age, and wore a brown suede jacket and dark trousers.

The other robber was described as being about 45 years of age and weighing 150 pounds. His hair appeared to be light brown and he was about five feet and seven inches in height. He wore a brown sweater.

Colvin is employed by the Sure Best Baking company, 100 South Fifth street. He resides at 109 L street.

THREE PLANES BUT ONLY ONE PAIR OF WHEELS



The illusion of three planes with only one set of wheels over Miami, Fla., was created by pilots of these ships as they went through some of the fancy figures they will cut for entertainment of the American Legion convention visitors in that city. Clarks

The Baptist Women's Missionary union met at the church on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. D. Stuart, chairman, presided over a well planned "royal service" program, presented to eighteen members present. The lesson topic, "Brothers in Black—Here and There," was of interest on account of the large number of colored people living in this section. The meeting opened with a hymn, "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us," by the union, and was followed with prayer led by Mrs. J. J. Ivy, Mrs. T. E. Skirvin presented the Bible lesson from Luke 15 chapter, second through seventh verse. Mrs. J. D. Stuart gave an interesting talk on, "Missionary Beginning in Africa." "Brothers in Black Over There," was fully discussed by Mrs. S. H. Allbritton, and Mrs. D. Stringer gave, "Brothers Over Here." A negro spiritual, "I Want To Be a Christian," was sung by the union. "Am I My Brother's Keeper," was the subject of a talk by Mrs. G. N. Harrison. After the hymn, "Is Your Life a Channel of Blessings," by the union, Mrs. J. D. Stuart read a letter from the Baptist orphanage of Monroe. The letter stated that the Clarks' union would be placed on a waiting list for a child in the home, to clothe, as the child formerly cared for by the union has been placed in a home. The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. W. O. Case.

Announcement of the birth of Charles Porter Stovall, on Oct. 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Stovall of Lake Charles, were of interest in Clarks, where Mrs. Stovall is remembered as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson of Clarks.

Fire Guts Building At Carolina Penitentiary

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Fire of undetermined origin early today gutted a building at the state penitentiary here and menaced several nearby structures, but was soon brought under control.

The building, one of the units of the original penitentiary plant and known as the old "federal building," contained the automobile repair shops, a carpenter shop and a paint shop. No prisoners were quartered in the structure.

ROOSEVELT TALKS AT WILLIAMSBURG

Receives Honorary Degree At William And Mary College

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Three centuries old Williamsburg welcomed the nation's thirty-second president today, showed him six years of progress in its transformation to colonial originality and heard him urge upon rising generations the attainment of a "broad, liberal, non-specialized education" to fit them for the "change and development" of present day America.

Coming here by special train from Roanoke, where he dedicated a new veterans hospital late yesterday, President Roosevelt was cheered as he motored by scores of Rockefeller-restored 17th and 18th century buildings, and honored as no other Democratic chief executive had been before—when he received an honorary degree of doctor of laws, with Governor George C. Peevy of Virginia, from the 241-year-old college of William and Mary.

The president was thus honored by John Stewart Bryan, Richmond publisher, who was inaugurated today as the nineteenth president of the college where Thomas Jefferson studied law in 1760.

Accepting the degree, Mr. Roosevelt, dressed in college cap and gown, praised the founders of the oldest institution of learning in America for starting courses in law and the science of government and asserted, while the government and private enterprise will continue to utilize the services of specialists, there is a "definite place in American life—an important place—for broad, liberal and non-specialized education."

"Every form of cooperative human endeavor," he said, "cries out for men and women who, in their thinking processes, will know something of the broader aspects of any given problem.

"Government is greatly using men and women of this type—people who have the non-specialized point of view and who at the same time have a general and extraordinarily comprehensive knowledge, not of the details, but of the progress and the purposes which underlie the work of the specialists themselves."

Mrs. Clark Reported To Be Resting Well

Injured when the automobile in which she was riding turned over on the Sterlington road Friday, Mrs. E. M. Clark, wife of a Mer Rouge physician, was reported Saturday night to be "resting as well as can be expected" at St. Francis sanitarium. Mrs. Clark suffered a brain concussion, fracture of the collar bone, lacerations of both knees, gasoline burns and lesser injuries.

Lake Providence

Mrs. David E. Holt entertained six tables of players at bridge on Wednesday afternoon at the rectory. This specially planned courtesy to club members and out-of-town friends was most delightful but yet caused general regret as Mrs. Holt with her husband, the Rev. Holt, will leave November first to reside in Texarkana, and this is the last club meeting that Mrs. Holt will be with the membership. From Tallulah there were Mesdames W. L. Rountree, B. R. Coad, W. M. Murphy, Edward Buckner, Horace Lee, Arthur Bray, Henry Ogbourne and Mason Spencer, and from Vicksburg, Mrs. Dan James and Mrs. Claude Wray, and the club members and additional local guests were Mesdames J. N. Turner, Vail Delony, Herman Schwartz, R. S. Guenard, J. H. Guenard, E. S. Voelker, C. A. Rose, C. R. Evans, W. Y. Bell, H. L. Harkey, J. S. Pittman, E. D. Schneider, Louis Johns and Harry Packard. The first and second club prizes were won by Mrs. R. S. Guenard and Mrs. Evans, and the guest prize went to Mrs. Packard. A most attractive and delectable salad course was served. Mrs. R. K. Boney, Mrs. F. D. Bull and Mrs. H. T. Van Fossen were tea guests.

Mrs. A. P. Surles, Mrs. Omie Warren, Mrs. J. O. Pinkston, Mrs. L. C. Manry of Edison, Ga., and Mrs. F. R. Ogletree of Georgetown, Ga., motored to Vicksburg Tuesday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. Oren Russell.

Mrs. A. K. Alston was the October hostess for the U. D. C. and the officers in attendance were Mrs. C. A. Voelker, president; Mrs. W. B. Benjamin, secretary; Mrs. Frank Byerley, treasurer; Mrs. F. D. Bull, financial secretary; Mrs. J. S. Guenard, assisted by Mrs. T. G. Wood, corresponding secretary, and the members present were Mrs. Ralph Aly, Mrs. Bettie Erwin, Mrs. S. N. King, Mrs. John J. Nelson, Mrs. D. H. Parker and Mrs. F. M. McKee was a visitor. The fortieth anniversary of the organization will be observed at the next meeting of which Mrs. Voelker will be hostess. Mrs. Alston was elected a delegate to the national convention to be held in New York Nov. 21 and Mrs. King was named alternate.

Noted among those attending the state fair in Shreveport and the L. S. U.-Arkansas football game were Mrs. J. C. Bass, Mrs. W. E. Scott, Mrs. R. R. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs J. N. Turner, Mrs. N. K. Delony, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Guenard, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brown and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Richards.

HUEY HAS BIG TIME AT GAME

Is Accompanied To Shreveport By Five Men Who Dog Steps

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long had a great old time today in the northwest Louisiana city that has never cared much for him or his political doctrines and practices.

He forget about politics. He cast aside any contemplation about the ballot wallops Shreveport has handed him and his candidates; how the city's mayor threatened in public mass meeting during the last legislature session to "swing a hampen rope" for some of the senator's controlled law-makers, and how Shreveport citizens pulled down a sign blazoning his name on a new bridge linking the city with the other side of Red river.

He came to the hotbed of his opposition to see Louisiana university's football team beat Arkansas. It did. Pepping up interest in the trip he plans to take next week-end to Nashville, Tenn., with the 1,500 state university cadets for the Louisiana-Vanderbilt game.

Accompanied by five stolid-faced men who dogged his swift moving footsteps, Long strode through the packed lobby of Shreveport's principal hotel during the morning, grinning broadly and waving his hat. It wasn't in acknowledgment of any pleasant greeting from anyone. He just seemed to be pleased.

Later, with Gov. J. M. Futtrell and Lieut.-Gov. Lee Cazort of Arkansas in the stadium backing the Razorbacks, Long was whisked to the state fair grounds stadium with an escort of roaring state highway motorcycle, and a string of cars forming a motorcade that rushed him amazingly through dense mid-day traffic that seemed impenetrable.

At the stadium he took a seat on the field near the players, and kept his eyes on every play, and with the final score 16 to 0 in favor of his Louisiana Tigers, went back to town grinning and thinking more about football than politics.

MODERN ENOCH ARDEN FOUND IN CALIFORNIA

LONG BEACH, Calif., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A modern Enoch Arden arose from the dead today and in a strange reunion found his wife looked "vaguely familiar."

The story begins eight years ago when Albert DeVaul, then a prosperous lumberman of Myrtle Point, Ore., disappeared.

A victim of amnesia, he wandered up and down the coast working in lumber camps or on the waterfront, believing he was a fugitive from police.

His wife divorced him, had the courts decree he was dead, and married H. A. Sheff of Long Beach.

Last night DeVaul reappeared with a cousin who found him working in a mining camp under the name of "Bert King." Man and wife met in an attorney's office.

Mrs. Sheff forced back the tears. "I thought you were dead."

DeVaul replied: "You do look vaguely familiar."

DeVaul was not sure today but that he would show the same self-sacrifice as did Enoch Arden, who walked out of the lives of his wife and her new husband.

SHUSHAN PUTS UP BOND OF $10,000

man for whom the $6,000,000 airport at New Orleans is named, issued a statement asking the public to withhold judgment on him "until I am tried."

"I feel that I have been made the victim of political persecution," Shushan said in his statement.

Shushan testified as a witness in the senatorial investigation of the election of Senator John H. Overton to the United States senate with the aid of the Long forces some time ago.

He testified under oath that he was accustomed to lending large sums of money to members of Senator Long's political machine.

Mr. Shushan testified at the New Orleans hearing that at times he had loaned to Seymour Weiss, treasurer of the Long-Overton campaign, "as much as $10,000 or $12,000 in cash for his personal use," and said that he was a man of means.

TO SET COTTON LIMIT IN 1935

Percentage Of Acreage Reduction Is Not Made Known

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The south's cotton growers were told today by Secretary Wallace that there would be a crop limitation for the staple in 1935.

The announcement, however, did not reveal the percentage of acreage reduction that would be required, nor how much the growers would receive for their curtailment.

Although no decision has been made, present indications are that the planting of about 31,000,000 acres will be the AAA goal for 1935 and that the terms of payment will be similar to those this year.

The fact that an adjustment program for cotton would be continued in 1935 apparently has been taken for granted in the south. About the only disclosure in the announcement today was that producers who did not sign the 1934-35 contract would be given an opportunity to join next year's program.

The statement issued today emphasized that the secretary's announcement was not the formal proclamation required by the cotton act. This must be issued not later than December 1. It will tell the farmer just how many acres he is to retire from cultivation and how much he is to be paid for it.

One reason for the statement asserting there would be a voluntary adjustment program for 1935 was to prevent any misunderstanding between this plan and the Bankhead cotton control act.

and binding him to a tree. The rope with which he was bound was taken from the truck, being a regular part of its equipment.

Colvin said that the men gruffly ordered him to "shut up" when he asked questions and attempted to remonstrate with them. "Don't be so talkative," they ordered.

His arms encircling a tree and his wrists tightly bound, Colvin twisted them, painfully, until they were finally freed.

Returning to Monroe about 5:45 p.m., Colvin reported to his employers, and police and sheriff's departments were notified by telephone.

The robber who had concealed himself in the truck probably entered the machine at Alto, but it was possible that he took his place of concealment at Mangham, Colvin reported. This robber was described as having a dark complexion, dark hair and being about six feet. He was about 35 years of age, and wore a brown suede jacket and dark trousers.

The other robber was described as being about 45 years of age and weighing 150 pounds. His hair appeared to be light brown and he was about five feet and seven inches in height. He wore a brown sweater.

Colvin is employed by the Sure Best Baking company, 100 South Fifth street. He resides at 109 L street.

Clarks

The Baptist Women's Missionary union met at the church on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. J. D. Stuart, chairman, presided over a well planned "royal service" program, presented to eighteen members present. The lesson topic, "Brothers in Black—Here and There," was of interest on account of the large number of colored people living in this section. The meeting opened with a hymn, "Savior, Like a Shepherd Lead Us," by the union, and was followed with prayer led by Mrs. J. J. Ivy, Mrs. T. E. Skirvin presented the Bible lesson from Luke 15 chapter, second through seventh verse. Mrs. J. D. Stuart gave an interesting talk on, "Missionary Beginning in Africa." "Brothers in Black Over There," was fully discussed by Mrs. S. H. Allbritton, and Mrs. D. Stringer gave, "Brothers Over Here." A negro spiritual, "I Want To Be a Christian," was sung by the union. "Am I My Brother's Keeper," was the subject of a talk by Mrs. G. N. Harrison. After the hymn, "Is Your Life a Channel of Blessings," by the union, Mrs. J. D. Stuart read a letter from the Baptist orphanage of Monroe. The letter stated that the Clarks' union would be placed on a waiting list for a child in the home, to clothe, as the child formerly cared for by the union has been placed in a home. The meeting was closed with a prayer by Mrs. W. O. Case.

Announcement of the birth of Charles Porter Stovall, on Oct. 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. V. Stovall of Lake Charles, were of interest in Clarks, where Mrs. Stovall is remembered as the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wilson of Clarks.

Fire Guts Building At Carolina Penitentiary

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Fire of undetermined origin early today gutted a building at the state penitentiary here and menaced several nearby structures, but was soon brought under control.

The building, one of the units of the original penitentiary plant and known as the old "federal building," contained the automobile repair shops, a carpenter shop and a paint shop. No prisoners were quartered in the structure.

ROOSEVELT TALKS AT WILLIAMSBURG

Receives Honorary Degree At William And Mary College

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Three centuries old Williamsburg welcomed the nation's thirty-second president today, showed him six years of progress in its transformation to colonial originality and heard him urge upon rising generations the attainment of a "broad, liberal, non-specialized education" to fit them for the "change and development" of present day America.

Coming here by special train from Roanoke, where he dedicated a new veterans hospital late yesterday, President Roosevelt was cheered as he motored by scores of Rockefeller-restored 17th and 18th century buildings, and honored as no other Democratic chief executive had been before—when he received an honorary degree of doctor of laws, with Governor George C. Peevy of Virginia, from the 241-year-old college of William and Mary.

The president was thus honored by John Stewart Bryan, Richmond publisher, who was inaugurated today as the nineteenth president of the college where Thomas Jefferson studied law in 1760.

Accepting the degree, Mr. Roosevelt, dressed in college cap and gown, praised the founders of the oldest institution of learning in America for starting courses in law and the science of government and asserted, while the government and private enterprise will continue to utilize the services of specialists, there is a "definite place in American life—an important place—for broad, liberal and non-specialized education."

"Every form of cooperative human endeavor," he said, "cries out for men and women who, in their thinking processes, will know something of the broader aspects of any given problem.

"Government is greatly using men and women of this type—people who have the non-specialized point of view and who at the same time have a general and extraordinarily comprehensive knowledge, not of the details, but of the progress and the purposes which underlie the work of the specialists themselves."

Lake Providence

Mrs. David E. Holt entertained six tables of players at bridge on Wednesday afternoon at the rectory. This specially planned courtesy to club members and out-of-town friends was most delightful but yet caused general regret as Mrs. Holt with her husband, the Rev. Holt, will leave November first to reside in Texarkana, and this is the last club meeting that Mrs. Holt will be with the membership. From Tallulah there were Mesdames W. L. Rountree, B. R. Coad, W. M. Murphy, Edward Buckner, Horace Lee, Arthur Bray, Henry Ogbourne and Mason Spencer, and from Vicksburg, Mrs. Dan James and Mrs. Claude Wray, and the club members and additional local guests were Mesdames J. N. Turner, Vail Delony, Herman Schwartz, R. S. Guenard, J. H. Guenard, E. S. Voelker, C. A. Rose, C. R. Evans, W. Y. Bell, H. L. Harkey, J. S. Pittman, E. D. Schneider, Louis Johns and Harry Packard. The first and second club prizes were won by Mrs. R. S. Guenard and Mrs. Evans, and the guest prize went to Mrs. Packard. A most attractive and delectable salad course was served. Mrs. R. K. Boney, Mrs. F. D. Bull and Mrs. H. T. Van Fossen were tea guests.

Mrs. A. P. Surles, Mrs. Omie Warren, Mrs. J. O. Pinkston, Mrs. L. C. Manry of Edison, Ga., and Mrs. F. R. Ogletree of Georgetown, Ga., motored to Vicksburg Tuesday to spend the day with Mr. and Mrs. Oren Russell.

Mrs. A. K. Alston was the October hostess for the U. D. C. and the officers in attendance were Mrs. C. A. Voelker, president; Mrs. W. B. Benjamin, secretary; Mrs. Frank Byerley, treasurer; Mrs. F. D. Bull, financial secretary; Mrs. J. S. Guenard, assisted by Mrs. T. G. Wood, corresponding secretary, and the members present were Mrs. Ralph Aly, Mrs. Bettie Erwin, Mrs. S. N. King, Mrs. John J. Nelson, Mrs. D. H. Parker and Mrs. F. M. McKee was a visitor. The fortieth anniversary of the organization will be observed at the next meeting of which Mrs. Voelker will be hostess. Mrs. Alston was elected a delegate to the national convention to be held in New York Nov. 21 and Mrs. King was named alternate.

Noted among those attending the state fair in Shreveport and the L. S. U.-Arkansas football game were Mrs. J. C. Bass, Mrs. W. E. Scott, Mrs. R. R. Higgins, Mr. and Mrs J. N. Turner, Mrs. N. K. Delony, Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Guenard, Mr. and Mrs. Mark Brown and Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Richards.

HUEY HAS BIG TIME AT GAME

Is Accompanied To Shreveport By Five Men Who Dog Steps

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Senator Huey P. Long had a great old time today in the northwest Louisiana city that has never cared much for him or his political doctrines and practices.

He forget about politics. He cast aside any contemplation about the ballot wallops Shreveport has handed him and his candidates; how the city's mayor threatened in public mass meeting during the last legislature session to "swing a hampen rope" for some of the senator's controlled law-makers, and how Shreveport citizens pulled down a sign blazoning his name on a new bridge linking the city with the other side of Red river.

He came to the hotbed of his opposition to see Louisiana university's football team beat Arkansas. It did. Pepping up interest in the trip he plans to take next week-end to Nashville, Tenn., with the 1,500 state university cadets for the Louisiana-Vanderbilt game.

Accompanied by five stolid-faced men who dogged his swift moving footsteps, Long strode through the packed lobby of Shreveport's principal hotel during the morning, grinning broadly and waving his hat. It wasn't in acknowledgment of any pleasant greeting from anyone. He just seemed to be pleased.

Later, with Gov. J. M. Futtrell and Lieut.-Gov. Lee Cazort of Arkansas in the stadium backing the Razorbacks, Long was whisked to the state fair grounds stadium with an escort of roaring state highway motorcycle, and a string of cars forming a motorcade that rushed him amazingly through dense mid-day traffic that seemed impenetrable.

At the stadium he took a seat on the field near the players, and kept his eyes on every play, and with the final score 16 to 0 in favor of his Louisiana Tigers, went back to town grinning and thinking more about football than politics.

MODERN ENOCH ARDEN FOUND IN CALIFORNIA

LONG BEACH, Calif., Oct. 20.—(AP)—A modern Enoch Arden arose from the dead today and in a strange reunion found his wife looked "vaguely familiar."

The story begins eight years ago when Albert DeVaul, then a prosperous lumberman of Myrtle Point, Ore., disappeared.

A victim of amnesia, he wandered up and down the coast working in lumber camps or on the waterfront, believing he was a fugitive from police.

His wife divorced him, had the courts decree he was dead, and married H. A. Sheff of Long Beach.

Last night DeVaul reappeared with a cousin who found him working in a mining camp under the name of "Bert King." Man and wife met in an attorney's office.

Mrs. Sheff forced back the tears. "I thought you were dead."

DeVaul replied: "You do look vaguely familiar."

DeVaul was not sure today but that he would show the same self-sacrifice as did Enoch Arden, who walked out of the lives of his wife and her new husband.

SHUSHAN PUTS UP BOND OF $10,000

man for whom the $6,000,000 airport at New Orleans is named, issued a statement asking the public to withhold judgment on him "until I am tried."

"I feel that I have been made the victim of political persecution," Shushan said in his statement.

Shushan testified as a witness in the senatorial investigation of the election of Senator John H. Overton to the United States senate with the aid of the Long forces some time ago.

He testified under oath that he was accustomed to lending large sums of money to members of Senator Long's political machine.

Mr. Shushan testified at the New Orleans hearing that at times he had loaned to Seymour Weiss, treasurer of the Long-Overton campaign, "as much as $10,000 or $12,000 in cash for his personal use," and said that he was a man of means.

MOLLISONS LEAD IN AIR RACE TO AUSTRALIAN CITY

Members of the British community and a huge crowd of Arabs cheered the Mollisons on their arrival at Baghdad and remained to bid them farewell as they took off for India.

It was calculated they were 450 to 500 miles ahead of the two Dutchmen, Parmentier and Moll, in addition to the time it will take the Dutch team to check in at Baghdad and make ready their plane for the next stage of the flight. The Dutchmen were reported maintaining a steady speed of 190 miles an hour.

The Mollisons expressed confidence they would be able to reach Allahabad tomorrow without difficulty. Mollison said the flight from Mildenhall to Baghdad presented many difficulties.

"We were obliged to fly at a great height to avoid bad weather, but the machine behaved perfectly," he said. "Once we were alarmed about our fuel supply, but investigation showed we had plenty to reach Baghdad."

Mrs. Mollison insisted on having a hot bath before meeting members of the Iraq cabinet.

The number unreported was reduced to a single entry when word was received that Flight Lieutenant G. Shaw, British, had been forced to earth in his Moth plane at San Feliu de Guixols, Spain.

Piloting a short range ship by himself, Shaw apparently had lost his way heading for Marseille. He planned to continue to the French seaport as soon as he could clear his plane through Spanish customs.

In the meantime, Flying Officer C. G. Davies and Lieutenant Commander C. M. Hill, British, were flying from Rome toward Athens, leaving the former place about midnight (G. M. T.). A few minutes behind was Lieutenant M. Hansen of Denmark, who also pointed his plane for Athens.

From Baghdad on, especially crossing India, they faced new dangers. Among them was the risk of striking huge vultures, kites and other birds which are found in flight at all altitudes up to 10,000 feet. Collision with these birds, the fliers have been warned, might involve damage sufficient to cause serious accident.

The city of the fabled flying carpet is the first control point in the Macrobertson international air race from London to Melbourne, the world's greatest race. Melbourne is 12,000 miles from here. The fliers are trying to break the record of 6 days, 17 hours and 56 minutes established exactly one year ago today.

Brownlee Completes 5 Hours Of Solo Flying

F. C. Brownlee, young aviation enthusiast of West Monroe, who has for some years been interested in model building and the study of aeronautics, Saturday completed five hours of solo flying at Smoot field. Brownlee hopes to complete 25 hours of solo flying and secure his amateur pilot's license in 30 days.

That Brownlee's boyhood interest in aeronautics is an advantage at this time is shown by the fact that he first soloed after receiving only seven hours instruction. His instructor is Tullis C. Thomas, transport pilot who recently came here from Little Rock and who is now located at Smoot field.

and many young Japanese warriors would gladly give their lives to show what they could in the way of bombing and gassing New York City.

It might be worthwhile for this government to think seriously about the possibilities of air attack.

If anybody comes against us with better airships than we have, finding us unsuspecting and unprepared, all our money, including our eight thousand million dollar lump of gold at Washington, won't do us any good.

THE WORLD SINCE time's beginning has seen all kinds of races, on foot, on elephants, dromedaries, Roman chariot races, trotting, running races with horses, relay races, the great solitary race from Marathon, Paul Revere's ride, a million others. The greatest race in all history comes now, with twenty airplanes racing eleven thousand miles, from England to Australia.

$75,000 will be paid in prizes.

The race is to establish commercial supremacy in the air.

The original great race, against the power of ocean, wind, cold and darkness, was won by Lindbergh, with a prize of $25,000, offered by a Frenchman, M. Orteig.

$75,000 would not tempt Lindbergh now, but being young and ambitious, it must be a great disappointment that conditions prevent his entering this greatest of races, nearly four times at long as his own race. Perhaps he will challenge the winner to a race around the world.

A PARAGRAPH IN this column about families in cheap, second-hand cars, bound for California from all over the United States to take advantage of the Upton Sinclair "free money no poverty" plan was not based on imagination.

Russell Bevans, California's motor vehicle registrar, announces an incoming flood of automobile travelers. In Los Angeles county alone 150,000 are said to have registered illegally.

California's attorney-general starts suit to keep 24,136 of the new arrivals from voting. They have registered from "vacant lots and vacant store buildings, and under the names of dead men."

The on-rush of heavily loaded $25 automobiles bringing believers in Upton Sinclair and his "end poverty in California" plan is hard on California's regular residents. California jobs are already scarce.

IN BELGRADE, crowds sat all night on the cold damp streets, "silently weeping" waiting for King Alexander's body to pass.

The king, on a gun carriage, was pulled through the streets by sixteen men of his bodyguard.

That seemed to the crowd more dignified than being drawn by horses or in a modern automobile.

To have your body drawn by man power proves kingly authority, even in death.

Various royalties were in the procession that walked on foot for three hours, with many precautions taken to prevent other royal murders.

Doors opening on the street were all locked that it might be impossible for a murderer to escape through a house. It was forbidden to open any windows but that rule was suspended.

The new king, eleven-years-old, with black hair, dark brown eyes, passed, sitting between two women thickly veiled, the crowd called "zivio," meaning "long life."

The boy might live longer and more happily, had destiny not placed him on an uncertain throne.

IN THE AGES ahead, when kings' funerals and air races will have lost importance, men will still talk about an item of scientific news, that comes from the Harvard Medical school.

It is proved that as long as the blood circulates in the cortex, dark outer covering of the brain, the cold gray brain substance, under the cortex, sends out electrical charges.

Listening scientists could actually hear the regular clicking of this "brain dynamo," the power of the current multiplied by about one million electrical impulses were made to write their own record on a photographic apparatus, and this was shown on the screen.

THE BIBLICAL WRITER who declared, "I will praise the Lord, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made" little knew how "fearfully and wonderfully made" he really was.

What is the brain, with its dynamo buried deep in the gray matter that we all carry around with us?

Is it a receiving set taking in messages from some cosmic center, located far off in the universe? Do we think for ourselves or merely receive thought, as a radio operator receives his messages?

Among early Greeks the wisest men thought the brain was merely a cold, damp substance, useful only in supplying moisture to eyes and nose. The heart was supposed to be the center of feeling, and of thought. Earlier races thought the emotions were located in the intestinal regions. "His bowels yearned for him."

Some, materialistic, hearing about the "brain dynamo," will conclude "man is a mere machine and this proves it. He is an automatic arrangement of chemical reactions."

Some savage, standing in front of a radio receiving set, might conclude that everything happened automatically inside the radio set. It would be hard to convince him that the sound wave came from thinking far away.

LESS INTERESTING than the 11,000 mile air race, but important to the world, is a fight that is starting between "gold countries" and countries that have adopted a sort of "hope, faith and charity" money made of paper and optimism.

Countries that have left gold will inevitably turn to silver, for man, money-loving creature, must have something that seems to him "real" money.

Paper with nothing back of it will not do.

The so-called Anglo-Saxon part of the world's population, Americans, Canadians, English, represent the paper and silver side, whereas the big "Latin races" France, and Italy, represent gold.

Six gold nations are meeting in Brussels to see what can be done about maintaining their markets and financial position. The gold-Latin gentlemen are doing the worrying, for theirs is the "dear money," and the world prefers to buy with cheap money, such as Great Britain and the United States have adopted.

It will be an interesting money fight. The French and Italians are resourceful; they even hope to draw the British over to their side and "leave the United States out on a limb."

However, a good, strong limb made of solid silver, plus United States natural wealth, might not be so bad.

OLD MEN SET UP THEIR OWN SHOP

but he has among the list a few articles that were made by him many years ago, putting them there to show their lasting qualities. Using only a hammer, files and saws, Mr. Evans has made a large claw hammer, small claw hammer, hatchet, small ball-peen hammer, howell, such as used in cleaning dough from a bread bowl or other round-bottomed vessel, froe, drawing knife, saw-setter and various kinds of fish gigs. All of these articles were made from junk metal and wood. Metal is obtained usually from junked automobiles, such parts as the springs, axles and gasoline tanks being used.

One of the old articles on display is a brush made entirely of home-produced material. The handle is of walnut, which Mr. Evans cut from a tree, and the bristles were taken from the necks of hogs which Mr. Evans had raised and butchered prior to the time he made the brush. In those days he also used hog bristles for making strings. The brush was made 30 years ago and is as good now as at the time it was made.

Another article on the board which attracted attention was a dipper made from an ERA beef can.

Another of the workers among the "non-workables" is James Welch, who does various kinds of work about the shop, but who takes especial pride in an advertising novelty he has invented. The novelty carries four advertisements on its various sides and is so arranged that when a certain part of it is raised it lifts out a match. It is also equipped with a place for striking matches and with a cup in which to place the burned matches. Mr. Welch says he has applied for a patent and hopes to make some money from this invention.

Some of the more useful work at the shop consists in making and repairing chairs and making stools and baskets. Necessary parts for the chairs to be repaired are made in the shop.

An interesting piece of work under way at the time the shop was visited was a doll bed being made from spools.

Workers at the place are greatly interested in their tasks. They have been promised some good equipment, including lathes and emery wells and when this is installed they expect to turn out good work at a rapid rate.

The men are paid through ERA funds, as are other relief workers.

They expect that within a short time there will be a demand for articles they manufacture and that the shop may pay its own way.

As Christmas nears the men will turn their attention to making toys. Some of these may be sold, but most of them probably will be given to needy children. If the new equipment arrives in time the men should be able to turn out enough toys to supply a large portion of the children whom Santa Claus might otherwise overlook.

King Alexander Left Ten Million Dollars

BELGRADE, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The assassinated King Alexander left a fortune valued at nearly $10,000,000, it was disclosed today.

The fortune consists of cash deposits in French, Swiss and British banks and an extensive property holding in Yugoslavia which increased enormously in volume in recent years.

Since King Alexander received more than $1,000,000 a year for his salary and royal expenses—about fourteen times the salary received by President Roosevelt—he was able each month to put aside $60,000 in Swiss francs.

The late king left the bulk of his fortune to his widow, the dowager Queen Marie, and his son, King Peter II, with lesser amounts to his sister, Princess Helena, and other relatives.

the flight from London, but went straight through to Athens.

Members of the British community and a huge crowd of Arabs cheered the Mollisons on their arrival at Baghdad and remained to bid them farewell as they took off for India.

It was calculated they were 450 to 500 miles ahead of the two Dutchmen, Parmentier and Moll, in addition to the time it will take the Dutch team to check in at Baghdad and make ready their plane for the next stage of the flight. The Dutchmen were reported maintaining a steady speed of 190 miles an hour.

The Mollisons expressed confidence they would be able to reach Allahabad tomorrow without difficulty. Mollison said the flight from Mildenhall to Baghdad presented many difficulties.

"We were obliged to fly at a great height to avoid bad weather, but the machine behaved perfectly," he said. "Once we were alarmed about our fuel supply, but investigation showed we had plenty to reach Baghdad."

Mrs. Mollison insisted on having a hot bath before meeting members of the Iraq cabinet.

The number unreported was reduced to a single entry when word was received that Flight Lieutenant G. Shaw, British, had been forced to earth in his Moth plane at San Feliu de Guixols, Spain.

Piloting a short range ship by himself, Shaw apparently had lost his way heading for Marseille. He planned to continue to the French seaport as soon as he could clear his plane through Spanish customs.

In the meantime, Flying Officer C. G. Davies and Lieutenant Commander C. M. Hill, British, were flying from Rome toward Athens, leaving the former place about midnight (G. M. T.). A few minutes behind was Lieutenant M. Hansen of Denmark, who also pointed his plane for Athens.

From Baghdad on, especially crossing India, they faced new dangers. Among them was the risk of striking huge vultures, kites and other birds which are found in flight at all altitudes up to 10,000 feet. Collision with these birds, the fliers have been warned, might involve damage sufficient to cause serious accident.

The city of the fabled flying carpet is the first control point in the Macrobertson international air race from London to Melbourne, the world's greatest race. Melbourne is 12,000 miles from here. The fliers are trying to break the record of 6 days, 17 hours and 56 minutes established exactly one year ago today.

Charles Chapman Arrives At Camden To Stand Trial

CAMDEN, Ark., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Charles Chapman, once a highway contractor who estimated his wealth at more than a million dollars, was returned here from Gulfport, Miss., today by Sheriff Arthur W. Ellis to stand trial on bank robbery charges.

Ellis arrived here shortly before noon with his prisoner, who was placed in a cell in the Ouachita county jail to await trial on a charge of robbing the Citizens Bank and Trust company of $25,000 on June 22 of last year.

Brownlee Completes 5 Hours Of Solo Flying

F. C. Brownlee, young aviation enthusiast of West Monroe, who has for some years been interested in model building and the study of aeronautics, Saturday completed five hours of solo flying at Smoot field. Brownlee hopes to complete 25 hours of solo flying and secure his amateur pilot's license in 30 days.

That Brownlee's boyhood interest in aeronautics is an advantage at this time is shown by the fact that he first soloed after receiving only seven hours instruction. His instructor is Tullis C. Thomas, transport pilot who recently came here from Little Rock and who is now located at Smoot field.

GANG OF COTTON THIEVES BROKEN

Mississippi Officers Kill One Man And Wound Another

CHARLESTON, Miss., Oct. 20.--(AP)—An alleged gang of delta cotton thieves was believed to have been broken up early today when Tallahatchie county officers trapped five men, two of them negroes, while they assertedly were engaged in looting a warehouse south of here, killing one and critically wounding another. The two negroes escaped.

Tom Newton, white farmer and Tallahatchie county constable, was shot and instantly killed by the officers' fire. Dock Wright, another white man, was shot through the head and was reported near death in a Charleston hospital tonight.

The third white man, Roy Lance, and the two negroes fled as the officers opened fire. Lance, however, surrendered later in the day.

Officers who conducted the raid said the identity of the negroes is known and predicted their early capture.

The gang allegedly was stealing cotton from a warehouse on the plantation of the Union-Central Life Insurance company managed by R. T. Wade. The manager said he heard a truck drive up to the warehouse and immediately came to Charleston and summoned the assistance of county authorities, who quickly formed a raiding party.

The officers said they surprised the alleged cotton thieves and when they refused to heed their command to throw up their hands they fired, killing Newton and wounding Wright.

County authorities said they had received numerous reports during the past two weeks of cotton stealing from plantations in this section, and expressed belief that the shootings today will break up the practice.

CWA rat-killing expeditions slew 7,500,000 of the vermin last year.

COMING TO THE PARAMOUNT

Marlene Dietrich and John Lodge in one of the exciting scenes of Josef von Sternberg's rousing drama, "The Scarlet Empress," which comes Tuesday to the Paramount theater. Sam Jaffe plays the exacting role of the half-crazed Grand Duke Peter, husband of Catherine the Great, in this picture.

AT LOCAL THEATERS

AT THE PARAMOUNT—Mae West, who admits that she is at her best when she is acting a woman at her newest and gayest contribution to the worst, is at her very best in her screen, "Belle of the Nineties," which opened at the Paramount theater yesterday.

As the queen of hearts and diamonds who takes Dixie by storm and charm, Miss West returns to the period of the Gay and Naughty Nineties in a lavishly dressed, handsomely mounted and thoroughly engrossing entertainment.

Surrounded by three new "tall, dark and handsomes," Roger Pryor, John Mack Brown and John Miljan, with Duke Ellington and his orchestra, Katherine DeMille, Libby Taylor, Stuart Holmes and Warren Hymer in the supporting cast, Miss West acts the part of a St. Louis burlesque queen who goes down to New Orleans to win the hearts of the southern cavaliers.

In New Orleans she encounters Miljan, who as the proprietor of the south's most famous night club, lays siege to her heart and her diamonds. John Mack Brown enters into the picture as the unsophisticated youth who pours adulation on Miss West and gems at her feet.

As the plot moves forward at a breathless pace, Miss West falls in love with Roger Pryor, a current fistic hero, and, later, because she believes that he has double-crossed her, causes him to lose his most important fight. But it all ends happily, with Miljan, the true villain, getting his just deserts and Pryor and Miss West happily reunited.

Against a background of music provided by Duke Ellington and his orchestra, Miss West sings several new songs written for her by Arthur Johnston and Sam Coslow, the team which composed many of Bing Crosby's hit tunes.

Roger Pryor, who has been seen in few Hollywood roles before, emerges in this picture with distinction, as does Miss DeMille, also a newcomer to the screen. The balance of the roles are excellently cast under the able direction of Leo McCarey.

AT THE CAPITOL—Judged by preview audiences on the coast as by far the most entertaining of the entire series of "Chan" thrillers, "Charlie Chan in London" will make its appearance on the screen of the Capitol theater today. Warner Oland, whose name has become synonymous with the character of Charlie throughout the series, again portrays the role of the bland Chinese detective. Advance reports indicate that Oland's portrayal in this film is his most notable to date.

In his latest adventure, Charlie Chan invades Sherlock Holmes' realm, and journeys to London to solve the most amazing mystery of his remarkable career in criminology.

A man is doomed to hang for murder. His sister believes him innocent. She pleads with Chan to take the case and try to find the real murderer and exonerate her brother. With only 65 hours remaining before the innocent man must meet his death, Chan gets to work. He finds he is working against time and a murderer who has the cunning of a fox. With only eight hours remaining in which to solve the mystery, Chan lays a clever trap, and snares his human fox without the aid of hounds or horse.

Drue Leyton, who will be recalled as the feminine lead in "Charlie Chan's Courage," again portrays the role of the romantic lead opposite Ray Milland. Others in the cast assembled for this production are Mona Barrie, Alan Mowbray, Murray Kinnell, Douglas Walton, Walter Johnson, E. E. Clive, George Barraud, Madge Bellamy, David Torrence, John Rogers, Paul England, Elsa Buchanan and Perry Ivins.

John Stone produced the film, which was directed by Eugene Forde from the original screen play by Philip MacDonald.

AT THE STRAND, West Monroe—"Hollywood is full of beautiful girls who have failed to crash the movies and are now waiting on tables in cafeterias and lunch rooms."

That's one sentence in the average letter written to the folks back home by the tourists to Southern California. But don't you believe it!

The man who ought to know is Earl Carroll, the famous producer who selects the "most beautiful girls in the world" for his yearly "Vanities." He came to Hollywood with 11 of his beauties to assist in the Paramount production of his "Murder at the Vanities," now showing at the Strand theater, West Monroe.

And Carroll, the outstanding authority on feminine pulchritude, says it isn't so—after visiting all of Hollywood's eating houses from the corner cafeteria up to the Brown Derby. "The really lovely girls," he says, "if they are working at all, are working in motion pictures."

REAL QUALITY IN EL CUBO CIGARS

Despite General Cigar Sales Decrease, El Cubo Shows Gain

"There is no compromise with quality in the manufacture of the new, mild El Cubo Cigars."

This emphatic statement from Phil D. Mayer & Sons, Ltd., makers of El Cubos, refers not only to the tobaccos from which El Cubos are made but also to every step in the manufacturing methods. In spite of a general decrease in cigar sales, El Cubos have shown an increase of over 33 1-3 per cent since a delightfully pleasing mildness has been added to the mellowness and rich distinctive Havana aroma for which El Cubos have always been famous. There must be a reason, and there is, claim the manufacturers of this fine cigar.

First—El Cubos are made only from Havana-domestic tobaccos of the highest quality. No seconds or "scrap" is ever used.

Second—Stocks are always aged two and three years, and in addition scientifically double cured for an extra period, by a new process, to assure mellow mildness.

Third—You will never find short filler or "scrap" in an El Cubo cigar. Only the finest long-filled Havana-domestic tobaccos are used. Every El Cubo is firm and full and will not crumble in the mouth while smoking.

Fourth—Long filler El Cubos, like all expensive cigars, are hand made, therefore, every one you smoke draws freely, burns evenly, stays lit, and is always cool and mild. El Cubo ash holds well and no "cigaretty" scrap falls and burns your clothing.

Fifth—Good to the last draw. Smoke the new El Cubo down to the last inch if you want to. The last draw will be as pleasingly mild and fragrant as the first puff.

But the most astonishing thing of all about El Cubos is that you can get them everywhere for 5c.

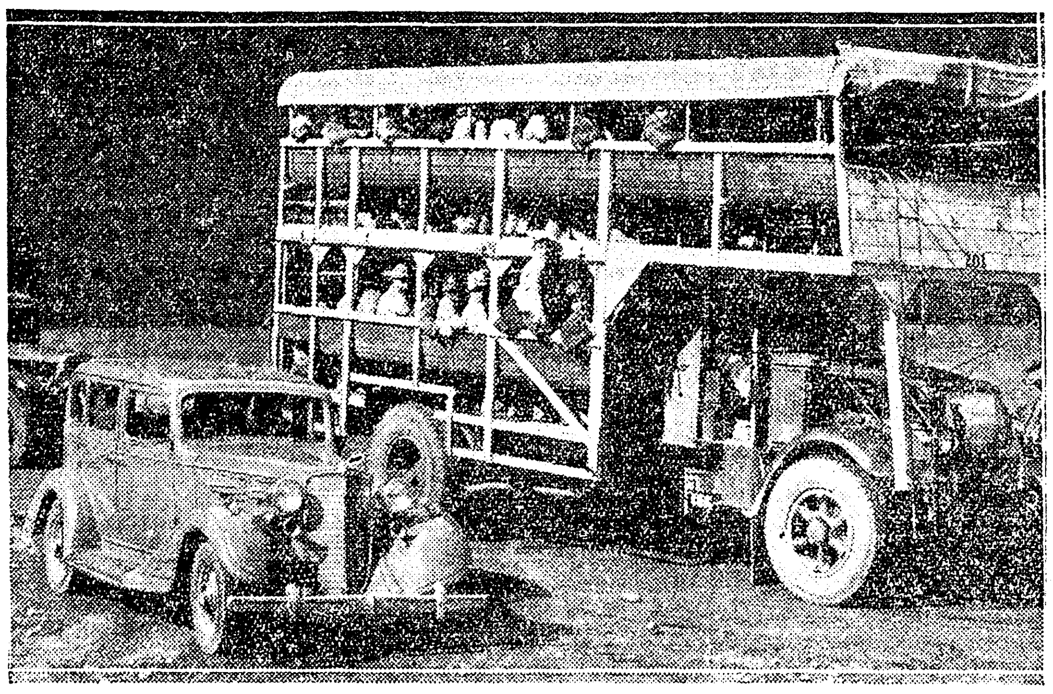
Making Transportation History



The daily transportation of 2700 men 14 miles from the headquarters at Boulder City, Nevada, to the dam site in Black Canyon was one of the many problems successfully solved by the construction engineers. The capacity of this highway monster is 150 men or 25 times as many passengers as can be carried by the Twin Ignition Nash Big Six shown beside it. Although these huge busses must negotiate hairpin turns on a perilous road carved out of the sheer rock wall of the canyon, skillful maneuvering on the part of the drivers has resulted in the loss of only one bus and no lives during the period of construction.

ARNAO PRODUCTS AT PILCHER SHOP

Most Successful Of New Hair Treatments Are Available Here

The Pilcher Barber shop, located across the street from the Paramount theater, takes pleasure in inviting you to become one of their patrons who may take advantage of a special offer of six Arnoil steam treatments for the hair, using the improved "individual" Arnoil medications with the Arnao steamer, at a most reasonable cost.

There is a scientifically correct Arnoil medication for each hair and scalp condition. For dry scalp and scaly dandruff, there's Arnoil dandruff remover. Arnoil oily hair correctant is a medication for oily conditions of the hair and scalp, with or without dandruff. Arnoil reconditioner is ideal for dry, brittle, lusterless hair.

With the aid of a leading university chemist Arnao has perfected a scientific medication for each of the three common hair and scalp disorders. Today, medical opinion offers no more valuable preparations for successful results.

Each Arnao is specific for a particular condition of the hair and scalp.

Bacteriologists made extensive examinations of the results obtained from ordinary hair and scalp oils that are commonly used. From the bacteriological tests conducted, it was definitely established that satisfactory results cannot be obtained from treatments using ordinary hair oils.

Mr. Pilcher or any of his associates will be pleased to go into further details concerning this most successful of hair treatments.

Personal Liability For Fire Practiced In Some Communties

Personal liability for fire, as the National Board of Fire Underwriters points out, is a principle long established in Europe. In France, for example, if it is proven that a person's carelessness was responsible for a fire, he is held financially responsible for all the damage done to the property of others.

That principle has never been generally accepted in America, but there are one or two scattered instances where it has been applied. In 1926, in Cincinnati, a citien was ordered to comply with certain fire-preventative ordinances. He failed to do so, and fire broke out on his property. It was put out by the fire department, which sent a bill for $650 to cover the expense involved. The case went finally to court, and the city was awarded damages of $500. A similar instance occurred in New York. A company was ordered to install fire sprinklers, did not do so, and sustained a major fire. Under a 50-year-old law, the city sued and received $1,500 for extinguishing it.

Law or no law, fire is a matter of personal responsibility. Every individual owes his community a definite duty so far as eliminating hazards from his property is concerned. In most cases, it costs little in either time or money to make hazardous property safe.

Fire Prevention week was recently observed—and all of us should resolve to retain and use the information that was disseminated then. Fire is the great destroyer—most of its destruction is unnecessary. Every citizen must become his own fire marshal, cooperating with the constituted authorities, to see that his neighborhood and town are made safe. That is the advice of the Downes Brokerage, Inc., local agents.

CHEVROLET ADDS FOUR-DOOR SEDAN

New Model Included In Popular Standard Six Line For 1934-35

For the first time since Chevrolet added the Standard six in 1933, a four-door five-passenger sedan is now included in its lower priced line. In announcing the new model as an addition to the 1934 Standards, Chevrolet Motor company declares it to be the lowest priced four-door sedan in the field of sixes and eights. Its list price is $540, or $100 under the Master four-door sedan.

The major new features in styling is the treatment of the rear end, where the body panels extend low in an unbroken contour to cover the back of the chassis. This construction does away with the rear cross-member cover, and provides a smooth, sweeping effect. The rear tire carrier and the rear bumper supports extend through openings in the body panel, as does the gasoline tank filler-neck.

Comfort for rear seat passengers is improved by provision for extra leg room, the back of the front seat being deeply recessed, giving plenty of space for a built-in foot rest. Maximum elbow room is obtained by means of deep recesses in the sides of the body above large arm rests. A capacious pocket in the back of the front seat is an added convenience. Upholstery is of mohair material of a new shade and texture, set off by harmonizing head-lining.

Equipment features include an adjustable sun-shade at the driver's seat, button type latches for locking all doors, dome light and rear window curtain.

The new Chevrolets may be inspected at Lee-Rogers Chevrolet company.

DODGE CONDUCTS FATIGUE TESTS

Ease Of Steering, Which Is Found In Dodge Cars, Is Important

An especially interesting detail in the automobile-driving fatigue tests which Dr. Andrew H. Ryan of Chicago recently conducted with the cooperation of Dodge Brothers corporation, is the one in which the driver's fatigue is measured by the number of oscillations given to the steering wheel during a drive of 350 miles or more.

At first thought it would seem that the greater number of steering wheel movements would be made by the comparatively fresh, less fatigued driver whose mental alertness and unimpaired eyesight permit him to judge steering effects with such nicety that they carry him over considerable distances without alterations. However, such is not the case, according to Dr. Ryan's findings. It is the relatively tired driver, who, because of the impairment of certain mental and physical functions, gives the steering wheel of a given car the greater number of movements.

"In driving an automobile a distance of 350 miles on a concrete highway," says the noted scientist, "the driver will oscillate the steering wheel back and forth as many as 15,000 times, and on a dirt or gravel road twice as many times."

Ease of steering, as Dr. Ryan proved, is an important item in the reduction of auto fatigue which shows its effects plainly in the handling of the steering wheel. And the effect of fatigue is to decrease the steering efficiency and safety, and to increase the steering effort.

The apparatus used in registering steering fatigue is a "steering meter" of special design, which operates two Veeder counters recording not only the number of times the steering wheel is turned back and forth, but also the total circumferential distance through which it is turned during a drive.

Another significant fact disclosed by the "steering meter" during Dr. Ryan's fatigue tests is that steering systems employed in different makes of cars demand widely differing steering effort and, consequently, cause marked variations in steering fatigue.

REAL QUALITY IN EL CUBO CIGARS

Despite General Cigar Sales Decrease, El Cubo Shows Gain

"There is no compromise with quality in the manufacture of the new, mild El Cubo Cigars."

This emphatic statement from Phil D. Mayer & Sons, Ltd., makers of El Cubos, refers not only to the tobaccos from which El Cubos are made but also to every step in the manufacturing methods. In spite of a general decrease in cigar sales, El Cubos have shown an increase of over 33 1-3 per cent since a delightfully pleasing mildness has been added to the mellowness and rich distinctive Havana aroma for which El Cubos have always been famous. There must be a reason, and there is, claim the manufacturers of this fine cigar.

First—El Cubos are made only from Havana-domestic tobaccos of the highest quality. No seconds or "scrap" is ever used.

Second—Stocks are always aged two and three years, and in addition scientifically double cured for an extra period, by a new process, to assure mellow mildness.

Third—You will never find short filler or "scrap" in an El Cubo cigar. Only the finest long-filled Havana-domestic tobaccos are used. Every El Cubo is firm and full and will not crumble in the mouth while smoking.

Fourth—Long filler El Cubos, like all expensive cigars, are hand made, therefore, every one you smoke draws freely, burns evenly, stays lit, and is always cool and mild. El Cubo ash holds well and no "cigaretty" scrap falls and burns your clothing.

Fifth—Good to the last draw. Smoke the new El Cubo down to the last inch if you want to. The last draw will be as pleasingly mild and fragrant as the first puff.

But the most astonishing thing of all about El Cubos is that you can get them everywhere for 5c.

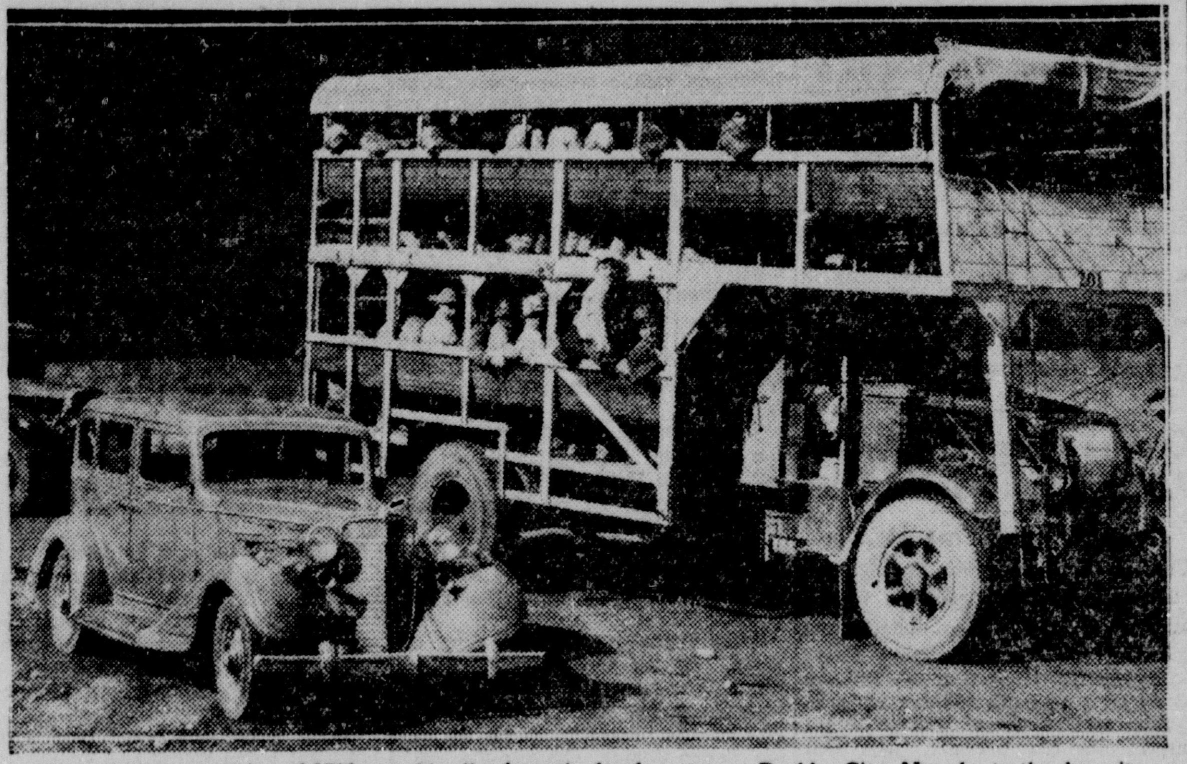
Making Transportation History



The daily transportation of 2700 men 14 miles from the headquarters at Boulder City, Nevada, to the dam site in Black Canyon was one of the many problems successfully solved by the construction engineers. The capacity of this highway monster is 150 men or 25 times as many passengers as can be carried by the Twin Ignition Nash Big Six shown beside it. Although these huge busses must negotiate hairpin turns on a perilous road carved out of the sheer rock wall of the canyon, skillful maneuvering on the part of the drivers has resulted in the loss of only one bus and no lives during the period of construction.

ARNAO PRODUCTS AT PILCHER SHOP

Most Successful Of New Hair Treatments Are Available Here

The Pilcher Barber shop, located across the street from the Paramount theater, takes pleasure in inviting you to become one of their patrons who may take advantage of a special offer of six Arnoil steam treatments for the hair, using the improved "individual" Arnoil medications with the Arnao steamer, at a most reasonable cost.

There is a scientifically correct Arnoil medication for each hair and scalp condition. For dry scalp and scaly dandruff, there's Arnoil dandruff remover. Arnoil oily hair correctant is a medication for oily conditions of the hair and scalp, with or without dandruff. Arnoil reconditioner is ideal for dry, brittle, lusterless hair.

With the aid of a leading university chemist Arnao has perfected a scientific medication for each of the three common hair and scalp disorders. Today, medical opinion offers no more valuable preparations for successful results.

Each Arnao is specific for a particular condition of the hair and scalp.

Bacteriologists made extensive examinations of the results obtained from ordinary hair and scalp oils that are commonly used. From the bacteriological tests conducted, it was definitely established that satisfactory results cannot be obtained from treatments using ordinary hair oils.

Mr. Pilcher or any of his associates will be pleased to go into further details concerning this most successful of hair treatments.

Personal Liability For Fire Practiced In Some Communties

Personal liability for fire, as the National Board of Fire Underwriters points out, is a principle long established in Europe. In France, for example, if it is proven that a person's carelessness was responsible for a fire, he is held financially responsible for all the damage done to the property of others.

That principle has never been generally accepted in America, but there are one or two scattered instances where it has been applied. In 1926, in Cincinnati, a citien was ordered to comply with certain fire-preventative ordinances. He failed to do so, and fire broke out on his property. It was put out by the fire department, which sent a bill for $650 to cover the expense involved. The case went finally to court, and the city was awarded damages of $500. A similar instance occurred in New York. A company was ordered to install fire sprinklers, did not do so, and sustained a major fire. Under a 50-year-old law, the city sued and received $1,500 for extinguishing it.

Law or no law, fire is a matter of personal responsibility. Every individual owes his community a definite duty so far as eliminating hazards from his property is concerned. In most cases, it costs little in either time or money to make hazardous property safe.

Fire Prevention week was recently observed—and all of us should resolve to retain and use the information that was disseminated then. Fire is the great destroyer—most of its destruction is unnecessary. Every citizen must become his own fire marshal, cooperating with the constituted authorities, to see that his neighborhood and town are made safe. That is the advice of the Downes Brokerage, Inc., local agents.

CHEVROLET ADDS FOUR-DOOR SEDAN

New Model Included In Popular Standard Six Line For 1934-35

For the first time since Chevrolet added the Standard six in 1933, a four-door five-passenger sedan is now included in its lower priced line. In announcing the new model as an addition to the 1934 Standards, Chevrolet Motor company declares it to be the lowest priced four-door sedan in the field of sixes and eights. Its list price is $540, or $100 under the Master four-door sedan.

The major new features in styling is the treatment of the rear end, where the body panels extend low in an unbroken contour to cover the back of the chassis. This construction does away with the rear cross-member cover, and provides a smooth, sweeping effect. The rear tire carrier and the rear bumper supports extend through openings in the body panel, as does the gasoline tank filler-neck.

Comfort for rear seat passengers is improved by provision for extra leg room, the back of the front seat being deeply recessed, giving plenty of space for a built-in foot rest. Maximum elbow room is obtained by means of deep recesses in the sides of the body above large arm rests. A capacious pocket in the back of the front seat is an added convenience. Upholstery is of mohair material of a new shade and texture, set off by harmonizing head-lining.

Equipment features include an adjustable sun-shade at the driver's seat, button type latches for locking all doors, dome light and rear window curtain.

The new Chevrolets may be inspected at Lee-Rogers Chevrolet company.

DODGE CONDUCTS FATIGUE TESTS

Ease Of Steering, Which Is Found In Dodge Cars, Is Important

An especially interesting detail in the automobile-driving fatigue tests which Dr. Andrew H. Ryan of Chicago recently conducted with the cooperation of Dodge Brothers corporation, is the one in which the driver's fatigue is measured by the number of oscillations given to the steering wheel during a drive of 350 miles or more.

At first thought it would seem that the greater number of steering wheel movements would be made by the comparatively fresh, less fatigued driver whose mental alertness and unimpaired eyesight permit him to judge steering effects with such nicety that they carry him over considerable distances without alterations. However, such is not the case, according to Dr. Ryan's findings. It is the relatively tired driver, who, because of the impairment of certain mental and physical functions gives the steering wheel of a given car the greater number of movements.

"In driving an automobile a distance of 350 miles on a concrete highway," says the noted scientist, "the driver will oscillate the steering wheel back and forth as many as 15,000 times, and on a dirt or gravel road twice as many times."

Ease of steering, as Dr. Ryan proved, is an important item in the reduction of auto fatigue which shows its effects plainly in the handling of the steering wheel. And the effect of fatigue is to decrease the steering efficiency and safety, and to increase the steering effort.

The apparatus used in registering steering fatigue is a "steering meter" of special design, which operates two Veeder counters recording not only the number of times the steering wheel is turned back and forth, but also the total circumferential distance through which it is turned during a drive.

Another significant fact disclosed by the "steering meter" during Dr. Ryan's fatigue tests is that steering systems employed in different makes of cars demand widely differing steering effort and, consequently, cause marked variations in steering fatigue.

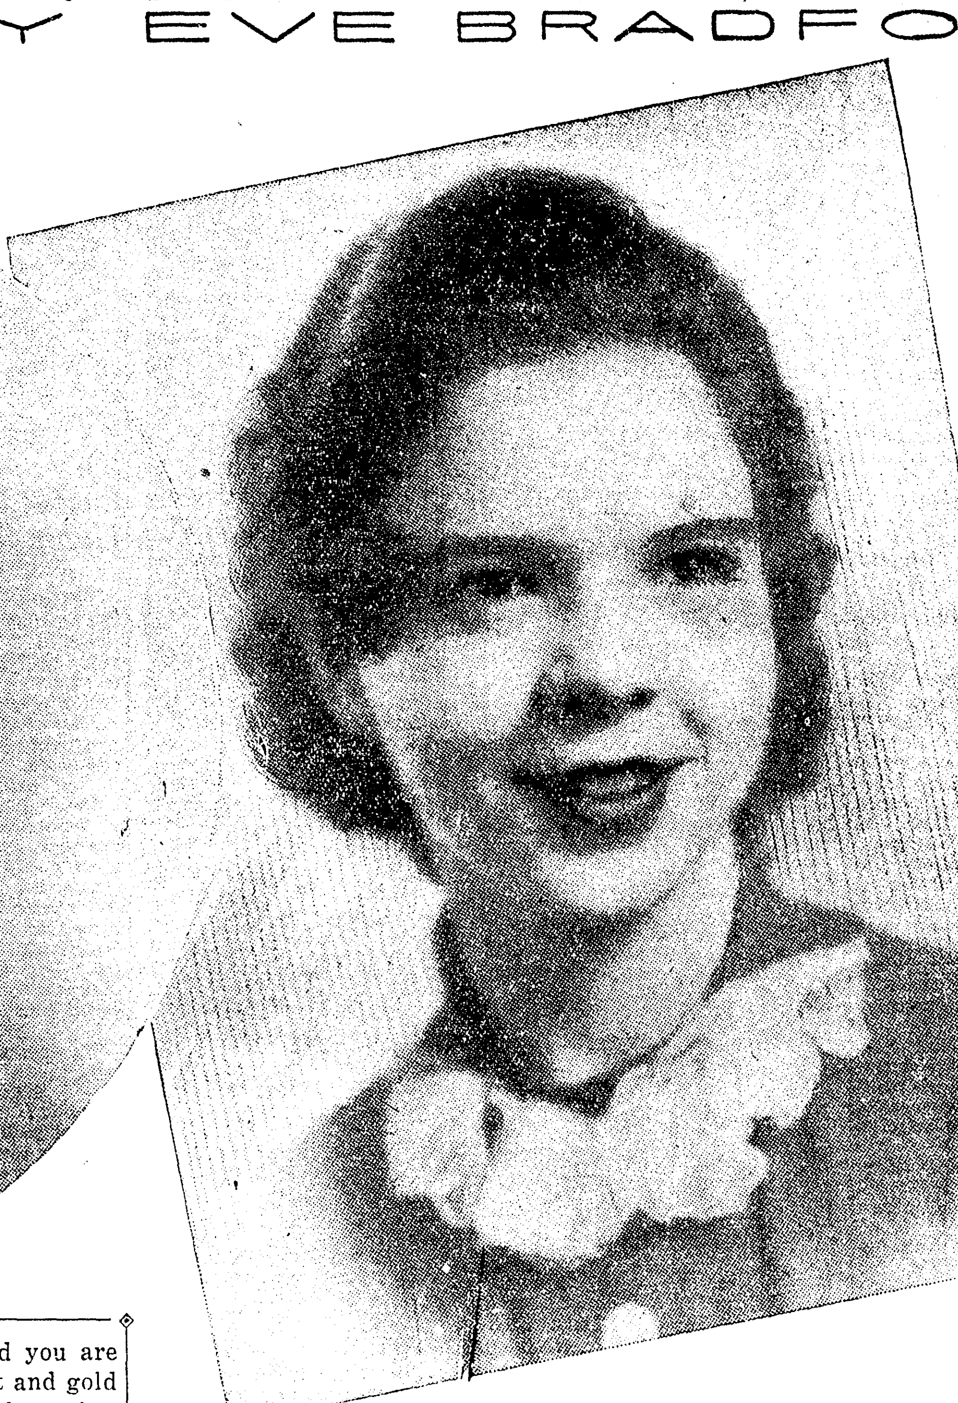
SOCIETY

BY EVE BRADFORD



In the pictures today we have two outstanding figures at Lakeside Golf and Country club, Mrs. Thomas J. Sandridge (left) and Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn (right). They were recently selected heads of the committee for Ladies' day activities at the club and are exerting every effort to make these affairs a success from a social standpoint.

Miss Marjorie Farmer, attractive member of the younger social set, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farmer, recently established themselves in their lovely new home on M street. (Center.) Portraits by Downing studio.

GOOD MORNING! Of course your gypsy blood is astir this morning and you are looking forward to the solitude of the flaming woods, where the scarlet and gold of the falling leaves has the power to "shake you like the cry of bugles going by" . . . The dimness of the golden-rod, just a week ago glorifying the roadside, reminds us that the year is growing old and soon we will be content to sit by our bright firesides with our books, our dreams and a friend or two. . . . At the present moment, however, we are reveling in the beauty of the asters . . . purple or magenta in the autumn sunshine, they are as emphatic as when John Alden and Priscilla Mullins loved them in the long ago . . . these flowers, symbols of true Americanism, with their star-shaped petals, point our thoughts to the heavens. . . . Members of the Garden club were indeed wise to arrange their fall flower show when the asters are in bloom . . . realizing that only members will be privileged to exhibit, flower lovers are scurrying to become affiliated. . . . Speaking of flowers we often wonder how Johnnie Smith Elbert finds time to cultivate those glorious dahlias that brighten her shop these fall days. . . . Strange as it may seem, it is always the busy person who is continually doing something worth while . . . when we want something done, it is strange also, that we always go to the busy person.

The art of conversation is having a renaissance in our Monroe homes with the return of the cocktails and elegance in clothes. . . . Upon the conversation and the excellence of the hors d'oeuvres and the liquids, hinges the success of these parties. . . . Henry and Bessie Biedenharn's cocktail party Wednesday night was a triumph if one can judge from the animated repartee and the toothsome delicacies enjoyed by the guests . . . however, you can rest assured that conversation will sparkle if Josephine Millsaps is present . . . comparisons, we are told, are odious, but Josephine compares favorably with Irvin Cobb, the nation's greatest humorist. . . . We know whereof we speak as we were privileged to sit at the right of this famous person at dinner one night and simply marveled at the flow of words that poured from her lips . . . this wonderful gift of speech is an individual accomplishment and no vicissitudes of fortune can wrest it from the owner. . . . By the way, have you met Josephine's lovely niece, Elizabeth Pierce of Nashville? . . . she is the most wholesome and refreshing person we have met in many a day . . . we watched her on a boating party recently in a pair of slacks and polo shirt and thought how delightfully refreshing she was. . . . Have you ever seen a dream walking—well, we did and she was wearing an enchanting blue taffeta gown . . . this dream girl was Karen Elizabeth Page, niece of John and Frances Keenan, and she was dancing on the roof Tuesday night . . . at least she was trying to dance while being snatched from one pair of arms to another. . . . Have you a sister? . . . if so, you are indeed blessed . . . your father and mother may get peeved and fail you . . . your daughter or your son, it is possible, may bang you in the jaw or throw you out of the house when you become old and a nuisance, but a sister!—she will show for you an exhaustless love, an eternal devotion, an everlasting patience . . . all of which reminds us that Gay Noe hasn't a sister so she lavishes her love on Jean Graves . . . they have stuck together since infancy and every day grow fonder of each other . . . every pleasure in life is shared with each other and you can rest assured that where one is there you will find the other. . . . We saw these two young enchantresses the other night, dressed for a bowery party. . . . Gay with blonde curls flying and exuding animation side by side with Jean, whose dark eyes were shining. . . . Before we get off the subject of Gay let us tell you about an address she made a few weeks ago when a program was presented at the First Methodist church in observance of the one hundred and fiftieth birthday anniversary. . . . Facing a packed house she made an address that even the most gifted orator might envy . . . we predict great things for this young girl who can address an audience, ride a surf board behind a speeding motor boat, ride a high spirited horse, play a nocturne or sit in the corner and sew a fine seam. . . . William Bendel, Jr., is another youngster we are justly proud of . . . arriving home from camp on Lookout mountain he displayed with the utmost nonchalance a handsome silver cup for archery, two silver medals for wrestling and life saving and still another cup for rifle work from the National Rifle association. . . . William is deserving of the highest credit, of course, but how could he help from accomplishing things with such parents for an inspiration.

The past four years have held in their hard hands many a blessing, the greatest of which possibly, is that the majority of us have been forced to turn homeward to find enjoyment and to offer hospitality at our own firesides . . . families have been drawn closer together and the true value of home is appreciated now more than ever before . . . the comforts of home, however, were denied us to a certain extent during these past few years—the Lakeside Country club. . . . All has been changed within the past month and today members are again looking to this home for relaxation and recreation . . . once again the spacious lounge is resounding with the laughter of friends who drop in for a cup that cheers. . . . Thursday is Ladies' day and from nine o'clock in the morning until the shadows fall along the sleepy bayou, members will come and go. . . . November's falling leaves will have a tuneful accompaniment according to recent announcements . . . an old refrain, Lohengrin's wedding march will vibrate along the highway to Rayville where Lucille Mangham will promise to love, honor and obey James Trousdale on the day chosen for their wedding . . . it will certainly be nice to have lovely Lucille here in Monroe forever after.

George Moore wrote in his best novel the phrase, "What else in life but a few sonatas, a few operas, a few pictures, a few books and a love story?" . . Otherwise he might have written that life was an orgy of benefits and that charitable hearts are beating forever. . . . For such seems to be our prospect for the early winter . . . every phone ring means a kind soul and an organization luncheon or tea. . . . Dollars and dimes must be charmed from bank balances into schools, hospitals and social settlements and that is that . . . for the moment charity is monarch of the social scene. . . . Following the benefit bridge at Lakeside club last Tuesday, Edith Meyer's sister, Mrs. Lawrence McAtee of Los Angeles, desirous of seeing what was on the other side of the levee had the misfortune to sprain her ankle and all social engagements were called off . . . we haven't had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. McAtee yet, but are confident that being Edith Meyer's sister she must be lovely. . . . And so goodbye—will see you at Lakeside on Thursday.

Messrs. John Holmes, Clifton Furlow and Jack Noble returned last week from St. Louis where they attended the world series and visited places of interest.

Beautiful Ceremony Unites Miss Larson And Mr. Birney In Marriage On Thursday

The sincere and affectionate interest of many friends in this city is centered in the marriage of Miss Ethel Larson, a former resident of Monroe. An account of her wedding, which took place in St. Louis, on the eleventh of October, follows:

The marriage of Miss Ethel Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Larson, to Mr. Robert Thomas Birney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Milton Birney, took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Thursday, October the eleventh, at the home of the bride's parents on Northwood avenue in St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. John Beean, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Mediator, McComb, Miss.

Palms and fern banked the living room where the bridal party stood. White chrysanthemums were used throughout the house, illuminated by cathedral tapers in tall white candelabra.

Before the ceremony, an impressive program of music was rendered by Miss Louise Bernero, who also played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the processional.

Mrs. Howard Jackson Larson, the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor and the only attendant. She wore a becoming dress of Bridal Blush satin, made quite long and with high neckline and long, close-fitting sleeves. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of Joanna Hill roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore ivory-tinted satin fashioned along simple lines, with a high square neckline caught by pearl clips. The long, close-fitting sleeves came to a point over each hand and the skirt ended in a medium-length train. The veil was caught on either side by a cluster of orange blossoms. Her flowers were a shower of valley lilies which fell from the satin-covered prayer book carried by Mrs. John Beean at her marriage several years ago.

Mr. Birney had as his best man Mr. Howard Jackson Larson, the bride's brother.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Larson was assisted by a group of the bride's friends: Mrs. Russell Williams, Miss Aileen Hill, Miss Margaret Ohle and Miss Mary Bernero.

Later, the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home in St. Louis.

Both are graduates of Washington university of St. Louis, where Mrs. Birney became a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, and Mr. Birney was a member of Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Sigma Pi fraternity.

The Larson family formerly lived in Monroe, having moved to St. Louis about eight years ago.

Interest Centered In Plans For The Annual Fall Flower Show During November

With the Flower show November the seventh, as its main objective, the Garden club is plunging into the year's work with even more enthusiasm than was manifested last year. The program committee consisting of Mrs. T. C. Rowland, Mrs. Fred Fudikar, Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, Mrs. Allan Sholars and Mrs. Elmer Slagle have prepared a program for the year which will not only appeal to those whose gardens have made Monroe one of the beauty spots of Louisiana but will also appeal to those who desire lovely gardens, but possess little knowledge of horticulture.

One of the projects fostered by the club is the giving of shrubbery as prizes for outstanding beautification of gardens along the highways. Mrs. Jewel McQuiller is chairman of the highway beautification contest, definite rules of which will be announced at an early date.

Other chairmen of the club are:

Exhibit, Mrs. Elmer Richards; exchange, Mrs. Sidney Stroud; civic, Mrs. Jessie Sadler; laboratory, Mrs. Jewel McQuiller; Junior Garden club, Miss Lucyle Godwin.

The Barkdull Faulk post of the American Legion has very graciously and unanimously offered the garden club permission to use the legion home as a permanent meeting place throughout the year.

Mrs. Adelaide J. Dickson, organizing chairman of the garden clubs of Louisiana, is calling an informal luncheon meeting in Alexandria, Tuesday, October the thirtieth, for the purpose of organizing a federation of garden clubs of Louisiana. This federation will be of inestimable value to every garden club and the garden club members of the Twin Cities are not only invited but urged to attend this meeting.

The constitution and by-laws of the Federation of Louisiana Garden clubs which will be considered at this meeting are as follows:

Article I—Name

The name of this organization shall be Louisiana Garden club.

Article II—Objects

The objects of this organization shall be to bring the garden clubs of the state into closer cooperaiton; to increase interest in gardens and to work for the beautification of the state.

Sentiment Strong In Many Colleges Against Methods Of Greek Letter Societies

This is the height of the rushing season in universities the country over. Freshmen are in great dither. Those who have been invited to rushing parties, who are being trotted about to see how they act and talk and eat, are excited and thrilled. A few have the courage to dismiss the whole idea. Some of this little number of iconoclasts are impelled by lack of funds; others by democratic principle.

A friend of ours recently told of her experience as a sophomore. She said: "When I was a sophomore, I was always in wrong with my sorority because I hung around too much with non-fraternity students not prominent on the campus. Never will I forget the pathetic scene on pledge day when the invitations arrived. Three girls fainted . . . scores wept . . . nobody slept. Nothing but sororities was talked about. Mothers came hurrying in vain to help their daughters make the sorority they had made. One girl attempted suicide and another quit school . . . two had nervous breakdowns.

The bids were given out on Saturday night. The girls waited breathless in their rooms. Many waited vainly for their phones to ring.

Sunday morning was the great occasion when the new pledges must go "down the row" to breakfast at the house of their bidding. There was a tremendous bustle in many rooms, silence in others. The girls emerged in their smartest clothes to stroll out into the morning sunshine, to walk up the avenue, past the fraternity houses, where the boys lounged on their verandas to watch the girls go by.

Breakfast was very quiet. Only one girl came down. The others went breakfastless in their pride and pain.

It all sounds so silly to us who have got past that stage, who think—perhaps—that if we were in college now we would scorn all this sort of thing. But to these girls and boys it is almost tragic.

You cannot expect a youngster of 18 to have the strength to dismiss the fraternity idea completely and say, "This is unimportant—it doesn't matter one way or another." Because the values on which their choice is based are so intangible, so personal and intimate. They have no defense against them. It is the first time they have come up against a mass yardstick.

Many of them, having lived in little towns, crave the experience of fraternity membership. Almost all of them would like the fun it is said to be.

The kids themselves are not such snobs. It is their parents, who idealize those college days and cling to their glamorous memories and who think that fraternity membership somehow spells collegiate happiness. It is these same parents who give to the university's support.

Seldom do you find a university head or a dean of women who is strong for fraternities. Unfortunately, their attitude toward them must be tempered by their need for funds. The alumni, not the students, determine the course of events. One cannot afford to hurt their feelings.

Meanwhile girls ggigle through a ritual which was sacred to its founders of the sentimental "Little Women" period.

If the boys and girls can chuck this system "so childish for its age," more power to them. Let the oldsters get out of the way with their frayed and tawdry snobbishness.

Coffee Hour Brings Friends Together Complimentary To Attractive Guests In City

Mrs. M. M. Underwood introduced her attractive house guests, Mrs. Doane Powers (her sister) of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. Blake Jennings, of Norman, Oklahoma, to a few congenials during the coffee hour Thursday and Friday morning.

Garden flowers of pronounced beauty were placed advantageously in the background of the reception suite, where Mrs. Underwood welcomed her guests. A gracious welcome was also extended by Mrs. S. A. Collins in the dining room, where she presided over the coffee table covered with handsome Italian linen cut work and florally adorned with a classic shaped crystal urn overflowing with pink Radiance roses and pink chrysanthemums. Coffee was poured from a handsome silver service. Mrs. W. J. Riley and Mrs. W. E. Wilson assisted in the serving of the delicious confections.

Privileged to meet Mrs. Powers and Mrs. Jennings and to enjoy the charming atmosphere of Mrs. Underwood's home were Mrs. Joe Wright Swift, Miss Alice Hill, Mrs. Chas. Ledoux, Mrs. W. J. Quiggles, Mrs. Harry St. John, Mrs. F. B. Winberry, Mrs. Nathan Gaston, Mrs. T. J. Sandridge, Mrs. Pearl Melebeck, Mrs. J. B. Dawkins, Mrs. C. E. McRoberts, Mrs. Ralph King, Mrs. W. L. SOCIETY

BY EVE BRADFORD

In the pictures today we have two outstanding figures at Lakeside Golf and Country club, Mrs. Thomas J. Sandridge (left) and Mrs. Bernard Biedenharn (right). They were recently selected heads of the committee for Ladies' day activities at the club and are exerting every effort to make these affairs a success from a social standpoint.

Miss Marjorie Farmer, attractive member of the younger social set, who with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Farmer, recently established themselves in their lovely new home on M street. (Center.) Portraits by Downing studio.

GOOD MORNING! Of course your gypsy blood is astir this morning and you are looking forward to the solitude of the flaming woods, where the scarlet and gold of the falling leaves has the power to "shake you like the cry of bugles going by" . . . The dimness of the golden-rod, just a week ago glorifying the roadside, reminds us that the year is growing old and soon we will be content to sit by our bright firesides with our books, our dreams and a friend or two. . . . At the present moment, however, we are reveling in the beauty of the asters . . . purple or magenta in the autumn sunshine, they are as emphatic as when John Alden and Priscilla Mullins loved them in the long ago . . . these flowers, symbols of true Americanism, with their star-shaped petals, point our thoughts to the heavens. . . . Members of the Garden club were indeed wise to arrange their fall flower show when the asters are in bloom . . . realizing that only members will be privileged to exhibit, flower lovers are scurrying to become affiliated. . . . Speaking of flowers we often wonder how Johnnie Smith Elbert finds time to cultivate those glorious dahlias that brighten her shop these fall days. . . . Strange as it may seem, it is always the busy person who is continually doing something worth while . . . when we want something done, it is strange also, that we always go to the busy person.

The art of conversation is having a renaissance in our Monroe homes with the return of the cocktails and elegance in clothes. . . . Upon the conversation and the excellence of the hors d'oeuvres and the liquids, hinges the success of these parties. . . . Henry and Bessie Biedenharn's cocktail party Wednesday night was a triumph if one can judge from the animated repartee and the toothsome delicacies enjoyed by the guests . . . however, you can rest assured that conversation will sparkle if Josephine Millsaps is present . . . comparisons, we are told, are odious, but Josephine compares favorably with Irvin Cobb, the nation's greatest humorist. . . . We know whereof we speak as we were privileged to sit at the right of this famous person at dinner one night and simply marveled at the flow of words that poured from her lips . . . this wonderful gift of speech is an individual accomplishment and no vicissitudes of fortune can wrest it from the owner. . . . By the way, have you met Josephine's lovely niece, Elizabeth Pierce of Nashville? . . . she is the most wholesome and refreshing person we have met in many a day . . . we watched her on a boating party recently in a pair of slacks and polo shirt and thought how delightfully refreshing she was. . . . Have you ever seen a dream walking—well, we did and she was wearing an enchanting blue taffeta gown . . . this dream girl was Karen Elizabeth Page, niece of John and Frances Keenan, and she was dancing on the roof Tuesday night . . . at least she was trying to dance while being snatched from one pair of arms to another. . . . Have you a sister? . . . if so, you are indeed blessed . . . your father and mother may get peeved and fail you . . . your daughter or your son, it is possible, may bang you in the jaw or throw you out of the house when you become old and a nuisance, but a sister!—she will show for you an exhaustless love, an eternal devotion, an everlasting patience . . . all of which reminds us that Gay Noe hasn't a sister so she lavishes her love on Jean Graves . . . they have stuck together since infancy and every day grow fonder of each other . . . every pleasure in life is shared with each other and you can rest assured that where one is there you will find the other. . . . We saw these two young enchantresses the other night, dressed for a bowery party. . . . Gay with blonde curls flying and exuding animation side by side with Jean, whose dark eyes were shining. . . . Before we get off the subject of Gay let us tell you about an address she made a few weeks ago when a program was presented at the First Methodist church in observance of the one hundred and fiftieth birthday anniversary. . . . Facing a packed house she made an address that even the most gifted orator might envy . . . we predict great things for this young girl who can address an audience, ride a surf board behind a speeding motor boat, ride a high spirited horse, play a nocturne or sit in the corner and sew a fine seam. . . . William Bendel, Jr., is another youngster we are justly proud of . . . arriving home from camp on Lookout mountain he displayed with the utmost nonchalance a handsome silver cup for archery, two silver medals for wrestling and life saving and still another cup for rifle work from the National Rifle association. . . . William is deserving of the highest credit, of course, but how could he help from accomplishing things with such parents for an inspiration.

The past four years have held in their hard hands many a blessing, the greatest of which possibly, is that the majority of us have been forced to turn homeward to find enjoyment and to offer hospitality at our own firesides . . . families have been drawn closer together and the true value of home is appreciated now more than ever before . . . the comforts of home, however, were denied us to a certain extent during these past few years—the Lakeside Country club. . . . All has been changed within the past month and today members are again looking to this home for relaxation and recreation . . . once again the spacious lounge is resounding with the laughter of friends who drop in for a cup that cheers. . . . Thursday is Ladies' day and from nine o'clock in the morning until the shadows fall along the sleepy bayou, members will come and go. . . . November's falling leaves will have a tuneful accompaniment according to recent announcements . . . an old refrain, Lohengrin's wedding march will vibrate along the highway to Rayville where Lucille Mangham will promise to love, honor and obey James Trousdale on the day chosen for their wedding . . . it will certainly be nice to have lovely Lucille here in Monroe forever after.

George Moore wrote in his best novel the phrase, "What else in life but a few sonatas, a few operas, a few pictures, a few books and a love story?" . . .Otherwise he might have written that life was an orgy of benefits and that charitable hearts are beating forever. . . . For such seems to be our prospect for the early winter . . . every phone ring means a kind soul and an organization luncheon or tea. . . . Dollars and dimes must be charmed from bank balances into schools, hospitals and social settlements and that is that . . . for the moment charity is monarch of the social scene. . . . Following the benefit bridge at Lakeside club last Tuesday, Edith Meyer's sister, Mrs. Lawrence McAtee of Los Angeles, desirous of seeing what was on the other side of the levee had the misfortune to sprain her ankle and all social engagements were called off . . . we haven't had the pleasure of meeting Mrs. McAtee yet, but are confident that being Edith Meyer's sister she must be lovely. . . . And so goodbye—will see you at Lakeside on Thursday.

Messrs. John Holmes, Clifton Furlow and Jack Noble returned last week from St. Louis where they attended the world series and visited places of interest.

Beautiful Ceremony Unites Miss Larson And Mr. Birney In Marriage On Thursday

The sincere and affectionate interest of many friends in this city is centered in the marriage of Miss Ethel Larson, a former resident of Monroe. An account of her wedding, which took place in St. Louis, on the eleventh of October, follows:

The marriage of Miss Ethel Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frederick Larson, to Mr. Robert Thomas Birney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Milton Birney, took place at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, Thursday, October the eleventh, at the home of the bride's parents on Northwood avenue in St. Louis. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. John Beean, rector of the Episcopal Church of the Mediator, McComb, Miss.

Palms and fern banked the living room where the bridal party stood. White chrysanthemums were used throughout the house, illuminated by cathedral tapers in tall white candelabra.

Before the ceremony, an impressive program of music was rendered by Miss Louise Bernero, who also played the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin as the processional.

Mrs. Howard Jackson Larson, the bride's sister-in-law, was matron of honor and the only attendant. She wore a becoming dress of Bridal Blush satin, made quite long and with high neckline and long, close-fitting sleeves. Her flowers were an arm bouquet of Joanna Hill roses.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore ivory-tinted satin fashioned along simple lines, with a high square neckline caught by pearl clips. The long, close-fitting sleeves came to a point over each hand and the skirt ended in a medium-length train. The veil was caught on either side by a cluster of orange blossoms. Her flowers were a shower of valley lilies which fell from the satin-covered prayer book carried by Mrs. John Beean at her marriage several years ago.

Mr. Birney had as his best man Mr. Howard Jackson Larson, the bride's brother.

An informal reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Larson was assisted by a group of the bride's friends: Mrs. Russell Williams, Miss Aileen Hill, Miss Margaret Ohle and Miss Mary Bernero.

Later, the bride and groom left for a short wedding trip, after which they will be at home in St. Louis.

Both are graduates of Washington university of St. Louis, where Mrs. Birney became a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority, and Mr. Birney was a member of Alpha Tau Omega and Delta Sigma Pi fraternity.

The Larson family formerly lived in Monroe, having moved to St. Louis about eight years ago.

Interest Centered In Plans For The Annual Fall Flower Show During November

With the Flower show November the seventh, as its main objective, the Garden club is plunging into the year's work with even more enthusiasm than was manifested last year. The program committee consisting of Mrs. T. C. Rowland, Mrs. Fred Fudikar, Mrs. Jewel McQuiller, Mrs. Allan Sholars and Mrs. Elmer Slagle have prepared a program for the year which will not only appeal to those whose gardens have made Monroe one of the beauty spots of Louisiana but will also appeal to those who desire lovely gardens, but possess little knowledge of horticulture.

One of the projects fostered by the club is the giving of shrubbery as prizes for outstanding beautification of gardens along the highways. Mrs. Jewel McQuiller is chairman of the highway beautification contest, definite rules of which will be announced at an early date.

Other chairmen of the club are:

Exhibit, Mrs. Elmer Richards; exchange, Mrs. Sidney Stroud; civic, Mrs. Jessie Sadler; laboratory, Mrs. Jewel McQuiller; Junior Garden club, Miss Lucyle Godwin.

The Barkdull Faulk post of the American Legion has very graciously and unanimously offered the garden club permission to use the legion home as a permanent meeting place throughout the year.

Mrs. Adelaide J. Dickson, organizing chairman of the garden clubs of Louisiana, is calling an informal luncheon meeting in Alexandria, Tuesday, October the thirtieth, for the purpose of organizing a federation of garden clubs of Louisiana. This federation will be of inestimable value to every garden club and the garden club members of the Twin Cities are not only invited but urged to attend this meeting.

The constitution and by-laws of the Federation of Louisiana Garden clubs which will be considered at this meeting are as follows:

Article I—Name

The name of this organization shall be Louisiana Garden club.

Mrs. McGuire Is Hostess To The Book Club

The meeting of the Twentieth Century Book club with Mrs. Manning McGuire Wednesday afternoon was rendered exceedingly interesting by the presence of Mrs. Lily May Long of Tallulah, the fifth district president of the Louisiana Federated Women's clubs.

Mrs. McGuire presided with customary graciousness in her home where beautiful autumn leaves and garden flowers formed a colorful setting. Miss Long was introduced and spoke to the members along constructive lines. She also complimented in highest terms the program outlined by the club members for the coming year.

Sentiment Strong In Many Colleges Against Methods Of Greek Letter Societies

This is the height of the rushing season in universities the country over. Freshmen are in great dither. Those who have been invited to rushing parties, who are being trotted about to see how they act and talk and eat, are excited and thrilled. A few have the courage to dismiss the whole idea. Some of this little number of iconoclasts are impelled by lack of funds; others by democratic principle.

A friend of ours recently told of her experience as a sophomore. She said: "When I was a sophomore, I was always in wrong with my sorority because I hung around too much with non-fraternity students not prominent on the campus. Never will I forget the pathetic scene on pledge day when the invitations arrived. Three girls fainted . . . scores wept . . . nobody slept. Nothing but sororities was talked about. Mothers came hurrying in vain to help their daughters make the sorority they had made. One girl attempted suicide and another quit school . . . two had nervous breakdowns.

The bids were given out on Saturday night. The girls waited breathless in their rooms. Many waited vainly for their phones to ring.

Sunday morning was the great occasion when the new pledges must go "down the row" to breakfast at the house of their bidding. There was a tremendous bustle in many rooms, silence in others. The girls emerged in their smartest clothes to stroll out into the morning sunshine, to walk up the avenue, past the fraternity houses, where the boys lounged on their verandas to watch the girls go by.

Breakfast was very quiet. Only one girl came down. The others went breakfastless in their pride and pain.

It all sounds so silly to us who have got past that stage, who think—perhaps—that if we were in college now we would scorn all this sort of thing. But to these girls and boys it is almost tragic.

You cannot expect a youngster of 18 to have the strength to dismiss the fraternity idea completely and say, "This is unimportant—it doesn't matter one way or another." Because the values on which their choice is based are so intangible, so personal and intimate. They have no defense against them. It is the first time they have come up against a mass yardstick.

Many of them, having lived in little towns, crave the experience of fraternity membership. Almost all of them would like the fun it is said to be.

The kids themselves are not such snobs. It is their parents, who idealize those college days and cling to their glamorous memories and who think that fraternity membership somehow spells collegiate happiness. It is these same parents who give to the university's support.

Seldom do you find a university head or a dean of women who is strong for fraternities. Unfortunately, their attitude toward them must be tempered by their need for funds. The alumni, not the students, determine the course of events. One cannot afford to hurt their feelings.

Meanwhile girls ggigle through a ritual which was sacred to its founders of the sentimental "Little Women" period.

If the boys and girls can chuck this system "so childish for its age," more power to them. Let the oldsters get out of the way with their frayed and tawdry snobbishness.

Coffee Hour Brings Friends Together Complimentary To Attractive Guests In City

Mrs. M. M. Underwood introduced her attractive house guests, Mrs. Doane Powers (her sister) of Oklahoma City, and Mrs. Blake Jennings, of Norman, Oklahoma, to a few congenials during the coffee hour Thursday and Friday morning.

Garden flowers of pronounced beauty were placed advantageously in the background of the reception suite, where Mrs. Underwood welcomed her guests. A gracious welcome was also extended by Mrs. S. A. Collins in the dining room, where she presided over the coffee table covered with handsome Italian linen cut work and florally adorned with a classic shaped crystal urn overflowing with pink Radiance roses and pink chrysanthemums. Coffee was poured from a handsome silver service. Mrs. W. J. Riley and Mrs. W. E. Wilson assisted in the serving of the delicious confections.

Privileged to meet Mrs. Powers and Mrs. Jennings and to enjoy the charming atmosphere of Mrs. Underwood's home were Mrs. Joe Wright Swift, Miss Alice Hill, Mrs. Chas. Ledoux, Mrs. W. J. Youthful Matron Resents Being Asked Advice About The Rearing Of Children

"I have to admit that I'm getting old," we heard a youthful looking woman say the other day.

"Oh, no, I don't pull out any more white hairs than I did when I was sixteen. I have no wrinkles to speak of, no lordosis curve or baggy eyelids, or two chins. My feet don't hurt. My hands don t tell my friends any tales and nobody yet has heard me maunder about the good old times when I was young in a big way, back there in 1918 and 1920.

"No, far worse than that has happened to me. I have been asked by a panic-stricken neighbor what to do for a first baby with the colic.

"I didn't think a thing about it when she asked my advice about the proper weight for little shirts, and what size blankets, and how many bootees. No, I told her authoritatively that wool wasn't necessary in furnace-heated houses and that the size of the blankets would depend on what kind of a bed she wanted, and that the bootees didn't make any difference, except to display to her friends, because the baby would kick them off and throw one of each pair out of the buggy when she wasn't looking—no, dumbhead that I was, I advised her right and left. Junior is 10 and Sister is 7, and I probably threw more advice around than any mother of twenty-five years' standing ever did.

"And far from making me feel old, it made me feel younger, if I'd thought of the matter at all. But I didn't realize the position in which I was placing myself—what of my time I wasn't using to give advice in, I was sentimentalizing with Mrs. Jones and wishing that the state of the family exchequer would permit me to start laying up infinitesimal shirts, and hand-made slips, and hug-bunnies, and so on.

"But I was rudely awakened when she came bursting in the other day with tearful eyes and breaking voice, and said that the baby was screaming himself to death with the colic, and all the doctors were out on their morning routes and her mother was dead and Bob's mother was in New Orleans and Bobbie, Jr., was all the child she had, and oh, what should she do, what should she do? And I told her not to get so excited; I'd go back with her, an I was sure the baby would be all right.

"And as I telephoned the drug store for simple remedies and trudged down the walk with her with three different sizes of hot water bags under my arm, I thought with reproach of a woman in her early thirties on whom I had called ten years ago. My trouble, if I remember rightly, was that Junior slept so long I was convinced he had sleeping sickness. And I was sick with shame when I recalled how advanced in years this woman had seemed to me, and that she probably realized just how mature I thought she was, too. I hope that I seemed as gracious to my young companion as this doddering female veteran had been to me, but I doubt it.

"Well, I am thoroughly punished for thinking that my waist is only a little bigger, and that my ankles are only a little thicker, and that my hair is, if anything, prettier than was the case thirteen years ago, and that I don't look a lot different from what I did fifteen years back when my husband-to-be and I enrolled in college classes not so much with a view to the welfare of our selected courses as to the probability of our being able to sit together in the classroom. No, I have given up all that. I'm just an old, weathered baby expert of forty years, and I'm going to drink fattening cocoa to help me go to sleep, and be just as comfortable as I can. I'm getting old, and I've admitted it to myself; so I'm certainly not going to the trouble to hide it from the family or the neighbors. A woman of 30 has patronized me, and I bit the bait; also the dust.

"Let 'em bring on their babies—single, twins, quintuplets, if they want to; I'll tell them all they want to know."

Resumption Of Activities In Little Theater

If you have been wondering why our Little Theater has not made known to the public its program for the winter season; if you have felt to no avail the urge to attend a "first night" of "Up Pops the Devil," "Adam and Eva" or "Sun Up," you have neither wondered nor longed in vain. The season is about to begin. The board has met, the stage is set, the plot will soon unfold.

The winter bill for the Monroe Little Theater will include four major productions, each of a different type. The price of a season ticket, involving no obligation will be two dollars; active membership, one dollar. Active membership includes admission to all productions. Plan to join. The plays the thing.

The regular program meeting of the Methodist missionary society met at the church Tuesday night with circle ten in charge of the program. The missionary news was given by Mrs. Nat D. Hurdle. Mrs. John Sholars at the piano. Mrs. A. R. Holloway announced that the zone meeting would be held in Sterlington Tuesday, October 30. The devotional was conducted by Miss Chloe Steel, Miss Steel used for her discussion topic, "The Negro and the Rural South," closing this part of the program with prayer.

An enjoyable feature of the program was a rendition of folk songs by a negro quartet, after which Bell Sherman (colored) told interesting things in regard to the Mary Goss home for the aged negro in Ouachita parish.

Special prayer was offered by Miss Elizabeth Langford, for Miss Julia Reid, who is a missionary in Matanza. Cuba. Miss Reid's school has been closed for a period of three months due to an epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Mrs. Ross Coats gave a most interesting word picture of the McDonnell school, and the rural district around Houma, La.

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction, the hostess for the evening served delicious refreshments from a table covered with a beautiful lace cloth. The flowers used for the center decoration were roses and Rose of Montana. The social hour was enjoyed by all the ladies attending the meeting.

Mrs. John Sholars presided at the piano for the vocal numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Milton and daughter, Rosella Louise, of Los Angeles, Calif., are enjoying a visit with Mr. Milton's mother, Mrs. D. M. Pritchard, in the home of Mrs. Martha Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Parker of Sterlington announce the arrival of a son "Buster" Madison, on the twelfth of October.

BACK TO THE RENAISSANCE

Renaissance colors and materials are a rich source of inspiration for fashions this season. Velveteen, in an antique shade, makes this smart one-piece dress. The little jacket, which is attached only at the front, and the soft pointed collar suggest the renaissance page's costume. White stitching makes neat little bows for the black kid pumps, and the black felt tri-corne further develops the renaissance theme.

Ladies Day At Lakeside Is Attracting The Attention Of All Feminine Members

Interesting announcements have just been named by the committee in charge of Ladies' Day at Lakeside Golf and Country club, on Thursday.

Following the serving of luncheon at twelve-thirty, a bridge tournament will be introduced with Mrs. A. L. Harrington, director. Four silver cocktail cups will be presented by the club, for highest scores at each tournament. With such handsome trophies, naturally interest is running high and already many reservations have been made. The committee hopes to make Ladies' Day at Lakeside one of the outstanding social events of the winter season and with this thought in view requests that every feminine member of the club be present at the luncheon and for bridge later. A golf tournament will also be a feature of each Ladies' Day.

The Ouachita Parish Grammar and High School Parent-Teachers' association held its first meeting Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the parish high school. The banner for the largest number of parents was won by the first grade in the grammar school, and by the twelfth grade in the high school. At the end of the business meeting Mrs. Henry Whitfield, accompanied by Mrs. Julius Kulger, sang "Nocturne." Mrs. Tim Tippit gave an interesting talk on "Eating to Live." Mrs. Goza of the Monroe police force made a short talk on "safety." After the program a social hour was enjoyed in the cafeteria.

. . . Once Upon a Time . . .

IT HAPPENED some thousands of years ago when the world was young. "John Stone-age!" It was Mrs. Stone-age talking. "If you don't get me some decent things for this cave, I don't know what I'll do.

"I've made this old bear hide on the floor last three winters now and it's just about threadbare! Mrs. Scarface, in the very next cave, has a brand new sabre-tooth tiger rug her husband got last week, and he's not a bit handier with his flint-ax than you are.

"Why, I'm even ashamed to have company—and another thing, Willie Speed-foot has painted the cleverest tigers and horses on the walls of their cave and—John! Are you listening to me?"

So John grunted wearily and started out with his best club to bring home a sabre-tooth tiger.

Sometimes the tiger took John home, but that's a different story.

It just goes to show that appearances meant quite a bit then; but they mean even more today. Your home is your background—the setting for your personality. Isn't it about time you gave it a little more consideration?

The old fashioned notion that an attractive home is reserved for the fortunate few possessed of limitless purse or uncommon genius is entirely outgrown. Let us help you plan new beauty for your rooms . . . at a cost you can easily afford through our convenient plan of deferred payments.

Youthful Matron Resents Being Asked Advice About The Rearing Of Children

"I have to admit that I'm getting old," we heard a youthful looking woman say the other day.

"Oh, no, I don't pull out any more white hairs than I did when I was sixteen. I have no wrinkles to speak of, no lordosis curve or baggy eyelids, or two chins. My feet don't hurt. My hands don't tell my friends any tales and nobody yet has heard me maunder about the good old times when I was young in a big way, back there in 1918 and 1920.

"No, far worse than that has happened to me. I have been asked by a panic-stricken neighbor what to do for a first baby with the colic.

"I didn't think a thing about it when she asked my advice about the proper weight for little shirts, and what size blankets, and how many bootees. No, I told her authoritatively that wool wasn't necessary in furnace-heated houses and that the size of the blankets would depend on what kind of a bed she wanted, and that the bootees didn't make any difference, except to display to her friends, because the baby would kick them off and throw one of each pair out of the buggy when she wasn't looking—no, dumbhead that I was, I advised her right and left. Junior is 10 and Sister is 7, and I probably threw more advice around than any mother of twenty-five years' standing ever did.

"And far from making me feel old, it made me feel younger, if I'd thought of the matter at all. But I didn't realize the position in which I was placing myself—what of my time I wasn't using to give advice in, I was sentimentalizing with Mrs. Jones and wishing that the state of the family exchequer would permit me to start laying up infinitesimal shirts, and hand-made slips, and hug-bunnies, and so on.

"But I was rudely awakened when she came bursting in the other day with tearful eyes and breaking voice, and said that the baby was screaming himself to death with the colic, and all the doctors were out on their morning routes and her mother was dead and Bob's mother was in New Orleans and Bobbie, Jr., was all the child she had, and oh, what should she do, what should she do? And I told her not to get so excited; I'd go back with her, an I was sure the baby would be all right.

"And as I telephoned the drug store for simple remedies and trudged down the walk with her with three different sizes of hot water bags under my arm, I thought with reproach of a woman in her early thirties on whom I had called ten years ago. My trouble, if I remember rightly, was that Junior slept so long I was convinced he had sleeping sickness. And I was sick with shame when I recalled how advanced in years this woman had seemed to me, and that she probably realized just how mature I thought she was, too. I hope that I seemed as gracious to my young companion as this doddering female veteran had been to me, but I doubt it.

"Well, I am thoroughly punished for thinking that my waist is only a little bigger, and that my ankles are only a little thicker, and that my hair is, if anything, prettier than was the case thirteen years ago, and that I don't look a lot different from what I did fifteen years back when my husband-to-be and I enrolled in college classes not so much with a view to the welfare of our selected courses as to the probability of our being able to sit together in the classroom. No, I have given up all that. I'm just an old, weathered baby expert of forty years, and I'm going to drink fattening cocoa to help me go to sleep, and be just as comfortable as I can. I'm getting old, and I've admitted it to myself; so I'm certainly not going to the trouble to hide it from the family or the neighbors. A woman of 30 has patronized me, and I bit the bait; also the dust.

"Let 'em bring on their babies—single, twins, quintuplets, if they want to; I'll tell them all they want to know."

Resumption Of Activities In Little Theater

If you have been wondering why our Little Theater has not made known to the public its program for the winter season; if you have felt to no avail the urge to attend a "first night" of "Up Pops the Devil," "Adam and Eva" or "Sun Up," you have neither wondered nor longed in vain. The season is about to begin. The board has met, the stage is set, the plot will soon unfold.

The winter bill for the Monroe Little Theater will include four major productions, each of a different type. The price of a season ticket, involving no obligation will be two dollars; active membership, one dollar. Active membership includes admission to all productions. Plan to join. The plays the thing.

The regular program meeting of the Methodist missionary society met at the church Tuesday night with circle ten in charge of the program. The missionary news was given by Mrs. Nat D. Hurdle. Mrs. John Sholars at the piano. Mrs. A. R. Holloway announced that the zone meeting would be held in Sterlington Tuesday, October 30. The devotional was conducted by Miss Chloe Steel, Miss Steel used for her discussion topic, "The Negro and the Rural South," closing this part of the program with prayer.

An enjoyable feature of the program was a rendition of folk songs by a negro quartet, after which Bell Sherman (colored) told interesting things in regard to the Mary Goss home for the aged negro in Ouachita parish.

Special prayer was offered by Miss Elizabeth Langford, for Miss Julia Reid, who is a missionary in Matanza. Cuba. Miss Reid's school has been closed for a period of three months due to an epidemic of infantile paralysis.

Mrs. Ross Coats gave a most interesting word picture of the McDonnell school, and the rural district around Houma, La.

The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction, the hostess for the evening served delicious refreshments from a table covered with a beautiful lace cloth. The flowers used for the center decoration were roses and Rose of Montana. The social hour was enjoyed by all the ladies attending the meeting.

Mrs. John Sholars presided at the piano for the vocal numbers.

Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Milton and daughter, Rosella Louise, of Los Angeles, Calif., are enjoying a visit with Mr. Milton's mother, Mrs. D. M. Pritchard, in the home of Mrs. Martha Nelson.

Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Parker of Sterlington announce the arrival of a son "Buster" Madison, on the twelfth of October.

BACK TO THE RENAISSANCE

Renaissance colors and materials are a rich source of inspiration for fashions this season. Velveteen, in an antique shade, makes this smart one-piece dress. The little jacket, which is attached only at the front, and the soft pointed collar suggest the renaissance page's costume. White stitching makes neat little bows for the black kid pumps, and the black felt tri-corne further develops the renaissance theme.

Ladies Day At Lakeside Is Attracting The Attention Of All Feminine Members

Interesting announcements have just been named by the committee in charge of Ladies' Day at Lakeside Golf and Country club, on Thursday.

Following the serving of luncheon at twelve-thirty, a bridge tournament will be introduced with Mrs. A. L. Harrington, director. Four silver cocktail cups will be presented by the club, for highest scores at each tournament. With such handsome trophies, naturally interest is running high and already many reservations have been made. The committee hopes to make Ladies' Day at Lakeside one of the outstanding social events of the winter season and with this thought in view requests that every feminine member of the club be present at the luncheon and for bridge later. A golf tournament will also be a feature of each Ladies' Day.

The Ouachita Parish Grammar and High School Parent-Teachers' association held its first meeting Thursday afternoon in the auditorium of the parish high school. The banner for the largest number of parents was won by the first grade in the grammar school, and by the twelfth grade in the high school. At the end of the business meeting Mrs. Henry Whitfield, accompanied by Mrs. Julius Kulger, sang "Nocturne." Mrs. Tim Tippit gave an interesting talk on "Eating to Live." Mrs. Goza of the Monroe police force made a short talk on "safety." After the program a social hour was enjoyed in the cafeteria.

. . . Once Upon a Time . . .

IT HAPPENED some thousands of years ago when the world was young. "John Stone-age!" It was Mrs. Stone-age talking. "If you don't get me some decent things for this cave, I don't know what I'll do.

"I've made this old bear hide on the floor last three winters now and it's just about threadbare! Mrs. Scarface, in the very next cave, has a brand new sabre-tooth tiger rug her husband got last week, and he's not a bit handier with his flint-ax than you are.

"Why, I'm even ashamed to have company—and another thing, Willie Speed-foot has painted the cleverest tigers and horses on the walls of their cave and—John! Are you listening to me?"

So John grunted wearily and started out with his best club to bring home a sabre-tooth tiger.

Sometimes the tiger took John home, but that's a different story.

It just goes to show that appearances meant quite a bit then; but they mean even more today. Your home is your background—the setting for your personality. Isn't it about time you gave it a little more consideration?

The old fashioned notion that an attractive home is reserved for the fortunate few possessed of limitless purse or uncommon genius is entirely outgrown. Let us help you plan new beauty for your rooms . . . at a cost you can easily afford through our convenient plan of deferred payments.

The eleventh birthday anniversary of Bonnie Jean Hickerson, lovely blonde daughter of Mrs. Irene Hickerson, was a happy occasion not only for the young celebrant, but for her friends who shared the pleasures of the day with her at her home at the Layton Place.

The colorful Hallowe'en season was reflected in the favors and in the serving of the orange colored cakes and chocolate ices served in the greatest abundance after an afternoon filled to overflowing with merriment.

SOPHIE KERR'S GREAT NOVEL "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

CHAPTER XIX

Professor Lowe looked down at the tiny baby. "Amy, you must name her," he said. "This continual use of the feminine pronoun annoys me."

"Then you suggest something," Amy prompted. "All fancy and historical names barred."

"Too bad—I was just going to suggest Boadicea or Xenobia or Cleopatra! But there's still Margaret of Navarre and Elizabeth and Mary or good Queen Anne, Helen of Troy, Calphurnia"—

"For heaven's sake, who was she?"

"Amy, I'm ashamed of you. Calphurnia was Julius Caesar's wife."

"Name her Catherine and call her Kitty for short." said Mrs. Lowe. "She's more like a kitten with its eyes not open than anything I ever saw."

They had reached the door. It seemed to Amy, entering, that there had never been any place so beautiful, so welcoming as that old house. The windows were open. The green garden beyond looked in at them. A lazy south breeze stirred the white curtains and brought the honeysuckle. "Oh!" she exclaimed, "I didn't know how sweet it was, or how much I missed it. And you've put flowers around—it makes me want to cry. I'm so glad to be home again."

They left her taking off her hat, opening her bags. As they drove away Professor Lowe said to his wife haltingly: "It has to come to all parents, I suppose, but I didn't know how much it was going to hurt, the moment when their child is definitely done with youth. I always think of Amy as such a lovely, happy young thing, and yet today—I realized—the first real touch of age. It wasn't the fatigue of the trip, nor the worry about Howard. She's been through something more, some difficult experience that's changed her and matured her. And I can tell you, my dear, it hurt me in a queer helpless way. That was why I talked so much nonsense about the infant's name."

"I know. I felt exactly what you mean. But it can't be done. We fathers and mothers can't shelter our children forever. If we did they'd only become cases of arrested development. Whatever Amy's been through is concerned with that baby, I'm sure of that."

"Yes, it must have been a struggle to decide to adopt a child without consulting Howard or any of her friends except that flyaway Jane."

Mrs. Lowe looked sharply at her husband, wondering if he was as unsuspicious as he sounded. If he was she had better keep her own suspicions under cover, for he was quite absent-minded enough to blurt them out at the time and place they would be most awkward. She herself was absolutely sure about the baby, and her old dislike and resentment of Jane's influence over Amy quickened into life. Admiration and pride, too, for her own daughter who must have volunteered to take the child.

She recalled that in her letter telling of the adoption Amy had said that it was a child whose mother did not want it, would not keep it. "Amy will never tell me anything more," she thought. For her own self-respect she added: "And I shall never ask her."

Behind them Amy was hurrying about her house, her fatigue, her strain vanishing under the delight of being with her own again. The baby cried with hunger. She must leave her and go into her homely neat kitchen to prepare fresh food. Everything was in place, responded to her hand. She did not need to fumble or hunt for anything. The wails of the baby went on steadily while Amy poured and measured and tested, and when she ran back upstairs with the bottle and tucked the nipple into the mouth of the wriggling yelling mite, her gurgle of surprise and her greedy sucking made Amy laugh aloud.

"I'll call you Piggen instead of Kitten," she told her, but the baby was too intent on eating to notice the threat. When she was satisfied she dropped off into instant, easy sleep. Amy held the empty bottle and watched her for a few minutes. "She's certainly getting less red and more pink. She looks almost like a real baby now. I do hope she'll be pretty. And I do hope she won't look like Jane—or be like Jane. I must stop thinking about Jane, I must forget her entirely. It's heavenly to be home. If only Howard were here it would be perfect."

Her thoughts marched on, mingling Howard and the baby. One thing she meant to do, tell Howard the whole story of the child, holding back nothing. Then they would put the secret away, never to allude to it, bury it. She had no real misgivings as to Howard's willingness to have the child in their home. Howard would say that she had done the only possible thing. She could depend on Howard, and as she thought of him she caught a new sense of her own great good fortune and riches. To love a man like Howard, and to have his love, with honor and understanding and accord—she had nothing more to wish for, except that they should have children of their own.

Downstairs Mrs. Lowe was rapping at the door. "I've got the cradle. Come and look, Amy. Where do you want it?"

It seemed the best plan to Amy to have the baby in her own bedroom until she was a little older. There was an unfurnished room beside her own that would do for a nursery later.

"It's a very old-fashioned cradle," said Mrs. Lowe, "but it's in good condition and the sides are high enough for safety. You could take the rockers off, I suppose. I believe it's not considered the thing nowadays to rock babies to sleep."

"This baby is going to be rocked to sleep," said Amy, firmly. "And maybe if she sleeps in an old-fashioned cradle she'll grow up to be a nice old-fashioned girl."

"It doesn't exactly follow. But don't let's start the argument of heredity versus environment. Personally I've always bet on heredity."

"Oh Mother, have you! But you can't be sure!"

There was such dismay in Amy's voice that Mrs. Lowe's suspicions became a certainty. This was it, it must be, Jane Terry's child! "No, silly, of course I'm not sure. Nobody's sure. Don't the best families always have a black sheep, and don't some of the meanest, most low-down people imaginable have children that are perfect models? The only thing to do with children is to keep them healthy and teach them manners. They're bound to make their morals for themselves."

Amy did not carry the argument farther. But in the days between her own home coming and that of Howard, she thought of her mother's frank statement of uncertainty—when she had any time to think at all. She had a great deal to do and she was glad of it, for again there was a lapse in messages from Howard and Professor Ellert, and the suspense was hard. All of her Marburg friends came to see her, excited and amused by the baby, some of them exceedingly curious as well.

She had to parry and evade their questions as well as she could, but she was glad none of them even remotely suggested that it might be Jane's child, not even Miss Rosa, who commented that anyone who took a child to raise was surely a glutton for trouble. The baby was growing, becoming active, noticing light and movement and taking on the pink and white curves of a healthy, proper infant. But still she had no name and Amy would not give her one. "I'll wait for Howard to choose it," she said.

Amy had come home late in August and it was late in September and the first semester of the college year had commenced—with much uncertainty and confusion as to the geological courses—when, one morning, very early ,the telephone range. Half asleep Amy reached from her bed and put the receiver to her ear. The connection was bad and someone was talking very fast, stammering the words, and at first she couldn't make it out. Then she heard!

"Darling, darling, darling!" came the faraway rushing voice, "hurry, speak to me. I've been nearly crazy—"

"Howard—Howard—oh where are you, where are you?"

SOPHIE KERR'S GREAT NOVEL "STAY OUT OF MY LIFE!"

By Sophie Kerr

CHAPTER XIX

Professor Lowe looked down at the tiny baby. "Amy, you must name her," he said. "This continual use of the feminine pronoun annoys me."

"Then you suggest something," Amy prompted. "All fancy and historical names barred."

"Too bad—I was just going to suggest Boadicea or Xenobia or Cleopatra! But there's still Margaret of Navarre and Elizabeth and Mary or good Queen Anne, Helen of Troy, Calphurnia"—

"For heaven's sake, who was she?"

"Amy, I'm ashamed of you. Calphurnia was Julius Caesar's wife."

"Name her Catherine and call her Kitty for short." said Mrs. Lowe. "She's more like a kitten with its eyes not open than anything I ever saw."

They had reached the door. It seemed to Amy, entering, that there had never been any place so beautiful, so welcoming as that old house. The windows were open. The green garden beyond looked in at them. A lazy south breeze stirred the white curtains and brought the honeysuckle. "Oh!" she exclaimed, "I didn't know how sweet it was, or how much I missed it. And you've put flowers around—it makes me want to cry. I'm so glad to be home again."

They left her taking off her hat, opening her bags. As they drove away Professor Lowe said to his wife haltingly: "It has to come to all parents, I suppose, but I didn't know how much it was going to hurt, the moment when their child is definitely done with youth. I always think of Amy as such a lovely, happy young thing, and yet today—I realized—the first real touch of age. It wasn't the fatigue of the trip, nor the worry about Howard. She's been through something more, some difficult experience that's changed her and matured her. And I can tell you, my dear, it hurt me in a queer helpless way. That was why I talked so much nonsense about the infant's name."

"I know. I felt exactly what you mean. But it can't be done. We fathers and mothers can't shelter our children forever. If we did they'd only become cases of arrested development. Whatever Amy's been through is concerned with that baby, I'm sure of that."

"Yes, it must have been a struggle to decide to adopt a child without consulting Howard or any of her friends except that flyaway Jane."

Mrs. Lowe looked sharply at her husband, wondering if he was as unsuspicious as he sounded. If he was she had better keep her own suspicions under cover, for he was quite absent-minded enough to blurt them out at the time and place they would be most awkward. She herself was absolutely sure about the baby, and her old dislike and resentment of Jane's influence over Amy quickened into life. Admiration and pride, too, for her own daughter who must have volunteered to take the child.

She recalled that in her letter telling of the adoption Amy had said that it was a child whose mother did not want it, would not keep it. "Amy will never tell me anything more," she thought. For her own self-respect she added: "And I shall never ask her."

Behind them Amy was hurrying about her house, her fatigue, her strain vanishing under the delight of being with her own again. The baby cried with hunger. She must leave her and go into her homely neat kitchen to prepare fresh food. Everything was in place, responded to her hand. She did not need to fumble or hunt for anything. The wails of the baby went on steadily while Amy poured and measured and tested, and when she ran back upstairs with the bottle and tucked the nipple into the mouth of the wriggling yelling mite, her gurgle of surprise and her greedy sucking made Amy laugh aloud.

"I'll call you Piggen instead of Kitten," she told her, but the baby was too intent on eating to notice the threat. When she was satisfied she dropped off into instant, easy sleep. Amy held the empty bottle and watched her for a few minutes. "She's certainly getting less red and more pink. She looks almost like a real baby now. I do hope she'll be pretty. And I do hope she won't look like Jane—or be like Jane. I must stop thinking about Jane, I must forget her entirely. It's heavenly to be home. If only Howard were here it would be perfect."

Her thoughts marched on, mingling Howard and the baby. One thing she meant to do, tell Howard the whole story of the child, holding back nothing. Then they would put the secret away, never to allude to it, bury it. She had no real misgivings as to Howard's willingness to have the child in their home. Howard would say that she had done the only possible thing. She could depend on Howard, and as she thought of him she caught a new sense of her own great good fortune and riches. To love a man like Howard, and to have his love, with honor and understanding and accord—she had nothing more to wish for, except that they should have children of their own.

Downstairs Mrs. Lowe was rapping at the door. "I've got the cradle. Come and look, Amy. Where do you want it?"

It seemed the best plan to Amy to have the baby in her own bedroom until she was a little older. There was an unfurnished room beside her own that would do for a nursery later.

"It's a very old-fashioned cradle," said Mrs. Lowe, "but it's in good condition and the sides are high enough for safety. You could take the rockers off, I suppose. I believe it's not considered the thing nowadays to rock babies to sleep."

"This baby is going to be rocked to sleep," said Amy, firmly. "And maybe if she sleeps in an old-fashioned cradle she'll grow up to be a nice old-fashioned girl."

"It doesn't exactly follow. But don't let's start the argument of heredity versus environment. Personally I've always bet on heredity."

"Oh Mother, have you! But you can't be sure!"

There was such dismay in Amy's voice that Mrs. Lowe's suspicions became a certainty. This was it, it must be, Jane Terry's child! "No, silly, of course I'm not sure. Nobody's sure. Don't the best families always have a black sheep, and don't some of the meanest, most low-down people imaginable have children that are perfect models? The only thing to do with children is to keep them healthy and teach them manners. They're bound to make their morals for themselves."

Amy did not carry the argument farther. But in the days between her own home coming and that of Howard, she thought of her mother's frank statement of uncertainty—when she had any time to think at all. She had a great deal to do and she was glad of it, for again there was a lapse in messages from Howard and Professor Ellert, and the suspense was hard. All of her Marburg friends came to see her, excited and amused by the baby, some of them exceedingly curious as well.

She had to parry and evade their questions as well as she could, but she was glad none of them even remotely suggested that it might be Jane's child, not even Miss Rosa, who commented that anyone who took a child to raise was surely a glutton for trouble. The baby was growing, becoming active, noticing light and movement and taking on the pink and white curves of a healthy, proper infant. But still she had no name and Amy would not give her one. "I'll wait for Howard to choose it," she said.

Amy had come home late in August and it was late in September and the first semester of the college year had commenced—with much uncertainty and confusion as to the geological courses—when, one morning, very early ,the telephone range. Half asleep Amy reached from her bed and put the receiver to her ear. The connection was bad and someone was talking very fast, stammering the words, and at first she couldn't make it out. Then she heard!

"Darling, darling, darling!" came the faraway rushing voice, "hurry, speak to me, I've been nearly crazy—"

"Howard—Howard—oh where are you, where are you?"

L. S. U. RALLIES IN FOURTH PERIOD TO WIN, 16-0

TIGERS' OFFENSE STARTS TO CLICK LATE IN BATTLE

Long Pass Scores First Touchdown And Starts Points Mounting

By Quincy Ewing
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 20.—Breaking through the Razorback defense in a second half drive, which a 50-yard touchdown throw from Abe Mickal's deadly passing arm opened up like a bungstarter blow loosens a barrel plug, Louisiana State university's scoring power washed over the University of Arkansas today, 16 to 0.

The Porkers couldn't stand up before the alternating power of two complete Tiger teams under a blazing sun, and a variety of offense that found after a scoreless first half just where the Arkansas weak spots were and made the most of them. Two touchdowns and a safety accounted for the points.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for Louisiana State over the Razorbacks in a renewal of an old traditional rivalry dating back more than a quarter of a century, and was recorded before one of the largest and rampantly enthusiastic crowds that ever saw any previous encounter between the Cardinal and White and Old Gold and Purple. About 12,000 saw the game.

Louisiana's triumph afforded Senator Huey P. Long, ardent backer of State's football destinies, cause for chortling glee, as he watched the score rung up from a sideline seat on the Tiger players bench, and disappointment for Gov. and Mrs. J. M. Futtrell and Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. Lee Cazort of Arkansas, the senator's official guests.

After feeling out Arkansas threats for the first two periods with first and second-stringers, Louisiana started to town in the fourth period with Abe Mickal practically repeating the sizzling long pass that dramatically enabled State to tie S. M. U. two weeks ago in the last three minutes of play.

Mickal, with the ball on the Tiger 48-yard line, drifted back to his 30, and spiralled the ball to Jess Fatherree, fleet State back who, racing toward the Arkansas goal as he caught it on the Porker 20-yard line, speeded over the line.

Mickal kicked extra point for what was his eighteenth successful placement conversion in 19 consecutive tries.

In the next quarter, with Arkansas spurred on and fighting harder as result of the touchdown, Sullivan, substitute for Lawrie, broke through a wide open hole at left tackle, and raced over the goal for another marker. Bill Crass, substitute for Seago at full, booted the point.

The second touchdown was scored by the Louisiana second team.

Later in the final period, when Arkansas had the ball on their 20-yard line after an attempted field goal by Crass fell short, LaForge was rushed so hard by charging Tiger linemen that he was forced back over the line for a safety.

Arkansas played hard, and flashy individual threats by Geiser, Jordan and LaForge taxed Louisiana's alertness and line play. Jordan and LaForge bothered the Tigers considerably, particularly in the first half, by mixing up short passes that were consistently good for yards that either gave or helped to give first down, with line-splitting smashes that made the linesmen gather up and advance their chains further toward the Louisiana goal.

The Razorbacks came with a split hair of scoring a touchdown in the final quarter when Jordan from his 37 heaved a long one to Lake, who raked it in on the L. S. U. 20 and with a clear field, dropped the ball on the 6-yard line.

That was the high water mark for Arkansas.

Louisiana twice was about to hit a gold strike in the first and thrd periods but both times failed to score.

In the first period, Louisiana had the ball on the Arkansas 14 after a punt exchange in which Mickal bested Jordan, and some hard-driving running plays, and Mickal shot an almost flat pass, aimed at a touchdown. It could have been caught by more than one Tiger receiver, but Newby, Razorback center, grabbed it on his 7 and returned it to the 17. That was the end of that when the Hogs punted.

Two periods later, Newby tried to repeat the play, and actually caught a Mickal pass on his 32, but Barrett, L. S. U. end, snatched it out of his hands. Mickal slashed center for 15 yards to the 17, and line pounding advanced the ball to the Arkansas three-yard line.

Louisiana had the ball on the Razorback 14-yard line as the game ended.

The line-ups:

Georgia Fails To Kick Extra Point And Tulane Wins, 7-6

SIMONS' KICK OF PLACEMENT GIVES GREENIES VICTORY

Tulane Protects Early Lead Until Late In Thrilling Battle

By Ralph Wheatley
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Tulane defeated Georgia 7 to 6 here today in a vicious gridiron struggle that turned 23,000 fans into nervous wrecks.

The result showed that Monk Simons, Tulane's powerful halfback, was a better kicker than Georgia's star, John Bond, who lost the game by failing to boot the extra point after he had played his heart out on the field.

Tulane nosed out ahead after throwing away two touchdowns on fumbles on the ten-yard line with the team driving hard and well toward the goal line.

Until the fourth quarter, it looked as if Tulane had the game on ice and would coast to a seven to nothing victory when all of a sudden, Georgia lashed out with a vicious and desperate passing attack that fed a ball into the arms of Henry Wagnon, Georgia's end from Bostwick, Ga., who started for the goal eighty yards away. As he started a half-dozen red-shirted Georgians draped him with interference and bowled over Tulane Greenie after Greenie until all Wagnon had to do was to lope over the goal line.

The teams were tense, the stands were wild and Bond came up to kick the extra point. He booted the ball but it floated straight to one of the goal standards, hit it and bounced back and left the score seven to six.

The second quarter saw great football full of fire and dash. Twice, Tulane charged with the ball to Georgia's ten-yard line but on the first trip Bucky Bryan, Tulane's speedster, fumbled and G. Johnson recovered for Georgia. Soon after Tulane marched back, and stood poised for the plunge for the goal line when Lodrigues, Tulane's fullback, dropped the ball as he hit the line and Law recovered for Georgia.

The stands groaned. The Tulane team got mad. They began working the ball back down the field and on the 33-yard line, Monk Simons, as tough a halfback as ever wore a uniform, started toward the left, switched to the right, throwing the whole Georgia team off balance and raced across the line with only one Georgian trying to snatch his legs. He then kicked the extra point.

The first quarter was an even exchange of kicking and charging with progress made by neither side. But the second quarter found Tulane outplaying Georgia, cracking the line, running the ends and giving indications that the Greenies would romp over the Bulldogs until the Greenies ran into the costly fumbles.

In the third quarter they seesawed back and forth, each struggling for a break. In the battle, Tulane weakened and Georgia started a touchdown drive off of a 30-yard punt return of G. Johnson, halfback, which carried the ball to the 45-yard line, where Anderson, halfback, broke off for a 15-yard broken field run that turned the Georgians into a rally. Green, fullback, then took it to the 16-yard line and plunged another yard to the 15-yard line.

Here, Georgia stood with first down on the 15-yard line, rearing and snorting to go, but Tulane buckled down to a fine defensive and held the Georgians on downs, getting the ball on the 14-yard line and worked the ball out of the danger zone.

Tulane made another touchdown threat in the fourth quarter but it was broken up by a fumble by Monk Simons, which opened the way for Georgia's touchdown. The fumble was recovered by Charles Treadaway on Georgia's 21-yard line. A 15-yard penalty against Georgia pushed the Bulldogs back to the six-yard line.

Alabama Trims Stubborn Tennessee Eleven, 13-6

Crimsons Come Back After Vols Tie Score To Gain Close Win

By Kenneth Gregory
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

LEGION FIELD, BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 20.—Alabama's Crimson Tide, displaying powerful offensive tactics and defended by an almost impenetrable line, drove to a convincing 13 to 6 victory over Tennessee this afternoon.

Through the triumph, the red-shirted warriors from Tuscaloosa advanced to the front ranks in the contention for championship honors in the Southeastern conference and shattered hopeful ambitions of the Volunteers of Knoxville.

It was the sixth defeat Tennessee has suffered since Major Bob Neyland took over the coaching reins in 1926 and was the third time the Tide had whipped the Vols in the last seven years: having emerged victorious in 1930 and 1933.

The spectacular win over Tennessee, achieved through the pile-driving slashes of its backfield, excellent line play, and featured by the great running, passing and kicking of Millard (Dixie) Howell, sent Alabama out in front in the conference race with three successive triumphs, the Tide already having conquered Sewanee and Mississippi State.

As they lined up for the opening kickoff, Tennessee and Alabama moved into the battle with undefeated and untied records. The Crimson Tide fought hard throughout, forced the Volunteers to the defensive the greater part of the game and pulled through with its record still unmarred.

Alabama, after muffing a chance to shove over a touchdown in the scoreless first period, advancing close to Tennessee's goal on runs and passes engineered by the fleet-footed Howell, opened the scoring early in the second quarter. On the second play of that period Howell fired a 28-yard pass to Hutson, giant end, who continued eight yards to Tennessee's 12. Dixie then picked up five and Demyanovich, a great line plunger, sliced through left guard and across the goal. The attempt to convert was blocked.

The Volunteers suddenly came to life as the intermission neared. Pug Vaughn, Tennessee's colorful halfback, began firing passes with two minutes left to play and the Gold and White eleven charged deep into Alabama territory. With the ball resting on the Tide's 17, Vaughn whipped a short pass to Palmer, who raced to the one-yard stripe. After two plays, Pete Craig lunged through center for the score, but the attempted placekick for the extra point was wide.

Early in the third period Alabama got a break when Palmer's high punt hit on Tennessee's 38-yard line and bounded backward to the 23. Two

Contest Winners Announced Tuesday

The annual guess-em football contest started off with a bang last week, with a couple of hundred entrants in the first of the weekly test which will continue until the end of the season.

The winners will be announced Tuesday morning and a new blank will be published Wednesday morning. Prizes for the first week's contest are: First prize, a Riegel Third Dimension shirt, donated by Sig Haas and Sons; second prize, a $2.50 meal ticket, given by Frenchie's Cafe No. 2, and third prize, a three-months subscription to The Morning World.

There were several upsets yesterday and if you guessed right, you have a good chance to take down one of those prizes. Jock Sutherland missed eight games, Harry Grayson muffed six and George Lofton five. Sutherland failed to guess any of the scores correctly, while Grayson and Lofton hit one each on the head.

VANDY SCORES IN LAST MINUTE TO NOSE OUT AUBURN

Plainsmen Lead 6-0 Until Dixon's Pass Connects With Geny

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 20.—(AP)—An inspired Auburn eleven threw a tremendous scare into Vanderbilt supporters this afternoon, but the Commodores had percentages in their favor and eked out a 7 to 6 victory by means of a last-minute touchdown.

Outfought, outcharged and sometimes out-thought by the Plainsmen, Vanderbilt nevertheless had an unlucky time of it. Rand Dixon dropped enough beautiful passes into the arms of his butter-fingered mates to have rolled up an impressive score, but only one of the long beauties connected.

It occurred in that last minute of play, when lowly Auburn was leading the Commodores, 6 to 0, and all hope seemed hopeless. Then stepped forth Willie Geny, a substitute end whose God-father must have been Frank Merriwell. With the aid of percentages—one of them was bound to hit—Geny hung on to a 15-yard pass from Dixon and raced the remaining 15 yards to the goal. Peebles, sub halfback, placekicked the winning point.

But there must be proud folk back in Auburn's lair tonight. The Maroons, beaten by L. S. U. and Tulane, were recognized as likely any time to oust a championship contender, and until the last minute, it looked like Vanderbilt was that victim. Auburn was a superb team today.

GOPHERS RALLY TO TRIM PITT IN THRILLING GAME

Minnesota, Outplayed For Three Quarters, Comes Back To Win

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A slumbering Golden Giant—Minnesota's might offense—awoke with a start late today and in fifteen brief, thrill-soaked minutes, crushed Pittsburgh, 13 to 7, knocked the Panthers out of the national title hunt for the second straight year, and trundled off toward new triumphs with 65,850 fans staring and gasping in the wake.

The burly Norsemen rose in that final quarter, and in two tremendous blasts, scored two touchdowns, and paraded off unbeaten in the title race.

Through the first two periods, Minnesota never had possession of the ball past its own 32-yard line, in fact had hold of it only eight times all told in the first half. Only a magnificent defense in the crucial moments had kept the Panthers even seven points at bay—the result a 64-yard lateral from Izzy Weinstock to Mike Nicksick, and Weinstock's perfect kick for the extra point in the final seconds of the half.

In the third quarter Bob Larue muffed a pass from center for a 25-yard loss, and Miller Munjas, a phenominal kicker, bobbled another for ten yards in kick formation, and the Panthers were back on their own three-yard line.

The slumbering Golden Giant stirred, took heart, and as Stanislaus Kostka came roaring into the game, shook off shackles for the first time. As the third quarter ended, Kostka smashed the Pitt line twice for gains of eight and nine yards and the first first down Minnesota had been able to score.

On the first play of the fourth quarter Alphonse, on a neat reverse, broke through the line and raced 22 yards over the Pitt goal.

"Pug" Lund swung into stride beside Kostka, and in short, but tremendous bursts that flattened the tired Pitt forwards, ripped 47 yards to the Panther 17. There Quarterback Glen Seudel faded back, tossed a lateral to Kostka, who in turn tossed back to Lund. Lund found his big end, Bob Tenner, loose on the ten-yard line and hurled a perfect forward pass. Tenner had only ten yards to go to score. Bevan missed that point but the damage was done.

Score by periods:

Minnesota	0	0	0	13—13
Pittsburgh	0	7	0	0—7

Minnesota scoring: Touchdowns, Alphonse, Tenner. Points after touchdowns, W. Bevan.

Pittsburgh scoring: Touchdowns, Nicksick. Point after touchdown, Weinstock.

ARMY TROUNCES SEWANEE, 20-0

Cadets Use Second And Third String Teams To Whip Southerners

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Without subjecting its two backfield aces, Captain Joe Stancook and Texas Jack Buckler, to a moment's wear and tear, Army disposed of its fourth intersectional foe before 8,000 fans in Michie stadium today by whipping the University of the South of Sewanee, Tenn., 20 to 0.

The Purple-shirted Tennesseans, one of the lightest teams ever to appear hereabouts, could not stop even the mixture of second and third-string players Army sent into action, but put up a tenacious battle and made several threatening gestures via the forward pass, on one occasion covering 50 yards in six plays, four of which were completed aerials.

Maurice "Ozzie" Simons, senior from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., put over two touchdowns in the first period, scoring within three minutes of the opening kick-off on an eight-yard plunge after Army had recovered a Sewanee fumble in the southerners' 30-yard line.

The Kansas boy crossed the line again just before the quarter closed on a 21-yard gallop.

It was Charles Meyer, a 152-pound yearling from Fort Sheridan, Ill., though, who did most of the ball-carrying business for the Cadets besides uncovering talent and power as a punter.

Meyer furnished the motive power for a brief Army drive midway of the second period which covered 55 yards in nine plays and ended with Meyer plunging over from four yards out.

Forward passes from Hartrich to Pearson and Poage to Hartrich gave a first string Army line some worries in the third period, but Halfback Carl Goldenberg of Lynchburg, Va., came up with some timely interceptions and no real scoring threat developed. Army's make-shift line-up was likewise unable to put on a sustained drive.

Score by periods:

Army	14	6	0	0—20

Army scoring: Touchdowns, Simons (2), Meyer (sub for Simons), points after touchdowns, Martz (2) (place kicks). Officials: Referee, W. H. Friesell, (Princeton); umpire, C. J. McCarthy, Jr.; linesman, M. J. Thompson, (Georgetown); field judge, C. A. Brumbaugh, (Penn State).

TIGER FANS MAY CHARTER SPECIAL

Attractive Program Arranged For Vicksburg Trip On Oct. 29

Plans for combining a historical program with one of athletics at Vicksburg, Miss., when the Tigers of Neville high school go there November 9 to meet the Carr Central high school eleven, are being made by officials of the two schools and the Chamber of Commerce of Vicksburg, according to an announcement made here yesterday.

Neville leaders are negotiating for a special train with which they hope to transport more than 200 students as well as a group of Monroe supporters to Vicksburg and special round-trip rates have been made. Adults will be able to make the round-trip for $1.50 while children under eleven years of age will be charged 75c.

It is the present plan of the two schools, according to a letter received here from Crawford McGivaren, principal of the Vicksburg school, for the Neville delegation to arrive in Vicksburg about noon, and, through the courtesy of the Vicksburg Chamber of Commerce, make a tour of Vicksburg's historical National park and to inspect the government's flood control experiment project there. Capable guides will be provided by the Vicksburg Chamber of Commerce to show the Neville fans about the city.

The tentative program as announced by W. C. Spight, in charge of arrangements at Neville, is as follows: Leave Monroe by special train about 8:30 a.m. on day of the game, arrive in Vicksburg about noon and spread their noon-day lunch on the banks of the Mississippi river; spend the afternoon touring the park and inspecting the government project, and then watch the Tigers and Carr Central eleven tie up on the gridiron at 7:30 p.m. They are scheduled to return here about midnight, leaving Vicksburg soon after the game.

Persons wishing to make the trip on the special train are requested to make reservations before October 29 by calling at the office at Neville high school.

Jonesboro Tigers Beat Bossier City, 12 To 6

JONESBORO, La., Oct. 20.—(Special.)—The Jonesboro Tigers ran into much tougher opposition than they were expecting Friday afternoon and barely emerged victors by a 12-6 count over a hard-fighting Bossier City eleven.

The game was barely two minutes old before the Tigers, showing the scoring punch local fans were expecting from them, rushed the ball to the visitors 12-yard line, only to lose the ball on a fumble. Forcing the Bearkats to punt, the Tigers again opened up and after rushing the ball to the 15-yard line Michaud dropped back and threw a pass to Fowler for the initial score.

In the third quarter after Bossier City had punted to the Tiger 10-yard line, Eddie Michaud, star quarter, personally conducted an 80-yard advance on spectacular off-tackle drives to the Bearkat 10-yard marker, where, with the visitors' line drawn in to stop his savage smashes, he sent Pattison on an end-around-end play to the scoring station.

With a 12-point lead the Tigers seemed to ease up only to have Bond, Bearkat second stringer, dash through them for 90-yards for a touchdown on the following kick-off. From this point on it was a hard-fought battle with Partin and Peters, 250-pound Bossier tackles, playing splendid defensive ball and the Tigers forced to halt a scoring threat when a bad pass gave the visitors the ball on Jonesboro's 25-yard stripe. The big Tiger line was equal to the occasion and took the ball without a yard's advance.

In yardage gained the Tigers had a decided advantage, amassing a total of 18 first downs to their opponents' three.

Light Tennessee Eleven No Match For Mississippi Staters

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Mississippi State completely outclassed a lighter Southwestern eleven here today to win, 21 to 6.

Only once did the Lynx enter Mississippi State territory, and that was in the final period when they made their single touchdown. Rasberry snagged a 15-yard pass from Dunlap and then ran through a broken field 49 yards to place the ball on the Maroons' nine-yard line. Then Chapman took a short heave from Dunlap to score.

State scored early in the second quarter when Burch went over the left side of the line. Two more touchdowns were made in the last period, one by Armstrong who also hit the left side of the Lynx's line and one by Pickle who took a 23-yard pass from Armstrong and raced 23 yards across the goal.

Haley, Pickle and Armstrong added three points with placements after touchdowns.

Furman Eleven Defeats Crippled Mercer Team

MACON, Ga., Oct. 20.—(AP)—The Furman university Hurricane swept aside a crippled Mercer university football team, 9 to 3, here today in a crushing fourth-period rally.

Entering the fourth period with Mercer leading, 3-0, the Furman squad drove from midfield for a touchdown, and soon thereafter kicked a field goal to clinch the victory. Furman had missed two tries for a field goal earlier in the game.

Lacking scoring power, due to illness of five of its first string players, the Mercer Bears were unable to cope with the driving attack of the Furman machine which recently held the proud Bulldogs of University of Georgia to a 7-2 victory.

It's True, Girls, The Trojans Really ARE Movie Mad

By Dan Thomas
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 20.—When Jack Frankish, editor of the Daily Trojan, University of Southern California student paper, recently charged the Trojan grid squad with being "Hollywood struck," he told only half the story.

"The players are Hollywood struck . . . toys to some henna-haired beauty," wrote Editor Frankish.

But he stopped too soon. Behind his charges are numerous interesting facts.

Although looked upon as gods and goddesses themselves, Hollywood's shadowy celebrities are the most ardent hero-worshippers to be found anywhere. Anyone who breaks into the limelight in some other field is as great to them as they are to millions of theater-goers.

Cotton Warburton, all-America quarterback, broke into the spotlight last year. An obscure sophomore at the opening of the season, he suddenly became the gridiron rage of America. And at the same time he became one of the most important figures in Hollywood.

Mary Carlisle strutted like a peacock when he asked her for a date. Rochelle Hudson was the envy of every girl in the Coconut Grove when she appeared there with him.

Naturally these young actresses made a fuss over the tow-headed ball carrier. He was the rage of the hour and it meant a lot to them to be seen with him.

And Warburton didn't take their compliments with the proverbial grain of salt. Like the movie stars themselves, he believed everything—believed that he was a great fellow, and indispensable to the team.

Warburton started the present campaign in the same frame of mind. All summer Mary, Rochelle, Toby Wing, and Sally Blane continued to sing his praises. Each of them was sure that he would be greater than ever this fall.

Cotton had much the same idea. As long as he was packing the ball, the Trojans would win. How the rest of the team performed wouldn't make much difference.

The rest took him at his word. If he was so good, let him prove it. The result has been that Warburton has given a very poor account of himself in every game this season.

Haskell (Inky) Wotkyns, who showed such promise at fullback last season, is another who failed to show anything at all this year.

Wotkyns, too, has been a target for Hollywood's younger beauties. He has dined at the Brown Derby with Judith Allen, and danced in the Biltmore Bowl with Dorothy Drake. And their praises apparently have been just a little too much for him.

Another who has fallen down is Bill Howard, who alternates at quarterback with Warburton. Last year he appeared to be a great bet. Now he looks bad against even weak competition.

Howard also has been subjected to the flattery of the beautiful young screen actresses. He, too, has been seen with Miss Carlisle, who apparently has some influence upon football players. They seem to value her comments above those of Coach Howard Jones.

Filmland's beauties have been quick to absolve themselves of any blame for the team's downfall, however.

"Sure, I've had dates with some of the fellows," one actress told me. "They're good dancers and lots of fun. But I also have dates with other fellows and they don't get swelled up about it. So why should the football players?

"If they're swell-headed, they got that way themselves. I'm sure I didn't do it. And I didn't try to make toys out of the boys, either."

Hollywood really is mad about being drawn into this attack upon the Trojans. In the past it already has been blamed for enough things—corrupting the morals of the nation, the decline of the legitimate stage, encouraging crime, popularizing drinking.

And it doesn't want the Trojans' downfall added to the list.

Southern Methodist Wins From Oklahoma A. and M.

FAIR PARK STADIUM, DALLAS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Southern Methodist university's Mustangs, grabbing every break in sight and offering a stiff defense, walloped the Oklahoma A. and M. Cowboys of the Missouri Valley conference, 41-0, before a state fair of Texas crowd of 10,000 here today.

Not once did the Aggies threaten the Mustang goal line, while Southern Methodist's backs—droves of them—swung around the field in sparkling long and short dashes to overwhelm the Sooner state team.

TIGERS' OFFENSE STARTS TO CLICK LATE IN BATTLE

Long Pass Scores First Touchdown And Starts Points Mounting

By Quincy Ewing
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

SHREVEPORT, La., Oct. 20.—Breaking through the Razorback defense in a second half drive, which a 50-yard touchdown throw from Abe Mickal's deadly passing arm opened up like a bungstarter blow loosens a barrel plug, Louisiana State university's scoring power washed over the University of Arkansas today, 16 to 0.

The Porkers couldn't stand up before the alternating power of two complete Tiger teams under a blazing sun, and a variety of offense that found after a scoreless first half just where the Arkansas weak spots were and made the most of them. Two touchdowns and a safety accounted for the points.

It was the fifth consecutive victory for Louisiana State over the Razorbacks in a renewal of an old traditional rivalry dating back more than a quarter of a century, and was recorded before one of the largest and rampantly enthusiastic crowds that ever saw any previous encounter between the Cardinal and White and Old Gold and Purple. About 12,000 saw the game.

Louisiana's triumph afforded Senator Huey P. Long, ardent backer of State's football destinies, cause for chortling glee, as he watched the score rung up from a sideline seat on the Tiger players bench, and disappointment for Gov. and Mrs. J. M. Futtrell and Lieut.-Gov. and Mrs. Lee Cazort of Arkansas, the senator's official guests.

After feeling out Arkansas threats for the first two periods with first and second-stringers, Louisiana started to town in the fourth period with Abe Mickal practically repeating the sizzling long pass that dramatically enabled State to tie S. M. U. two weeks ago in the last three minutes of play.

Mickal, with the ball on the Tiger 48-yard line, drifted back to his 30, and spiralled the ball to Jess Fatherree, fleet State back who, racing toward the Arkansas goal as he caught it on the Porker 20-yard line, speeded over the line.

Mickal kicked extra point for what was his eighteenth successful placement conversion in 19 consecutive tries.

In the next quarter, with Arkansas spurred on and fighting harder as result of the touchdown, Sullivan, substitute for Lawrie, broke through a wide open hole at left tackle, and raced over the goal for another marker. Bill Crass, substitute for Seago at full, booted the point.

The second touchdown was scored by the Louisiana second team.

Later in the final period, when Arkansas had the ball on their 20-yard line after an attempted field goal by Crass fell short, LaForge was rushed so hard by charging Tiger linemen that he was forced back over the line for a safety.

Arkansas played hard, and flashy individual threats by Geiser, Jordan and LaForge taxed Louisiana's alertness and line play. Jordan and LaForge bothered the Tigers considerably, particularly in the first half, by mixing up short passes that were consistently good for yards that either gave or helped to give first down, with line-splitting smashes that made the linesmen gather up and advance their chains further toward the Louisiana goal.

The Razorbacks came with a split hair of scoring a touchdown in the final quarter when Jordan from his 37 heaved a long one to Lake, who raked it in on the L. S. U. 20 and with a clear field, dropped the ball on the 6-yard line.

That was the high water mark for Arkansas.

Louisiana twice was about to hit a gold strike in the first and thrd periods but both times failed to score.

In the first period, Louisiana had the ball on the Arkansas 14 after a punt exchange in which Mickal bested Jordan, and some hard-driving running plays, and Mickal shot an almost flat pass, aimed at a touchdown. It could have been caught by more than one Tiger receiver, but Newby, Razorback center, grabbed it on his 7 and returned it to the 17. That was the end of that when the Hogs punted.

Two periods later, Newby tried to repeat the play, and actually caught a Mickal pass on his 32, but Barrett, L. S. U. end, snatched it out of his hands. Mickal slashed center for 15 yards to the 17, and line pounding advanced the ball to the Arkansas three-yard line.

Louisiana had the ball on the Razorback 14-yard line as the game ended.

The line-ups:

SIMONS' KICK OF PLACEMENT GIVES GREENIES VICTORY

Tulane Protects Early Lead Until Late In Thrilling Battle

By Ralph Wheatley
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Tulane defeated Georgia 7 to 6 here today in a vicious gridiron struggle that turned 23,000 fans into nervous wrecks.

The result showed that Monk Simons, Tulane's powerful halfback, was a better kicker than Georgia's star, John Bond, who lost the game by failing to boot the extra point after he had played his heart out on the field.

Tulane nosed out ahead after throwing away two touchdowns on fumbles on the ten-yard line with the team driving hard and well toward the goal line.

Until the fourth quarter, it looked as if Tulane had the game on ice and would coast to a seven to nothing victory when all of a sudden, Georgia lashed out with a vicious and desperate passing attack that fed a ball into the arms of Henry Wagnon, Georgia's end from Bostwick, Ga., who started for the goal eighty yards away. As he started a half-dozen red-shirted Georgians draped him with interference and bowled over Tulane Greenie after Greenie until all Wagnon had to do was to lope over the goal line.

The teams were tense, the stands were wild and Bond came up to kick the extra point. He booted the ball but it floated straight to one of the goal standards, hit it and bounced back and left the score seven to six.

The second quarter saw great football full of fire and dash. Twice, Tulane charged with the ball to Georgia's ten-yard line but on the first trip Bucky Bryan, Tulane's speedster, fumbled and G. Johnson recovered for Georgia. Soon after Tulane marched back, and stood poised for the plunge for the goal line when Lodrigues, Tulane's fullback, dropped the ball as he hit the line and Law recovered for Georgia.

The stands groaned. The Tulane team got mad. They began working the ball back down the field and on the 33-yard line, Monk Simons, as tough a halfback as ever wore a uniform, started toward the left, switched to the right, throwing the whole Georgia team off balance and raced across the line with only one Georgian trying to snatch his legs. He then kicked the extra point.

The first quarter was an even exchange of kicking and charging with progress made by neither side. But the second quarter found Tulane outplaying Georgia, cracking the line, running the ends and giving indications that the Greenies would romp over the Bulldogs until the Greenies ran into the costly fumbles.

In the third quarter they seesawed back and forth, each struggling for a break. In the battle, Tulane weakened and Georgia started a touchdown drive off of a 30-yard punt return of G. Johnson, halfback, which carried the ball to the 45-yard line, where Anderson, halfback, broke off for a 15-yard broken field run that turned the Georgians into a rally. Green, fullback, then took it to the 16-yard line and plunged another yard to the 15-yard line.

Here, Georgia stood with first down on the 15-yard line, rearing and snorting to go, but Tulane buckled down to a fine defensive and held the Georgians on downs, getting the ball on the 14-yard line and worked the ball out of the danger zone.

Tulane made another touchdown threat in the fourth quarter but it was broken up by a fumble by Monk Simons, which opened the way for Georgia's touchdown. The fumble was recovered by Charles Treadaway on Georgia's 21-yard line. A 15-yard penalty against Georgia pushed the Bulldogs back to the six-yard line.

With their cause appearing hopeless

Alabama Trims Stubborn Tennessee Eleven, 13-6

Crimsons Come Back After Vols Tie Score To Gain Close Win

By Kenneth Gregory
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

LEGION FIELD, BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Oct. 20.—Alabama's Crimson Tide, displaying powerful offensive tactics and defended by an almost impenetrable line, drove to a convincing 13 to 6 victory over Tennessee this afternoon.

Through the triumph, the red-shirted warriors from Tuscaloosa advanced to the front ranks in the contention for championship honors in the Southeastern conference and shattered hopeful ambitions of the Volunteers of Knoxville.

It was the sixth defeat Tennessee has suffered since Major Bob Neyland took over the coaching reins in 1926 and was the third time the Tide had whipped the Vols in the last seven years: having emerged victorious in 1930 and 1933.

The spectacular win over Tennessee, achieved through the pile-driving slashes of its backfield, excellent line play, and featured by the great running, passing and kicking of Millard (Dixie) Howell, sent Alabama out in front in the conference race with three successive triumphs, the Tide already having conquered Sewanee and Mississippi State.

As they lined up for the opening kickoff, Tennessee and Alabama moved into the battle with undefeated and untied records. The Crimson Tide fought hard throughout, forced the Volunteers to the defensive the greater part of the game and pulled through with its record still unmarred.

Alabama, after muffing a chance to shove over a touchdown in the scoreless first period, advancing close to Tennessee's goal on runs and passes engineered by the fleet-footed Howell, opened the scoring early in the second quarter. On the second play of that period Howell fired a 28-yard pass to Hutson, giant end, who continued eight yards to Tennessee's 12. Dixie then picked up five and Demyanovich, a great line plunger, sliced through left guard and across the goal. The attempt to convert was blocked.

The Volunteers suddenly came to life as the intermission neared. Pug Vaughn, Tennessee's colorful halfback, began firing passes with two minutes left to play and the Gold and White eleven charged deep into Alabama territory. With the ball resting on the Tide's 17, Vaughn whipped a short pass to Palmer, who raced to the one-yard stripe. After two plays, Pete Craig lunged through center for the score, but the attempted placekick for the extra point was wide.

Early in the third period Alabama got a break when Palmer's high punt hit on Tennessee's 38-yard line and bounded backward to the 23. Two

Furman Eleven Defeats Crippled Mercer Team

MACON, Ga., Oct. 20.—(AP)—The Furman university Hurricane swept aside a crippled Mercer university football team, 9 to 3, here today in a crushing fourth-period rally.

Entering the fourth period with Mercer leading, 3-0, the Furman squad drove from midfield for a touchdown, and soon thereafter kicked a field goal to clinch the victory. Furman had missed two tries for a field goal earlier in the game.

Lacking scoring power, due to illness of five of its first string players, the Mercer Bears were unable to cope with the driving attack of the Furman machine which recently held the proud Bulldogs of University of Georgia to a 7-2 victory.

Score:

Furman	0	0	0	9—9
Mercer	0	0	3	0—3

Scoring summary: Touchdowns, Furman, Steens. Field goals Furman, King; Mercer, Bloodworth.

Contest Winners Announced Tuesday

The annual guess-em football contest started off with a bang last week, with a couple of hundred entrants in the first of the weekly test which will continue until the end of the season.

The winners will be announced Tuesday morning and a new blank will be published Wednesday morning. Prizes for the first week's contest are: First prize, a Riegel Third Dimension shirt, donated by Sig Haas and Sons; second prize, a $2.50 meal ticket, given by Frenchie's Cafe No. 2, and third prize, a three-months subscription to The Morning World.

There were several upsets yesterday and if you guessed right, you have a good chance to take down one of those prizes. Jock Sutherland missed eight games, Harry Grayson muffed six and George Lofton five. Sutherland failed to guess any of the scores correctly, while Grayson and Lofton hit one each on the head.

VANDY SCORES IN LAST MINUTE TO NOSE OUT AUBURN

Plainsmen Lead 6-0 Until Dixon's Pass Connects With Geny

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Oct. 20.—(AP)—An inspired Auburn eleven threw a tremendous scare into Vanderbilt supporters this afternoon, but the Commodores had percentages in their favor and eked out a 7 to 6 victory by means of a last-minute touchdown.

Outfought, outcharged and sometimes out-thought by the Plainsmen, Vanderbilt nevertheless had an unlucky time of it. Rand Dixon dropped enough beautiful passes into the arms of his butter-fingered mates to have rolled up an impressive score, but only one of the long beauties connected.

It occurred in that last minute of play, when lowly Auburn was leading the Commodores, 6 to 0, and all hope seemed hopeless. Then stepped forth Willie Geny, a substitute end whose God-father must have been Frank Merriwell. With the aid of percentages—one of them was bound to hit—Geny hung on to a 15-yard pass from Dixon and raced the remaining 15 yards to the goal. Peebles, sub halfback, placekicked the winning point.

But there must be proud folk back in Auburn's lair tonight. The Maroons, beaten by L. S. U. and Tulane, were recognized as likely any time to oust a championship contender, and until the last minute. it looked like Vanderbilt was that victim. Auburn was a superb team today.

Southern Methodist Wins From Oklahoma A. and M.

FAIR PARK STADIUM, DALLAS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Southern Methodist university's Mustangs, grabbing every break in sight and offering a stiff defense, walloped the Oklahoma A. and M. Cowboys of the Missouri Valley conference, 41-0, before a state fair of Texas crowd of 10,000 here today.

Not once did the Aggies threaten the Mustang goal line, while Southern Methodist's backs—droves of them—swung around the field in sparkling long and short dashes to overwhelm the Sooner state team.

GOPHERS RALLY TO TRIM PITT IN THRILLING GAME

Minnesota, Outplayed For Three Quarters, Comes Back To Win

PITTSBURGH, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A slumbering Golden Giant—Minnesota's might offense—awoke with a start late today and in fifteen brief, thrill-soaked minutes, crushed Pittsburgh, 13 to 7, knocked the Panthers out of the national title hunt for the second straight year, and trundled off toward new triumphs with 65,850 fans staring and gasping in the wake.

The burly Norsemen rose in that final quarter, and in two tremendous blasts, scored two touchdowns, and paraded off unbeaten in the title race.

Through the first two periods, Minnesota never had possession of the ball past its own 32-yard line, in fact had hold of it only eight times all told in the first half. Only a magnificent defense in the crucial moments had kept the Panthers even seven points at bay—the result a 64-yard lateral from Izzy Weinstock to Mike Nicksick, and Weinstock's perfect kick for the extra point in the final seconds of the half.

In the third quarter Bob Larue muffed a pass from center for a 25-yard loss, and Miller Munjas, a phenominal kicker, bobbled another for ten yards in kick formation, and the Panthers were back on their own three-yard line.

The slumbering Golden Giant stirred, took heart, and as Stanislaus Kostka came roaring into the game, shook off shackles for the first time. As the third quarter ended, Kostka smashed the Pitt line twice for gains of eight and nine yards and the first first down Minnesota had been able to score.

On the first play of the fourth quarter Alphonse, on a neat reverse, broke through the line and raced 22 yards over the Pitt goal.

"Pug" Lund swung into stride beside Kostka, and in short, but tremendous bursts that flattened the tired Pitt forwards, ripped 47 yards to the Panther 17. There Quarterback Glen Seudel faded back, tossed a lateral to Kostka, who in turn tossed back to Lund. Lund found his big end, Bob Tenner, loose on the ten-yard line and hurled a perfect forward pass. Tenner had only ten yards to go to score. Bevan missed that point but the damage was done.

Score by periods:

Minnesota	0	0	0	13—13
Pittsburgh	0	7	0	0—7

Minnesota scoring: Touchdowns, Alphonse, Tenner. Points after touchdowns, W. Bevan.

Pittsburgh scoring: Touchdowns, Nicksick. Point after touchdown, Weinstock.

ARMY TROUNCES SEWANEE, 20-0

Cadets Use Second And Third String Teams To Whip Southerners

WEST POINT, N. Y., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Without subjecting its two backfield aces, Captain Joe Stancook and Texas Jack Buckler, to a moment's wear and tear, Army disposed of its fourth intersectional foe before 8,000 fans in Michie stadium today by whipping the University of the South of Sewanee, Tenn., 20 to 0.

The Purple-shirted Tennesseans, one of the lightest teams ever to appear hereabouts, could not stop even the mixture of second and third-string players Army sent into action, but put up a tenacious battle and made several threatening gestures via the forward pass, on one occasion covering 50 yards in six plays, four of which were completed aerials.

Maurice "Ozzie" Simons, senior from Fort Leavenworth, Kans., put over two touchdowns in the first period, scoring within three minutes of the opening kick-off on an eight-yard plunge after Army had recovered a Sewanee fumble in the southerners' 30-yard line.

The Kansas boy crossed the line again just before the quarter closed on a 21-yard gallop.

It was Charles Meyer, a 152-pound yearling from Fort Sheridan, Ill., though, who did most of the ball-carrying business for the Cadets besides uncovering talent and power as a punter.

Meyer furnished the motive power for a brief Army drive midway of the second period which covered 55 yards in nine plays and ended with Meyer plunging over from four yards out.

Forward passes from Hartrich to Pearson and Poage to Hartrich gave a first string Army line some worries in the third period, but Halfback Carl Goldenberg of Lynchburg, Va., came up with some timely interceptions and no real scoring threat developed. Army's make-shift line-up was likewise unable to put on a sustained drive.

Score by periods:

It's True, Girls, The Trojans Really ARE Movie Mad

By Dan Thomas
(NEA Service Staff Correspondent)

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Oct. 20.—When Jack Frankish, editor of the Daily Trojan, University of Southern California student paper, recently charged the Trojan grid squad with being "Hollywood struck," he told only half the story.

"The players are Hollywood struck . . . toys to some henna-haired beauty," wrote Editor Frankish.

But he stopped too soon. Behind his charges are numerous interesting facts.

Although looked upon as gods and goddesses themselves, Hollywood's shadowy celebrities are the most ardent hero-worshippers to be found anywhere. Anyone who breaks into the limelight in some other field is as great to them as they are to millions of theater-goers.

Cotton Warburton, all-America quarterback, broke into the spotlight last year. An obscure sophomore at the opening of the season, he suddenly became the gridiron rage of America. And at the same time he became one of the most important figures in Hollywood.

Mary Carlisle strutted like a peacock when he asked her for a date. Rochelle Hudson was the envy of every girl in the Coconut Grove when she appeared there with him.

Naturally these young actresses made a fuss over the tow-headed ball carrier. He was the rage of the hour and it meant a lot to them to be seen with him.

And Warburton didn't take their compliments with the proverbial grain of salt. Like the movie stars themselves, he believed everything—believed that he was a great fellow, and indispensable to the team.

Warburton started the present campaign in the same frame of mind. All summer Mary, Rochelle, Toby Wing, and Sally Blane continued to sing his praises. Each of them was sure that he would be greater than ever this fall.

Cotton had much the same idea. As long as he was packing the ball, the Trojans would win. How the rest of the team performed wouldn't make much difference.

The rest took him at his word. If he was so good, let him prove it. The result has been that Warburton has given a very poor account of himself in every game this season.

Haskell (Inky) Wotkyns, who showed such promise at fullback last season, is another who failed to show anything at all this year.

Wotkyns, too, has been a target for Hollywood's younger beauties. He has dined at the Brown Derby with Judith Allen, and danced in the Biltmore Bowl with Dorothy Drake. And their praises apparently have been just a little too much for him.

Another who has fallen down is Bill Howard, who alternates at quarterback with Warburton. Last year he appeared to be a great bet. Now he looks bad against even weak competition.

Howard also has been subjected to the flattery of the beautiful young screen actresses. He, too, has been seen with Miss Carlisle, who apparently has some influence upon football players. They seem to value her comments above those of Coach Howard Jones.

Filmland's beauties have been quick to absolve themselves of any blame for the team's downfall, however.

"Sure, I've had dates with some of the fellows," one actress told me. "They're good dancers and lots of fun. But I also have dates with other fellows and they don't get swelled up about it. So why should the football players?

"If they're swell-headed, they got that way themselves. I'm sure I didn't do it. And I didn't try to make toys out of the boys, either."

Hollywood really is mad about being drawn into this attack upon the Trojans. In the past it already has been blamed for enough things—corrupting the morals of the nation, the decline of the legitimate stage, encouraging crime, popularizing drinking.

And it doesn't want the Trojans' downfall added to the list.

GENTS BEAT TEXAS WITH LAST-MINUTE FIELD GOAL

PARKER'S KICK GIVES CENTENARY 9-TO-6 VICTORY

Both Teams Score Touchdowns In Last Period Of Close Battle

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A goal from placement kicked in the last forty-five seconds of play gave Centenary college a 9-6 victory over the University of Texas today and upset Texas' ambitions to go through an undefeated season.

The defeat came a few hours after the Longhorns and their new head coach, Jack Chevigny, were honored at a parade and celebration in honor of Texas' victories over Notre Dame and the University of Oklahoma. Ten thousand madly cheering fans saw Texas go down to defeat before the determined assault of Centenary's fighting Gentlemen.

Playing through the first three quarters without scoring, both Texas and Centenary counted touchdowns early in the final period on "breaks." Both attempts for the extra point failed.

With approximately 45 seconds to play, B. Parker, slashing Centenary halfback who previously had missed his chance to win the game when his kick for extra point after touchdown was blocked, placekicked that ball squarely between the goal posts for the three points that gave the Gentlemen victory.

A Texas pass intercepted by McCorkle near midfield proved the turning point in the game. He lugged it through the entire Texas team to the Longhorn 19 yard line. B. Parker was dropped for a net loss of four yards in two smashes at the line but Glumac passed to Hooper for a first down on the nine yard line. Crowther ran the ball to the seven yard stripe, squarely in front of the goal. Parker's place kick went straight through the uprights.

The Texas attack lacked the precision exhibited in earlier games. The Longhorns were handicapped also in not having the services of the elusive Bohn Hilliard, star back, who was out because of injuries.

GAELS WIN FROM FORDHAM, 14 TO 9

St. Mary's Ties Score In Second And Wins In Fourth Quarter

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The bells of St. Mary's pealed joyously today as the brawny Gaels from the mountains of California trounced Fordham, 14 to 9, and scored another victory in their football feud with the New Yorkers.

A capacity crowd of nearly 60,000 people shoved and jostled their way into the Polo Grounds for the third renewal of what has come to be one of the most colorful of intersectional gridiron rivalries.

Battled to a standstill in the early stages of a furious, savage battle, the Californians first drew up on even terms with Fordham, then uncovered a vicious drive in the last two heats to take the lead and hold it.

With the score standing at 7-all, the Gaels began a push late in the third that put them on Fordham's ten-yard stripe. They scored the winning touchdown on the second play of the last quarter.

The Gaels, with almost every member of their ten-second backfield contributing, out-rushed Fordham, 406 yards to 144.

Elitch Meets Former Rice Star In Main Event Wednesday

Five Of East's Leading Elevens Suffer Defeats

Saturday's Football Schedule Furnishes Further Surprises

(By Associated Press)

Five of the east's proud football elevens—Pitt, Colgate, Fordham, Columbia and Harvard—fell off the unbeaten and untied list yesterday along with Tennessee and Wisconsin, while the margin of an extra point or two was all that saved Princeton, Auburn and Tulane in another day of astonishing results.

Pitt's Panthers, annual contenders for the national championship, fell before the bone-crushing power of Minnesota's Gophers. Held off for three periods, the Gophers came from behind to grind out two fourth-period touchdowns and win, 13-7. Colgate and Fordham likewise were overmatched in intersectional duels, the Red Raiders from Hamilton, N. Y., going down before Ohio State, 10-7, while Fordham bowed to St. Mary's rugged Gaels from California, 14-9. More than 150,000 spectators saw these three games alone.

Columbia's Rose Bowl champions and Harvard were subdued by foes from their own neck of the football woods. There was no particular surprise when Holy Cross, flashing a sensational passing attack, overwhelmed Harvard, 26-6, but Navy's 18-7 conquest of Columbia was a major upset. Fred (Buzz) Borries, whirlwind Navy back, scored two of the Midshipmen's touchdowns and paved the way for the third.

Tennessee was overpowered by Alabama, 13-6, in a game that confirmed previous suspicions that the Crimson Tide will be hard to beat for the Southeastern conference title. Doc Spears' Wisconsin Badgers found Duane Purvis and Jim Carter in sound health and dropped a 14-0 decision to Purdue as a result.

The biggest surprise of the day, perhaps, was one that just failed to come off. Washington and Lee's doughty Generals invaded the north and battled Princeton's Tigers to a standstill for the second successive year, only to lose out by the margin of two extra points, 14-12. Tulane and Vanderbilt likewise found the extra point vital as they protected perfect records in chalking up Southeastern conference triumphs over Georgia and Auburn, respectively. The score in each case was 7-6.

Beaten twice in a row, Southern California's Trojans applied the brakes to the extent of getting a 6-6 draw with Oregon State while Stanford, Pacific coast favorite, just nosed out San Francisco, 3-0, on a field goal by Jim Moscrip. California likewise had to take the field goal route to nip U. C. L. A., 3-0. Oregon, meantime, whipped Idaho, 13-6.

Eastern prestige, seriously dented by the defeats of Pitt, Colgate and Fordham, as well as by Michigan State's rout of Manhattan, 39-0, and Notre Dame's 13-0 conquest of Carnegie Tech, was upheld by Army, which used second and third-stringers to mop up Sewanee, 20-0; Dartmouth, which trounced Virginia, 27-0; and Syracuse, which came fast to trip over Wesleyan, 32-10. Michigan's Wolverines, beaten in their first two starts, helped the mid-west celebrate a banner day by handing Georgia Tech a 9-2 beating.

For the first time since far, far back, Chicago won its second consecutive Big Ten victory, Clark Shaughnessy's Maroons tumbling Indiana, 21-0. Iowa State of the Big Six stunned mid-western critics by galloping all over Iowa's Hawkeyes, 31-6. Nebraska and Kansas State earned Big Six conference victories, the former outpointing Oklahoma, 6-0, while Kansas State was tripping Kansas, 13-0.

Giving a demonstration of surprising strength, Louisiana State tripped Arkansas, 16-0, with a second half rally and joined Alabama, Tulane and Vanderbilt in the Southeastern conference's top brackets. Southern Methodist partially made up for Arkansas' defeat by burying Oklahoma A. and M. under a 41-0 count. Centenary upset Texas, 9-6, while Texas Christian beat Texas A. and M., 13-0, in the only Southwest conference game of the day.

Duke, Southern conference leader, maintained its unbeaten record with a 20-0 conquest of Davidson. North Carolina tripped Kentucky, 6-0, but North Carolina State bowed to Florida, 14-0.

Thomas Jefferson gave Lewis and Clark, explorers, special instructions to look for mammoths, which he believed still roamed the great plains of the west.

FROSH LEADER

Herman B. Hewett, above, of Birmingham, Ala., has had two honors thrust upon him in short order at Louisiana Tech. He is president of the freshman class and captain of the beginners' football team. The Tech freshmen recently won their first gridiron contest, defeating the Mississippi college yearlings 15-0. Their second game of the year will be played with the Centenary freshmen at Ruston at 3 p. m. Monday.

SIMONS' KICK OF PLACEMENT GIVES GREENIES VICTORY

and in desperation, Green stepped back behind his goal line and heaved a pass to Treadaway who ran to Georgia's 21-yard line. Still gambling and hoping and with five minutes left, Green threw a long pass to Wagnon and he went for the touchdown.

The stands did a lot of cheering, but the biggest cheer and one that rocked the stands, was the cheer from the Tulane stands when Bond missed the kick for extra point and Tulane won.

Grocers And Lumbermen Clash In Doubleheader

The Sav-Mor grocers and the Slagle-Johnson lumbermen will meet this afternoon in a softball double header at the Plum street diamond.

The first game is scheduled to start at 2 o'clock with Meeks and Lee picked to do the grocers' pitching for the day and Rodgers expected to work for the lumbermen. Manager Garland of Sav-Mor and Woods of Slagle-Johnson will be the opposing catchers.

RICE WHIPS CREIGHTON

OMAHA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Scoring four touchdowns in the first quarter, the undefeated Rice institute Owls gave more than 2,000 old grads at Creighton field for the homecoming game a throbbing headache as they piled up a 46 to 13 victory tonight over Creighton's injury ridden Bluejays. Creighton has lost all four games this season while Rice has won four and tied one.

SLEDGE EXPECTED TO PROVE TOUGH RIVAL FOR GREEK

Elitch Fully Recovered From Injury Received Last Wednesday

Nick Elitch, the Greek heavyweight who spent last Wednesday night in a local hospital after he had fallen out of the ring with Ernest Kelly, will return against another former football player in the main event of the weekly mat show at Roosevelt stadium next Wednesday night, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night. Nick's foe this time will be Bill Sledge, former Rice university grid star, who weighs 206 pounds.

Elitch is quite a showman and he knows plenty of holds to back up his antics in the ring, so Promoter Bruscato is trying to select some tough opponents for him. Sledge is thought to be just the man to give Nick a real going over. He was an all-round athlete at Rice and has developed into a top-notch wrestler since he took up the professional mat game as a means of making a living.

"Sledge can show you more holds in five minutes than some of the bigger boys can reveal in a week," Art Mondt, the Beaumont matchmaker, told Bruscato. The former Rice man is fast and he has learned plenty since leaving college. Only last week he gave Paul Jones a quick lesson in Houston. In all, Sledge has a better record than any of the other collegians who have shown here.

Local fans, of course, know what to expect from Elitch. Both Nick and Kelly had won one fall when they took their big plunge out of the ring last week. It was a "double knockout" and so neither could lay claim to the match. Elitch woke up in the hospital and Kelly regained consciousness only after Bruscato and several attendants had worked over him for 10 minutes or more.

Elitch apparently suffered no ill effects from his fall, because he was able to leave the hospital Thursday shortly before noon. Physicians who examined him Wednesday night feared he had been seriously injured but Thursday morning X-ray pictures failed to reveal any fractures and the Greek was allowed to leave the infirmary.

Bruscato said he is attempting to line up two wrestlers who have never shown here before for the semi-final. The two boys he is negotiating with are well known performers and the local promoter is hopeful of booking them today or tomorrow.

line plays and a pass netted 17 yards, and on an end around end play, Howell to Demyanovich to Hutson, the latter sprinted across the goal. Riley Smith place kicked the extra point.

That ended the scoring of the exceedingly hard-fought contest, played in sweltering heat that caused innumerable substitutions on both sides and featured by the enthusiastic outburst of cheers from close to 20,000 spectators who thronged the stadium.

Alabama's shifty squad, employing the famed Notre Dame system as taught by Coach Frank Thomas, a former quarterback at the South Bend school, outmaneuvered the Volunteers through most of the fray, but the never slackening attack unleashed by the gamely fighting Tennessee eleven thoroughly justified the fact that the decision was gained by no more than seven points, one more than the count by which the Tide triumphed a year ago.

TECH PUPS PLAY CENTENARY FROSH

Strong Yearling Elevens Clash At Ruston Monday Afternoon

RUSTON, Oct. 20.—(Special)—An old-time north Louisiana college grid rivalry will be renewed at Louisiana Tech Monday afternoon when the Tech freshman eleven engages the yearling squad representing Centenary college.

This tilt will mark the first time for Tech and Centenary elevens of any class to play since the fall of 1930 when the senior Gentlemen defeated Tech 13-0 here.

Undoubtedly the yearling game will be in its own right "the freshman battle of the century" with both institutions possessing one of their best first-year teams in history. Fans here are positive that the Bullpup team is their best and reports from the Shreveport college's campus indicate that the Junior Gents have a powerful aggregation.

Since Tech and Centenary have adhered to the freshman ruling of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association, the frosh teams have played on numerous occasions and the Centenary team has always finished in front with one exception. Back in 1928 the Tech freshies held their foe of Centenary to a tie in the regular scheduled game. Determined to settle the matter before the season was over, another game was booked and the Junior Gents won.

George "Blue" Hogg, known far and wide while playing with the Tech varsity a decade ago as the "ghost of the gridiron," is serving his first season as tutor of the Tech freshies. His efforts thus far have been in the form of a victory over Mississippi college frosh at Tallulah several weeks ago and several decisions over the Tech varsity.

Interest in the game is running high in this section and officials look for a record crowd to witness the battle.

The unofficial announcement has been made that Tech Pup caps may be discarded if the Puppies win the game. Otherwise, the frosh have to wear their caps until the Christmas holidays.

HOWARD UPSETS OLE MISS, 7-6

Birmingham Eleven Flashes Staunch Defense For Close Victory

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Howard college's light but undaunted grid eleven rose to heights here this afternoon and turned back University of Mississippi, 7-6, netting their marker in the second period and holding the Red and Blue scoreless for three consecutive quarters.

Gunter scored on a 16-yard reverse for the Mississippians in the opening period, a few plays after the kickoff.

In the second period, Harbin, sensational Howard back, took the ball from Stuart, stepped way back, and then cut through right tackle for 26 yards and a score while the entire Mississippi defensive napped. Allen's placement was good and the Bulldogs were out with a one-point lead.

The final period saw the Mississippians stabbing frantically in the direction of a goal, but it was featured by the great Howard defensive which denied every threat.

The lineup and summary:

MICHIGAN WHIPS ENGINEERS, 9-2

Little Wolverine Quarterback Races 66 Yards For Touchdown

MICHIGAN STADIUM, ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 20.—(AP)—The comeback hopes of Georgia Tech-University of Michigan collided on a slippery gridiron here this afternoon and a 66-yard touchdown dash by little Ferris Jennings, gave the Wolverines the victory, 9 to 2.

It was Michigan's first triumph of the season and the third consecutive defeat for the once-mighty Golden Tornado from the south, which blew itself out in a flurry of futile passes after the rejuvenated Wolverines had piled up a 9 to 0 lead in the third quarter.

Jennings, the 140-pound Michigan quarterback, ended a Wolverine scoring famine that had endured through two dispiriting defeats, when he scored his touchdown.

He took a punt on his 34-yard line, eluded three desperate Tech would-be tacklers as he skirted the left end of the southland defense, then sprinted down the sideline, screened from further danger by the best interference his team mates have produced this year. Willard Hildebrand placekicked the extra point.

That was early in the third period. Before the quarter had ended, McKay, substitute for Capt. Jack Phillips at fullback for the Yellow Jackets, tumbled a pass from center while trying to punt from behind his goal line, and two more points were scored for Michigan.

Hardly had the fourth period opened when Thompson, sub for "Kitty" Katz, Tech left end, blocked one of Johnny Regeczi's punts on Michigan's 20-yard stripe. The ball rebounded into the end zone for the safety that saved the Yellow Jackets from a shutout.

Score by periods:

Georgia Tech	0	0	0	2—2

Georgia Tech scoring: Safety, Thompson (sub for Katz).

Michigan scoring: Touchdown, Jennings. Points from try after touchdown, Hildebrand (placement). Safety, Patanelli.

Steve Hamas looks like the best prospect for an opponent for Max Baer next June. In fact Steve has looked like the best prospect ever since he battered Max Schmeling out of his come-back campaign and sent him back to Germany. His victory over Art Lasky in the New York Garden arena just impressed the fact that he is still in the picture.

I am reminded of an evening, when I sat in the lobby of the N. Y. A. C. chinning with Dan Morgan. Danny was the lad Commissioner Bill Brown sent in to second Carnera against Baer when the commissioner discovered that Carnera was going into his title defense without an experienced second in his corner. Carnera's usual chief second was unavoidably detained by certain legal entanglements and couldn't even be at the ringside. In short, the warden wouldn't let him out to second Carnera or for any other purpose. So Carnera was going in seconded only by his Italian part-manager, who had no experience and whom he didn't trust any too much anyway, and a towel swinger or two.

Finding Carnera in this peculiar position, and quite worried about it, Bill Brown told him he would furnish a chief who knew the game and was absolutely to be relied upon. picked Dan Morgan and took him over to Carnera's camp to study Carnera's style a couple of days before the fight. Morgan was an experienced second all right. He had managed K. O. Brown, Jack Britton and Battling Levinsky and seconded them in nearly all their fights, and had seconded scores of other champions and near champions. Probably there isn't another man in New York who knows more about boxing and all its inside stuff.

Lacks Only 'Shock Punch'

To go back to the N. Y. A. C. lobby, as we talked over the Baer-Carnera fight I asked Morgan what he thought of Carnera's chance to beat Baer in a return match.

"He'd give him a fight all right," said Morgan, "but there are several things he'd have to learn to beat Baer. Carnera is fast for a big man and he boxes well. He boxes better than he fights. A man built like Carnera shouldn't be too fancy. He needs two things—a good blocking defence and a knowledge of how to hit a good effective punch with either hand, and that's all he needs. He has plenty of courage, plenty of strength and endurance. But they've patterned his boxing after a lightweight's—a fast clever lightweight's—fast footwork and a fast left jab working overtime.

"Perhaps it's lucky Carnera never learned the knack of delivering a shock punch. If he had even half of old Bob Fitzsimmons' trick of putting a jolt on the end of a punch he'd ruin any man he hit. Perhaps he can't get it. He's been taught to shoot his hand fast and pull it back, instead of going solidly through with it. Its hard to change. When I saw him train there was no time to teach him any new tricks. To tell him anything would only confuse him and make him uncertain.

"So when I went into the dressing room with him before the fight I decided to tell him only one thing. His worst fault was a trick of jabbing, pulling his hand back and dropping it to his leg as he stepped back with his head up high and all uncovered on the left side. So I told him 'You've got to do one thing. Keep that left hand up after you jab. Never drop it. If you do you'll leave a perfect opening for Baer's looping overhand right for the jaw and he'll knock your block off with it. Keep that big arm up somewhere in the way and your chin tucked down and his best punch won't be any good. Remember that.'

Would Win Return Go

"That's all I told him," said Morgan. "But in the excitement he forgot, and the moment he pulled back with his left arm dropped Baer socked him. Maybe you remember those rights didn't get over from the fourth to the ninth round. The big guy remembered to keep that arm up. Max tried to wind a few rights over it but they didn't reach the spot. In the tenth Primo forgot again, and Max got him."

"Then you think if Carnera can be trained to block that right he'll beat Baer next time?" I said.

"No," said Morgan. "It might help him wear Baer down and give him a chance. But this Baer is a fighter. If he didn't do one thing he'd do another, and he knows how Carnera moves. Carnera would have to learn how to punch and if he hasn't learned yet it's pretty late to teach him that. Punchers get the knack early. They say Benny Leonard was a 'feather duster puncher' at first, and deliberately learned how to sock. Sure, but he was only a kid when he began knocking them all out. Carnera is full of that idea of snapping his hands out fast. He'd like to box like Tommy Loughran and he isn't built for it.

"Hard punchers don't snap their punches. Dal Hawkins could reach out slowly and do his hitting in the last six inches. Frank Erne thought Dal was just reaching out to try to pull his guard down, and then he was on the floor hearing the referee say 'seven.' Joe Gans was caught the same way, twice. That Dutchman of mine, Kayo Brown, he'd bob under a fast punch and slip his left mitt into the body with a jolt that nearly broke their shoe laces. If this Carnera could hit like little Kayo it would be murder to put him in a ring. But he wasn't born with the idea, and Kayo was."

Likes Hamas' Chances

"Well, how would you figure Hamas against Baer?"

Really I expected to hear Morgan laugh. I got a surprise.

"Hamas would give him a tough fight and might beat him," said Morgan. "This Hamas is a different proposition—ordinary size—6 feet tall and 191 pounds. But he has brains. He's a natural athlete and has a knack of doing things right. He's no mark for a right hand. He doesn't stand up straight and pull his head back or try to be fancy. He's quick and strong and a hard mixer and a good fighting boxer. He's a good puncher and he can take it if he has to.

"But the best thing about him is that he is smart. He does his thinking while he's fighting, not in the dressing room. I've seen him pull smart stunts that surprised me. A fellow like that is dangerous any time. He was smart enough to knock out a smart boxer like Tommy Loughran, and smart enough to lick a good defensive, wearing-down, fast finishing fighter like Schmeling. He isn't easy to hit and he'd give Baer plenty of action. In fact, I think he's about the best of the lot of them around just now."

This notion of Morgan's seems to be borne out by Hamas' defeat of Lasky, who has been strongly touted around the southwest as a best bet to con the Baer match next June.

'BAMA BECOMES FAVORITE TO WIN S'EASTERN TITLE

Tide's Victory Over Tennessee Establishes Claim For Crown

(By Associated Press)

The big Red Tide of Alabama yesterday established itself as a prime favorite to win its second consecutive Southeastern conference championship by defeating the fast passing Vols of the University of Tennessee, 13 to 6.

The Tide turned on the power early in the game and threatened to score, only to fumble on Tennessee's two-yard line. They came right back after a short punt and drove to the seven where Demyanovich tore through the line seven yards for a touchdown.

In play marked by vicious tackling on both sides the Vols put on a passing attack featuring Moses, Vaughn, and Palmer that paid off a touchdown but the Tide was not to be denied and in the third period loosened its own passing to score again.

At Nashville the Tigers of Auburn showed surprising strength and led Vanderbilt 6 to 0 until the last minute of play when Dixon began hurling passes and got one to Geny for a touchdown. With seconds left the point after was good and Vandy's unbeaten record was kept clean after one of the closest calls on record.

Tulane's confidence of running through Georgia also was rudely shattered but the Greenies won by the point after. Monk Simons scored for Tulane on a 33-yard run and the kick was good but when Georgia obtained its touchdown in the last period Bond's placekick struck the goal post.

The Southeastern fared badly in intersectional combat and broke even in its inter-conference battle with the Southern.

Little Sewanee went up to West Point for a 20 to 0 shellacking at the hands of the Army and Georgia Tech let Michigan win its first game of the season by a 9-2 score.

Florida romped through North Carolina State at Tampa 14 to 0 for a Southeastern victory over the old conference but the Southern kept ahead in the season's averages when the North Carolina Tarheels at Chapel Hill turned back Kentucky, 6 to 0.

Louisiana State met Arkansas on neutral ground at Shreveport and sent the Razorbacks home smarting under a 16 to 0 defeat.

Mississippi took an unexpected drubbing from Howard, losing 7 to 6, while Mississippi State also went out of the conference but fared better, defeating Southwestern of Memphis, 21 to 6.

GENTS BEAT TEXAS WITH LAST-MINUTE FIELD GOAL

PARKER'S KICK GIVES CENTENARY 9-TO-6 VICTORY

Both Teams Score Touchdowns In Last Period Of Close Battle

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 20.—(AP)—A goal from placement kicked in the last forty-five seconds of play gave Centenary college a 9-6 victory over the University of Texas today and upset Texas' ambitions to go through an undefeated season.

The defeat came a few hours after the Longhorns and their new head coach, Jack Chevigny, were honored at a parade and celebration in honor of Texas' victories over Notre Dame and the University of Oklahoma. Ten thousand madly cheering fans saw Texas go down to defeat before the determined assault of Centenary's fighting Gentlemen.

Playing through the first three quarters without scoring, both Texas and Centenary counted touchdowns early in the final period on "breaks." Both attempts for the extra point failed.

With approximately 45 seconds to play, B. Parker, slashing Centenary halfback who previously had missed his chance to win the game when his kick for extra point after touchdown was blocked, placekicked that ball squarely between the goal posts for the three points that gave the Gentlemen victory.

A Texas pass intercepted by McCorkle near midfield proved the turning point in the game. He lugged it through the entire Texas team to the Longhorn 19 yard line. B. Parker was dropped for a net loss of four yards in two smashes at the line but Glumac passed to Hooper for a first down on the nine yard line. Crowther ran the ball to the seven yard stripe, squarely in front of the goal. Parker's place kick went straight through the uprights.

The Texas attack lacked the precision exhibited in earlier games. The Longhorns were handicapped also in not having the services of the elusive Bohn Hilliard, star back, who was out because of injuries.

GAELS WIN FROM FORDHAM, 14 TO 9

St. Mary's Ties Score In Second And Wins In Fourth Quarter

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The bells of St. Mary's pealed joyously today as the brawny Gaels from the mountains of California trounced Fordham, 14 to 9, and scored another victory in their football feud with the New Yorkers.

A capacity crowd of nearly 60,000 people shoved and jostled their way into the Polo Grounds for the third renewal of what has come to be one of the most colorful of intersectional gridiron rivalries.

Battled to a standstill in the early stages of a furious, savage battle, the Californians first drew up on even terms with Fordham, then uncovered a vicious drive in the last two heats to take the lead and hold it.

With the score standing at 7-all, the Gaels began a push late in the third that put them on Fordham's ten-yard mark. They scored the winning touchdown on the second play of the last quarter.

The Gaels, with almost every member of their ten-second backfield contributing, out-rushed Fordham, 406 yards to 144.

Elitch Meets Former Rice Star In Main Event Wednesday

Saturday's Football Schedule Furnishes Further Surprises

(By Associated Press)

Five of the east's proud football elevens—Pitt, Colgate, Fordham, Columbia and Harvard—fell off the unbeaten and untied list yesterday along with Tennessee and Wisconsin, while the margin of an extra point or two was all that saved Princeton, Auburn and Tulane in another day of astonishing results.

Pitt's Panthers, annual contenders for the national championship, fell before the bone-crushing power of Minnesota's Gophers. Held off for three periods, the Gophers came from behind to grind out two fourth-period touchdowns and win, 13-7. Colgate and Fordham likewise were overmatched in intersectional duels, the Red Raiders from Hamilton, N. Y., going down before Ohio State, 10-7, while Fordham bowed to St. Mary's rugged Gaels from California, 14-9. More than 150,000 spectators saw these three games alone.

Columbia's Rose Bowl champions and Harvard were subdued by foes from their own neck of the football woods. There was no particular surprise when Holy Cross, flashing a sensational passing attack, overwhelmed Harvard, 26-6, but Navy's 18-7 conquest of Columbia was a major upset. Fred (Buzz) Borries, whirlwind Navy back, scored two of the Midshipmen's touchdowns and paved the way for the third.

Tennessee was overpowered by Alabama, 13-6, in a game that confirmed previous suspicions that the Crimson Tide will be hard to beat for the Southeastern conference title. Doc Spears' Wisconsin Badgers found Duane Purvis and Jim Carter in sound health and dropped a 14-0 decision to Purdue as a result.

The biggest surprise of the day, perhaps, was one that just failed to come off. Washington and Lee's doughty Generals invaded the north and battled Princeton's Tigers to a standstill for the second successive year, only to lose out by the margin of two extra points, 14-12. Tulane and Vanderbilt likewise found the extra point vital as they protected perfect records in chalking up Southeastern conference triumphs over Georgia and Auburn, respectively. The score in each case was 7-6.

Beaten twice in a row, Southern California's Trojans applied the brakes to the extent of getting a 6-6 draw with Oregon State while Stanford, Pacific coast favorite, just nosed out San Francisco, 3-0, on a field goal by Jim Moscrip. California likewise had to take the field goal route to nip U. C. L. A., 3-0. Oregon, meantime, whipped Idaho, 13-6.

Eastern prestige, seriously dented by the defeats of Pitt, Colgate and Fordham, as well as by Michigan State's rout of Manhattan, 39-0, and Notre Dame's 13-0 conquest of Carnegie Tech, was upheld by Army, which used second and third-stringers to mop up Sewanee, 20-0; Dartmouth, which trounced Virginia, 27-0; and Syracuse, which came fast to trip over Wesleyan, 32-10. Michigan's Wolverines, beaten in their first two starts, helped the mid-west celebrate a banner day by handing Georgia Tech a 9-2 beating.

For the first time since far, far back, Chicago won its second consecutive Big Ten victory, Clark Shaughnessy's Maroons tumbling Indiana, 21-0. Iowa State of the Big Six stunned mid-western critics by galloping all over Iowa's Hawkeyes, 31-6. Nebraska and Kansas State earned Big Six conference victories, the former outpointing Oklahoma, 6-0, while Kansas State was tripping Kansas, 13-0.

Giving a demonstration of surprising strength, Louisiana State tripped Arkansas, 16-0, with a second half rally and joined Alabama, Tulane and Vanderbilt in the Southeastern conference's top brackets. Southern Methodist partially made up for Arkansas' defeat by burying Oklahoma A. and M. under a 41-0 count. Centenary upset Texas, 9-6, while Texas Christian beat back Texas A. and M., 13-0, in the only Southwest conference game of the day.

Duke, Southern conference leader, maintained its unbeaten record with a 20-0 conquest of Davidson. North Carolina tripped Kentucky, 6-0, but North Carolina State bowed to Florida, 14-0.

Thomas Jefferson gave Lewis and Clark, explorers, special instructions to look for mammoths, which he believed still roamed the great plains of the west.

FROSH LEADER

Herman B. Hewett, above, of Birmingham, Ala., has had two honors thrust upon him in short order at Louisiana Tech. He is president of the freshman class and captain of the beginners' football team. The Tech freshmen recently won their first gridiron contest, defeating the Mississippi college yearlings 15-0. Their second game of the year will be played with the Centenary freshmen at Ruston at 3 p. m. Monday.

SIMONS' KICK OF PLACEMENT GIVES GREENIES VICTORY

and in desperation, Green stepped back behind his goal line and heaved a pass to Treadaway who ran to Georgia's 21-yard line. Still gambling and hoping and with five minutes left, Green threw a long pass to Wagnon and he went for the touchdown.

The stands did a lot of cheering, but the biggest cheer and one that rocked the stands, was the cheer from the Tulane stands when Bond missed the kick for extra point and Tulane won.

RICE WHIPS CREIGHTON

OMAHA, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Scoring four touchdowns in the first quarter, the undefeated Rice institute Owls gave more than 2,000 old grads at Creighton field for the homecoming game a throbbing headache as they piled up a 46 to 13 victory tonight over Creighton's injury ridden Bluejays. Creighton has lost all four games this season while Rice has won four and tied one.

SLEDGE EXPECTED TO PROVE TOUGH RIVAL FOR GREEK

Elitch Fully Recovered From Injury Received Last Wednesday

Nick Elitch, the Greek heavyweight who spent last Wednesday night in a local hospital after he had fallen out of the ring with Ernest Kelly, will return against another former football player in the main event of the weekly mat show at Roosevelt stadium next Wednesday night, Promoter Charlie Bruscato announced last night. Nick's foe this time will be Bill Sledge, former Rice university grid star, who weighs 206 pounds.

Elitch is quite a showman and he knows plenty of holds to back up his antics in the ring, so Promoter Bruscato is trying to select some tough opponents for him. Sledge is thought to be just the man to give Nick a real going over. He was an all-round athlete at Rice and has developed into a top-notch wrestler since he took up the professional mat game as a means of making a living.

"Sledge can show you more holds in five minutes than some of the bigger boys can reveal in a week," Art Mondt, the Beaumont matchmaker, told Bruscato. The former Rice man is fast and he has learned plenty since leaving college. Only last week he gave Paul Jones a quick lesson in Houston. In all, Sledge has a better record than any of the other collegians who have shown here.

Local fans, of course, know what to expect from Elitch. Both Nick and Kelly had won one fall when they took their big plunge out of the ring last week. It was a "double knockout" and so neither could lay claim to the match. Elitch woke up in the hospital and Kelly regained consciousness only after Bruscato and several attendants had worked over him for 10 minutes or more.

Elitch apparently suffered no ill effects from his fall, because he was able to leave the hospital Thursday shortly before noon. Physicians who examined him Wednesday night feared he had been seriously injured but Thursday morning X-ray pictures failed to reveal any fractures and the Greek was allowed to leave the infirmary.

Bruscato said he is attempting to line up two wrestlers who have never shown here before for the semi-final. The two boys he is negotiating with are well known performers and the local promoter is hopeful of booking them today or tomorrow.

line plays and a pass netted 17 yards, and on an end around end play, Howell to Demyanovich to Hutson, the latter sprinted across the goal. Riley Smith place kicked the extra point.

That ended the scoring of the exceedingly hard-fought contest, played in sweltering heat that caused innumerable substitutions on both sides and featured by the enthusiastic outburst of cheers from close to 20,000 spectators who thronged the stadium.

Alabama's shifty squad, employing the famed Notre Dame system as taught by Coach Frank Thomas, a former quarterback at the South Bend school, outmaneuvered the Volunteers through most of the fray, but the never slackening attack unleashed by the gamely fighting Tennessee eleven thoroughly justified the fact that the decision was gained by no more than seven points, one more than the count by which the Tide triumphed a year ago.

KELLY BEATS CLARKS

KELLY, La., Oct. 20.—Special)—The Kelly high school basketball team won a 34 to 7 victory over the Clarks high school five here yesterday afternoon before a large crowd of students from both schools.

TECH PUPS PLAY CENTENARY FROSH

Strong Yearling Elevens Clash At Ruston Monday Afternoon

RUSTON, Oct. 20.—(Special)—An old-time north Louisiana college grid rivalry will be renewed at Louisiana Tech Monday afternoon when the Tech freshman eleven engages the yearling squad representing Centenary college.

This tilt will mark the first time for Tech and Centenary elevens of any class to play since the fall of 1930 when the senior Gentlemen defeated Tech 13-0 here.

Undoubtedly the yearling game will be in its own right "the freshman battle of the century" with both institutions possessing one of their best first-year teams in history. Fans here are positive that the Bullpup team is their best and reports from the Shreveport college's campus indicate that the Junior Gents have a powerful aggregation.

Since Tech and Centenary have adhered to the freshman ruling of the Southern Intercollegiate Athletic association, the frosh teams have played on numerous occasions and the Centenary team has always finished in front with one exception. Back in 1928 the Tech freshies held their foe of Centenary to a tie in the regular scheduled game. Determined to settle the matter before the season was over, another game was booked and the Junior Gents won.

George "Blue" Hogg, known far and wide while playing with the Tech varsity a decade ago as the "ghost of the gridiron," is serving his first season as tutor of the Tech freshies. His efforts thus far have been in the form of a victory over Mississippi college frosh at Tallulah several weeks ago and several decisions over the Tech varsity.

The Bullpups will present a heavy line, averaging about 185 pounds from end to end with a lighter backfield.

Interest in the game is running high in this section and officials look for a record crowd to witness the battle.

The unofficial announcement has been made that Tech Pup caps may be discarded if the Puppies win the game. Otherwise, the frosh have to wear their caps until the Christmas holidays.

HOWARD UPSETS OLE MISS, 7-6

Birmingham Eleven Flashes Staunch Defense For Close Victory

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Oct. 20.—(AP)—Howard college's light but undaunted grid eleven rose to heights here this afternoon and turned back University of Mississippi, 7-6, netting their marker in the second period and holding the Red and Blue scoreless for three consecutive quarters.

Gunter scored on a 16-yard reverse for the Mississippians in the opening period, a few plays after the kickoff.

In the second period, Harbin, sensational Howard back, took the ball from Stuart, stepped way back, and then cut through right tackle for 26 yards and a score while the entire Mississippi defensive napped. Allen's placement was good and the Bulldogs were out with a one-point lead.

The final period saw the Mississippians stabbing frantically in the direction of a goal, but it was featured by the great Howard defensive which denied every threat.

The lineup and summary:

Howard	Pos.	Ole Miss
Snell	LE	Berryhill
Harrison	LT	Hapes
Berger	LG	D. Wilson
Cooper	C	M. Hutson
Spath	RG	Madre

MICHIGAN WHIPS ENGINEERS, 9-2

Little Wolverine Quarterback Races 66 Yards For Touchdown

MICHIGAN STADIUM, ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 20.—(AP)—The comeback hopes of Georgia Tech-University of Michigan collided on a slippery gridiron here this afternoon and a 66-yard touchdown dash by little Ferris Jennings, gave the Wolverines the victory, 9 to 2.

It was Michigan's first triumph of the season and the third consecutive defeat for the once-mighty Golden Tornado from the south, which blew itself out in a flurry of futile passes after the rejuvenated Wolverines had piled up a 9 to 0 lead in the third quarter.

Jennings, the 140-pound Michigan quarterback, ended a Wolverine scoring famine that had endured through two dispiriting defeats, when he scored his touchdown.

He took a punt on his 34-yard line, eluded three desperate Tech would-be tacklers as he skirted the left end of the southland defense, then sprinted down the sideline, screened from further danger by the best interference his team mates have produced this year. Willard Hildebrand placekicked the extra point.

That was early in the third period. Before the quarter had ended, McKay, substitute for Capt. Jack Phillips at fullback for the Yellow Jackets, fumbled a pass from center while trying to punt from behind his goal line, and two more points were scored for Michigan.

Hardly had the fourth period opened when Thompson, sub for "Kitty" Katz, Tech left end, blocked one of Johnny Regeczi's punts on Michigan's 20-yard stripe. The ball rebounded into the end zone for the safety that saved the Yellow Jackets from a shutout.

Score by periods:

Georgia Tech	0	0	0	2	—2

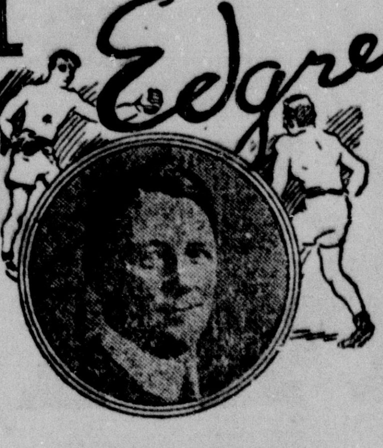
Georgia Tech scoring: Safety, Thompson (sub for Katz).

Michigan scoring: Touchdown, Jennings. Points from try after touchdown, Hildebrand (placement). Safety, Patanelli.

SPORTS through Edgren's EYES



By Robert Edgren

Steve Hamas looks like the best prospect for an opponent for Max Baer next June. In fact Steve has looked like the best prospect ever since he battered Max Schmeling out of his come-back campaign and sent him back to Germany. His victory over Art Lasky in the New York Garden arena just impressed the fact that he is still in the picture.

I am reminded of an evening, when I sat in the lobby of the N. Y. A. C. chinning with Dan Morgan. Danny was the lad Commissioner Bill Brown sent in to second Carnera against Baer when the commissioner discovered that Carnera was going into his title defense without an experienced second in his corner. Carnera's usual chief second was unavoidably detained by certain legal entanglements and couldn't even be at the ringside. In short, the warden wouldn't let him out to second Carnera or for any other purpose. So Carnera was going in seconded only by his Italian part-manager, who had no experience and whom he didn't trust any too much anyway, and a towel swinger or two.

Finding Carnera in this peculiar position, and quite worried about it, Bill Brown told him he would furnish a chief who knew the game and was absolutely to be relied upon, picked Dan Morgan and took him over to Carnera's camp to study Carnera's style a couple of days before the fight. Morgan was an experienced second all right. He had managed K. O. Brown, Jack Britton and Battling Levinsky and seconded them in nearly all their fights, and had seconded scores of other champions and near champions. Probably there isn't another man in New York who knows more about boxing and all its inside stuff.

Lacks Only 'Shock Punch'

To go back to the N. Y. A. C. lobby, as we talked over the Baer-Carnera fight I asked Morgan what he thought of Carnera's chance to beat Baer in a return match.

"He'd give him a fight all right," said Morgan, "but there are several things he'd have to learn to beat Baer. Carnera is fast for a big man and he boxes well. He boxes better than he fights. A man built like Carnera shouldn't be too fancy. He needs two things—a good blocking defence and a knowledge of how to hit a good effective punch with either hand, and that's all he needs. He has plenty of courage, plenty of strength and endurance. But they've patterned his boxing after a lightweight's—a fast clever lightweight's—fast footwork and a fast left jab working overtime.

"Perhaps it's lucky Carnera never learned the knack of delivering a shock punch. If he had even half of old Bob Fitzsimmons' trick of putting a jolt on the end of a punch he'd ruin any man he hit. Perhaps he can't get it. He's been taught to shoot his hand fast and pull it back, instead of going solidly through with it. Its hard to change. When I saw him train there was no time to teach him any new tricks. To tell him anything would only confuse him and make him uncertain.

"So when I went into the dressing room with him before the fight I decided to tell him only one thing. His worst fault was a trick of jabbing, pulling his hand back and dropping it to his leg as he stepped back with his head up high and all uncovered on the left side. So I told him 'You've got to do one thing. Keep that left hand up after you jab. Never drop it. If you do you'll leave a perfect opening for Baer's looping overhand right for the jaw and he'll knock your block off with it. Keep that big arm up somewhere in the way and your chin tucked down and his best punch won't be any good. Remember that.'

Would Win Return Go

"That's all I told him," said Morgan. "But in the excitement he forgot, and the moment he pulled back with his left arm dropped Baer socked him. Maybe you remember those rights didn't get over from the fourth to the ninth round. The big guy remembered to keep that arm up. Max tried to wind a few rights over it but they didn't reach the spot. In the tenth Primo forgot again, and Max got him."

"Then you think if Carnera can be trained to block that right he'll beat Baer next time?" I said.

"No," said Morgan. "It might help him wear Baer down and give him a chance. But this Baer is a fighter. If he didn't do one thing he'd do another, and he knows how Carnera moves. Carnera would have to learn how to punch and if he hasn't learned yet it's pretty late to teach him that. Punchers get the knack early. They say Benny Leonard was a 'feather duster puncher' at first, and deliberately learned how to sock. Sure, but he was only a kid when he began knocking them all out. Carnera is full of that idea of snapping his hands out fast. He'd like to box like Tommy Loughran and he isn't built for it.

"Hard punchers don't snap their punches. Dal Hawkins could reach out slowly and do his hitting in the last six inches. Frank Erne thought Dal was just reaching out to try to pull his guard down, and then he was on the floor hearing the referee say 'seven.' Joe Gans was caught the same way, twice. That Dutchman of mine, Kayo Brown, he'd bob under a fast punch and slip his left mitt into the body with a jolt that nearly broke their shoe laces. If this Carnera could hit like little Kayo it would be murder to put him in a ring. But he wasn't born with the idea, and Kayo was."

Likes Hamas' Chances

"Well, how would you figure Hamas against Baer?"

Really I expected to hear Morgan laugh. I got a surprise.

"Hamas would give him a tough fight and might beat him," said Morgan. "This Hamas is a different proposition—ordinary size—6 feet tall and 191 pounds. But he has brains. He's a natural athlete and has a knack of doing things right. He's no mark for a right hand. He doesn't stand up straight and pull his head back or try to be fancy. He's quick and strong and a hard mixer and a good fighting boxer. He's a good puncher and he can take it if he has to.

"But the best thing about him is that he is smart. He does his thinking while he's fighting, not in the dressing room. I've seen him pull smart stunts that surprised me. A fellow like that is dangerous any time. He was smart enough to knock out a smart boxer like Tommy Loughran, and smart enough to lick a good defensive, wearing-down, fast finishing fighter like Schmeling. He isn't easy to hit and he'd give Baer plenty of action. In fact, I think he's about the best of the lot of them around just now."

This notion of Morgan's seems to be borne out by Hamas' defeat of Lasky, who has been strongly touted around the southwest as a best bet to cop the Baer match next June.

'BAMA BECOMES FAVORITE TO WIN S'EASTERN TITLE

Tide's Victory Over Tennessee Establishes Claim For Crown

(By Associated Press)

The big Red Tide of Alabama yesterday established itself as a prime favorite to win its second consecutive Southeastern conference championship by defeating the fast passing Vols of the University of Tennessee, 13 to 6.

The Tide turned on the power early in the game and threatened to score, only to fumble on Tennessee's two-yard line. They came right back after a short punt and drove to the seven where Demyanovich tore through the line seven yards for a touchdown.

In play marked by vicious tackling on both sides the Vols put on a passing attack featuring Moses, Vaughn, and Palmer that paid off a touchdown but the Tide was not to be denied and in the third period loosened its own passing to score again.

At Nashville the Tigers of Auburn showed surprising strength and led Vanderbilt 6 to 0 until the last minute of play when Dixon began hurling passes and got one to Geny for a touchdown. With seconds left the point after was good and Vandy's unbeaten record was kept clean after one of the closest calls on record.

Tulane's confidence of running through Georgia also was rudely shattered but the Greenies won by the point after. Monk Simons scored for Tulane on a 33-yard run and the kick was good but when Georgia obtained its touchdown in the last period Bond's placekick struck the goal post.

The Southeastern fared badly in intersectional combat and broke even in its inter-conference battle with the Southern.

Little Sewanee went up to West Point for a 20 to 0 shellacking at the hands of the Army and Georgia Tech let Michigan win its first game of the season by a 9-2 score.

Florida romped through North Carolina State at Tampa 14 to 0 for a Southeastern victory over the old conference but the Southern kept ahead in the season's averages when the North Carolina Tarheels at Chapel Hill turned back Kentucky, 6 to 0.

Louisiana State met Arkansas on neutral ground at Shreveport and sent the Razorbacks home smarting under a 16 to 0 defeat.

Mississippi took an unexpected drubbing from Howard, losing 7 to 6, while Mississippi State also went out of the conference but fared better, defeating Southwestern of Memphis, 21 to 6.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The cotton market was rather quiet in today's short session with narrow and irregular price fluctuations.

Liverpool came in lower than due and the stock market opened easier, causing prices to ease off 3 points in the early trading with December at 12.30, March at 12.41 and May at 12.45.

Later a little week-end short covering resulted in a rally and December traded up to 12.31, March to 12.43 and May to 12.47, or 1 to 2 points over the opening figures, but still 1 to 2 points under yesterday's close.

A further easing on some liquidation by longs dropped December to 12.28, March to 12.39 and May to 12.44, or 3 to 4 points below the highs.

The close was steady at net declines of 3 to 4 points for the day.

Exports for the day were 13,029 bales.

Cotton futures closed steady at net declines of 3 to 4 points.

The final tone of the market was steady, net unchanged to 4 points lower.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The stock market merely went through the motions today without getting anywhere or doing anything in particular. It was one of the dullest sessions in several weeks, transfers approximating only 250,000 shares. Numerous issues were unchanged and the close was barely steady.

News that might have enlivened stocks was scarce and the majority of traders showed no disposition to relinquish their comfortable seats on the sidelines.

An excuse for the dullness, advanced by some observers, was the speech to be delivered before the American Bankers' association next Wednesday by President Roosevelt. What the chief executive will tell the financial leaders regarding the future course of the New Deal was a matter of wide conjecture in Wall street.

With inflation sentiment virtually extinct, proponents of expanded market activity were basing their hopes on the probability of greater cooperation between "big business' and the administration.

Grains offered little aid to the apathetic equities list.

Both wheat and corn yielded fractions. Cotton was just about even. Bonds plodded along a narrow pathway. Sterling was again a firm spot in foreign exchange dealings, while the gold currencies held to a restricted groove.

Some of the merchandising shares were in fair demand. National Stores first preferred got up 3 points and McCrory preferred was 2 higher at a new 1934 peak. Liggett & Myers B also edged up to a new year's top. The McCrory common stocks were slightly improved.

Most of the rails, including Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were a little better than ever during most of the brief proceedings. Such issues as American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of New Jersey, U. S. Smelting, Du Pont, American Can, National Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and many others recorded only small variations.

Outside influences seemed less effective than usual in arousing interest in equities as well as commodities. Earnings statements and estimates of forthcoming quarterly reports attracted little attention.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Downturns of wheat prices here formed the rule early today, influenced largely by weakness of quotations at Liverpool. Opening 1-2 to 7-8, lower, May 98 1-4 to 1-2, Chicago wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started at 1-2 decline to 1-4 advance, May 79 1-2 to 5-8, and subsequently altered little.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—There was no reported sales in raw sugar today. The last paid price was 2.89 for spots, but in view of the weakness in futures it was believed that bids of considerably less would have been accepted, but refiners showed no interest. It was reported in trade circles that holders were willing to accept bids of 17 points over December, which would be equivalent to about 2.81 for duty paid Cubas from store.

Futures opened 1 to 2 points lower and showed additional losses later under a renewal of tired long liquidation and selling by producing interests.

December contracts sold from 1.76 to 1.73 and May from 1.80 to 1.78 or 3 to 4 points below the previous close and at new low levels for the movement.

The decline uncovered stop-loss orders, and after their execution there was a partial rally on covering. Final prices were a little above the lowest but 2 to 3 points below the previous close. Sales were 17,650 tons.

In refined a fair business was reported and prices were unchanged at 4.65 for fine granulated.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, 2-3 lower; sales 17,600 tons. December 1.74; January 1.74; March 1.75; May 1.78B; July 1.83; September 1.86.

Cotton

New Orleans

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The cotton market was rather quiet in today's short session with narrow and irregular price fluctuations.

Liverpool came in lower than due and the stock market opened easier, causing prices to ease off 3 points in the early trading with December at 12.30, March at 12.41 and May at 12.45.

Later a little week-end short covering resulted in a rally and December traded up to 12.31, March to 12.43 and May to 12.47, or 1 to 2 points over the opening figures, but still 1 to 2 points under yesterday's close.

A further easing on some liquidation by longs dropped December to 12.28, March to 12.39 and May to 12.44, or 3 to 4 points below the highs.

The close was steady at net declines of 3 to 4 points for the day.

Exports for the day were 13,029 bales.

New York Stocks

By Victor Eubank
(Associated Press Financial Writer)

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—The stock market merely went through the motions today without getting anywhere or doing anything in particular. It was one of the dullest sessions in several weeks, transfers approximating only 250,000 shares. Numerous issues were unchanged and the close was barely steady.

News that might have enlivened stocks was scarce and the majority of traders showed no disposition to relinquish their comfortable seats on the sidelines.

An excuse for the dullness, advanced by some observers, was the speech to be delivered before the American Bankers' association next Wednesday by President Roosevelt. What the chief executive will tell the financial leaders regarding the future course of the New Deal was a matter of wide conjecture in Wall street.

With inflation sentiment virtually extinct, proponents of expanded market activity were basing their hopes on the probability of greater cooperation between "big business' and the administration.

Grains offered little aid to the apathetic equities list.

Both wheat and corn yielded fractions. Cotton was just about even. Bonds plodded along a narrow pathway. Sterling was again a firm spot in foreign exchange dealings, while the gold currencies held to a restricted groove.

Some of the merchandising shares were in fair demand. National Stores first preferred got up 3 points and McCrory preferred was 2 higher at a new 1934 peak. Liggett & Myers B also edged up to a new year's top. The McCrory common stocks were slightly improved.

Most of the rails, including Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific and Pennsylvania were a little better than ever during most of the brief proceedings. Such issues as American Telephone, U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Consolidated Gas, Standard Oil of New Jersey, U. S. Smelting, Du Pont, American Can, National Distillers, U. S. Industrial Alcohol and many others recorded only small variations.

Outside influences seemed less effective than usual in arousing interest in equities as well as commodities. Earnings statements and estimates of forthcoming quarterly reports attracted little attention.

Chicago Grain

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Downturns of wheat prices here formed the rule early today, influenced largely by weakness of quotations at Liverpool. Opening 1-2 to 7-8, lower, May 98 1-4 to 1-2, Chicago wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started at 1-2 decline to 1-4 advance, May 79 1-2 to 5-8, and subsequently altered little.

Sugar

NEW YORK, Oct. 20.—(AP)—There was no reported sales in raw sugar today. The last paid price was 2.89 for spots, but in view of the weakness in futures it was believed that bids of considerably less would have been accepted, but refiners showed no interest. It was reported in trade circles that holders were willing to accept bids of 17 points over December, which would be equivalent to about 2.81 for duty paid Cubas from store.

Futures opened 1 to 2 points lower and showed additional losses later under a renewal of tired long liquidation and selling by producing interests.

December contracts sold from 1.76 to 1.73 and May from 1.80 to 1.78 or 3 to 4 points below the previous close and at new low levels for the movement.

The decline uncovered stop-loss orders, and after their execution there was a partial rally on covering. Final prices were a little above the lowest but 2 to 3 points below the previous close. Sales were 17,650 tons.

In refined a fair business was reported and prices were unchanged at 4.65 for fine granulated.

Sugar futures closed barely steady, 2-3 lower; sales 17,600 tons. December 1.74; January 1.74; March 1.75; May 1.78B; July 1.83; September 1.86.

CHURCH IN HOMER TO BE DEDICATED

Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs Will Address Organization Sunday

HOMER, Oct. 20.—(Special)—The Methodist church here will be dedicated Sunday Oct. 21, at 11 a. m. by Bishop Hoyt M. Dobbs of Shreveport.

The Rev. Louis Hoffpauir, pastor of Methodist church at West Monroe last year, is pastor of this church and has been instrumental in pushing the campaign to clear it of the remaining indebtedness, which was $23,500.

The church was constructed at a cost of approximately $100,000 several years ago under the pastorate of the Rev. R. W. Tucker. It is well equipped, has numerous Sunday school rooms and an auditorium with a seating capacity of more than 500. A fine pipe organ was installed when built. The building is of straw colored brick.

Featuring in the dedicatory services Sunday besides the sermon by Bishop Dobbs will be special music arranged by Darden Ford, choir director. The Rev. W. L. Doss, presiding elder of this district, and former pastors will talk.

A large attendance is expected from various sections of the state.

GIRL DOOMED TO GUILLOTINE

Arrested while on a spree financed by 3,000 francs she had stolen from her murdered father, Violette Nozieres, 18, was convicted in Paris courts and faces execution on the guillotine. She is shown above as she appeared in the prisoner's dock during her trial. She also was charged with attempting to poison her mother.

Ancient French Market At Orleans Is Doomed

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 20.—(AP)—Old New Orleans is beginning to mutter against its twentieth century government which is planning to modernize the glamorous French market, a landmark since the eighteenth century.

Spanish soldiers trod through it in the 1790's. Andrew Jackson knew it, Lafayette lived on the corner. McKinley spoke from nearby galleries. Quadroons sipped coffee there, elbow to elbow with gay cavaliers. Duels began under its spreading roof. Negro mammies sing in it. Italians chatter. French is still spoken. There is bartering, trading, haggling. Debutantes frequent it with stiff-shirted escorts.

It is polyglot; fantastic. It is the sort of institution only a city like New Orleans can have; a city which can abandon itself to a Mardi Gras, a horse race, a saloon, moonlight nights, or church.

New Orleans is a tradition loving city. To see one of its oldest traditions—for the market is almost one-smashed, arouses them as few things can.

But despite the French clubs, the old families, the aristocrats and the plebians, the government is practical and determined. The smelly fish stalls must go. The rickety sheds are doomed. The sidewalk vendors have to move. The old coffee stands must find new locations.

The Orleans levee board says the Mississippi river is crowding up to the market and it must have more room to build a levee. So the city has agreed to sell a strip of land alongside the market to the board for $200,000.

And the market, of course, must be demolished. A new one will be built. It will be modern and sanitary and probably well frequented by thrifty housewives. But the romance will be gone.

The market was originally built by the Spaniards in 1791, but a storm destroyed it in 1812. A meat market, the "Hall de Boucheries," was soon built. Vegetable stands, fish markets and coffee rooms sprang up. The whole, extending for three blocks, is a conglomerate mass. It is ugly, and it smells.

Across the street are the Pontalba buildings, said to be the first apartment houses in the United States. The old Cabildo, once the seat of Spanish territorial government, is across the square, next to the famous old St. Louis cathedral. The Louisiana purchase was consummated in the square. Everything nearby is "historical."

But all of it must go, and new generations will grow up to be proud of the glistening title and spotless cleanliness of a modern market.

LINCOLN FAIR TO OPEN OCTOBER 30

Variety Of New Entertainment Features Being Planned

RUSTON, La., Oct. 20.—(Special)—The Lincoln parish free fair will open at 10 o'clock October 30, according to announcement made here Friday by officials of the fair association. Liberal cash prizes will be offered for practically all classes of livestock, with considerable emphasis placed on brood mares for the farm. Exhibits recently seen at a number of community fairs throughout this section, evidence a keen interest in better work mules and horses and in breeding and raising these better animals on Lincoln parish farms, rather than looking to Missouri, Kansas and Texas for these animals.

The fair this season will take on some distinctively new phases, in that it will be a combination fair and farmers holiday. The entertainment features, instead of coming out of the time-worn "carnival," will be original, and will be put on largely by local talent. Beginning at 10 a. m. on the opening morning, a free picture show, featuring wild life only, will be given. Films showing the big, brown bear of Alaska and the giant Kania Moose of Montana, each in his own native wilds, will claim the interest and attention of fair visitors. These free shows will be given at the Rialto theater, Ruston's largest picture-show house.

In the afternoon, a string of hilarious "stunts," such as throwing the rolling-pin, throwing the skillet, turning the grindstone, calling hogs, calling husbands and husking corn, with suitable prizes for winners, will be staged from the bandstand in Railroad park. But the feature contest on this program will be a demonstration of spinning thread with the old "spinning wheel" of grandmother's day. A group of pioneer women, experts with the "wheel" in days gone by, will show modern youth something of what it meant to be a pioneer's wife.

The day's progress will close with an old-fashioned "square" dance. A block of paved street will be roped off and the husky voice of the "caller's" "Honor your partner! Lady on the left; all hands swing," etc., will arouse long forgotten memories in the old folks, while the "younger set" will discover that their elders knew a thing or two about a good time.

Catalogs and programs are being distributed this week.

Studying Deep-Sea Battles in an Ocean-Going Tank

And How the Submarine Caterpillar Tractor Will Enable Dr. Beebe to Blaze New Underwater Trails

A FEW weeks ago the world was startled to hear that Dr. William Beebe and Otis Barton had descended 3,028 feet under water in the latter's bathysphere, establishing a new deep-sea diving record.

The bathysphere is a round steel ball, large enough to accommodate comfortably two observers and is connected with a "mother" ship on shore. Dr. Beebe, outstanding submarine explorer in the world of science, previously had made many new discoveries about life at the bottom of Davy Jones's locker while a passenger in the invention conceived and built by Mr. Barton.

The epoch-making descent, however, was followed, immediately on the two scientists' return to the surface, by an announcement made by the bathysphere designer that opened broad new vistas for the future of marine investigation.

Mr. Barton declared that he was planning to construct a novel undersea "tank" that will be able to move across regions of the sea never before reached by a human being. The tank will be constructed on the caterpillar principle utilized so successfully during the World War by the Allied forces.

Containing compressed air tanks and powerful, but compact, motors it will possess enough energy to enable the novel machine to climb the rocky slopes and pinnacles that cover the ocean floor. Entering the water from the shore, this tractor will have inestimable advantages over even the sensational bathysphere.

Because the latter device of necessity has to be connected with the surface ship it can descend to great depths but cannot be readily moved about for any considerable distance.

The submarine tank, operating independently and under its own power, will be able in a single trip to traverse many acres under the sea without hindrance. From behind its thick glass windows a motion picture cameraman will make spectacular graphic records of the furious life-and-death struggles that are constantly being fought by the denizens of the deep. Perhaps the most interesting of these marine "survival of the fittest" fights is that between those two mighty traditional enemies—the shark and the octopus.

These battles have been described as similar to a combat between a wrestler and a prize fighter. The shark uses his cruel teeth; the devil-fish's weapons are his bone-crushing tentacles.

Such thrilling fights will no doubt prove the most sensational part of the film records to be made by Dr. Beebe and Mr. Otis. But as a scientist, renowned Dr. Beebe will probably be even more interested in the various other phases of life under the sea that he and the inventor will be able to study for the first time in oceanic history. The first trips in the sea-going tank will undoubtedly be made off the coast of Bermuda where Dr. Beebe has enjoyed so much success in his scientific work in recent years.

Some idea of the wonderful sights the pair will see while leisurely traveling in the caterpillar tractor may be obtained from the enthusiastic statement made by Dr. Beebe following a recent dive in the bathysphere to a depth of 2,510 feet. The exploration work was done under the auspices of the New York Zoological Society and the National Geographical Society.

"I have never seen so much stuff in my life and new stuff, too," Dr. Beebe said on emerging from his steel ball. "Much of it is entirely different from that which we observed during previous dives. We saw more fish and larger fish than on any of our previous descents.

"One of the most amazing finds of the day was a flesh-colored fish which I observed near the 2,500-foot level. There were schools of rare Lyampanychus, and thousands of tiny squid."

After his recent record-making descent, the scientist described the appearance of fish which carried "headlights" with them as they swam. These "headlights" are phosphorescent substitutes of nature to replace the absence of sunlight in the black waters deep under the sea. Dr. Beebe said these lights reminded him of "stars gone mad." Both scientists likened the fish to "Roman candles and lights on Christmas trees" dancing in the eerie deeps.

The powerful illumination coming from within the bathysphere seemed to dazzle these fish as moths are dazzled by an electric light bulb. They continually dashed against the sealed steel chamber and burst into amazing pyrotechnical displays as they hit the quartz windows. Mr. Barton meanwhile was taking moving pictures of the swarming life all around him.

Illustrative of the advantages of the projected "tank" is the fact that the two scientists remained only five minutes at the 3,028 foot level. And they were at the extreme safety limit of the cable connecting them with the "mother" ship at that time. There are also air lines and telephone connections in the steel ball.

The bathysphere is itself a marvel of scientific engineering. This diving bell weighs four tons and has three quartz eyes enabling the voyagers to sight a panoramic view of under-sea life. Among the curious discoveries made by Dr. Beebe was that he felt cold, or at least much cooler, at that depth than he had been at the surface.

Eighteen hundred feet down the atmosphere is still remarkably light but below that it becomes inky. The bathysphere is let down on a huge boom. Trays of calcium chloride and soda lime are placed in the sphere to absorb carbon dioxide and humidity. After the scientists get in, a 400-pound door is hoisted into place and bolted tight with mauls and wrenches.

A break in the cables or any mishap would spell certain death for the daring scientists. But Dr. Beebe has never expressed any fear of danger while in his bathysphere.

During the 2,510-foot plunge Dr. Beebe talked constantly over the telephone with his assistant, Miss Gloria Hollister. Beebe told of seeing a brilliantly colored fish, six feet long. At 2,000 feet, he declared, all kinds of lights shone in the water and at 2,300 feet he spoke of seeing a beam of light turquoise, "the loveliest blue I ever saw."

Safeguarded by all the precautions against accident that engineering skill has been able to devise, it is not at all startling to scientists that Dr. Beebe and Mr. Barton again and again go down to these immense depths, confident of their safety.

When the future histories of submarine exploration are written, no men of our time will have their names and fame written in larger letters. Both are trail-blazers. Dr. Beebe has multiplied our knowledge of the once mysterious ocean depths. And only Mr. Barton's inventiveness and scientific knowledge made his colleague's great work possible.

After his record-breaking plunge, Dr. Beebe announced that he planned soon to place his bathysphere on exhibition for the public. He has made dozens of trips in the steel ball.

LITTLE STANLEY

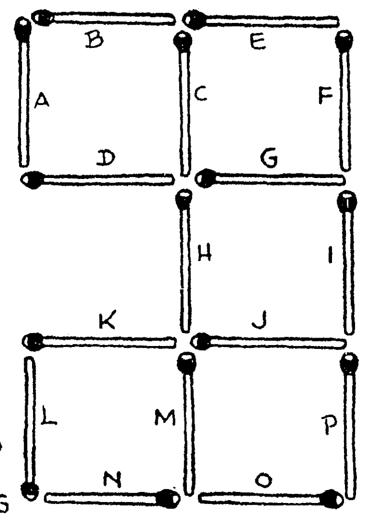
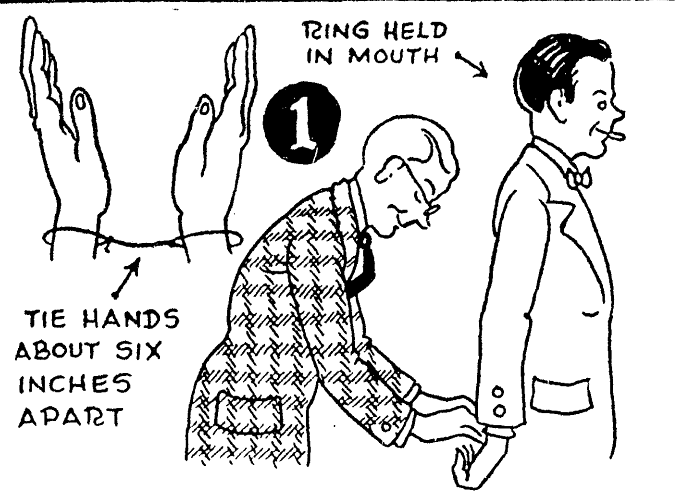
PUZZLES, TRICKS, GAMES & MAGIC — FUNLAND — EVERYBODY'S PLAYMATE

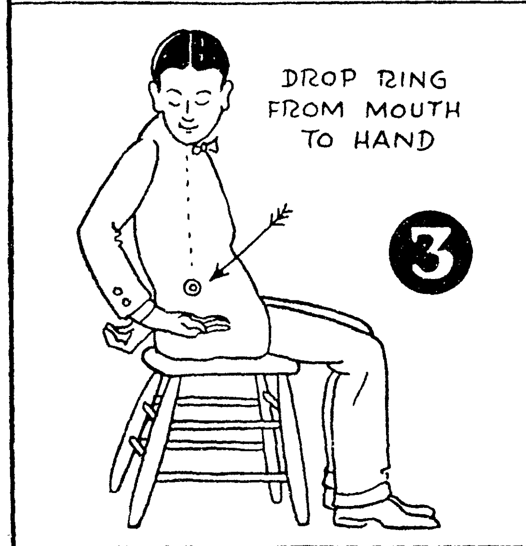
★ BY ★ A.W. NUGENT THE WORLD'S LEADING PUZZLEMAKER

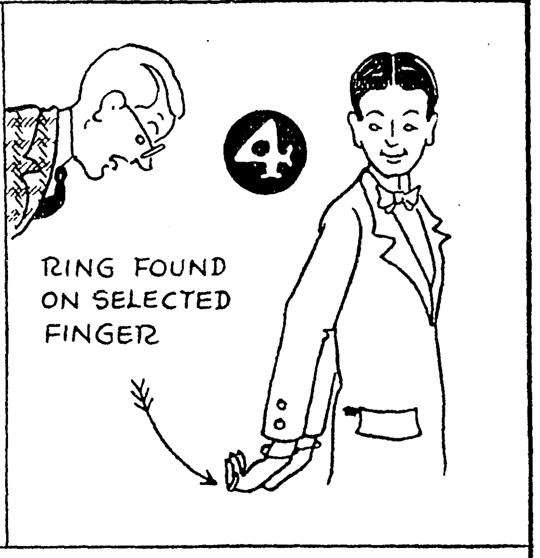


HERE ARE SIXTEEN MATCHES ARRANGED IN FIVE SQUARES. CAN YOU, BY CHANGING THE POSITION OF ONLY THREE OF THE MATCHES, BRING THE NUMBER OF SQUARES DOWN TO FOUR? NO LAYING OF MATCHES TOGETHER, OR REMOVING ALTOGETHER, ALLOWED. ALL MATCHES MUST BE USED.

A.W. NUGENT







THE MYSTERIOUS RING. GET A FRIEND TO TIE YOUR HANDS BEHIND YOU AS SHOWN IN PICTURE NO. 1, LEAVING ABOUT SIX INCHES OF CORD BETWEEN YOUR WRISTS. NOW GET HIM TO PLACE A FINGER RING BETWEEN YOUR LIPS. ASK HIM TO SAY ON WHICH FINGER OF WHICH HAND HE WISHES THE RING TO APPEAR.

WHEN HE HAS MADE HIS SELECTION, SIT DOWN AND ASK HIM TO LEAVE THE ROOM FOR A FEW SECONDS. IN AN INSTANT YOU WALK OUT WITH THE RING ON THE SELECTED FINGER AND YOUR HANDS FIRMLY TIED. THE SECRET IS MADE CLEAR IN THE ABOVE DRAWINGS.

THIS TRICK APPEARS CHILDISH, BUT ITS EFFECT IS MARVELLOUS.

DICK TRACY

SCENE: THE FRONT ENTRANCE TO THE HOME OF DICK TRACY AND JUNIOR TIME: NIGHT.
AH — THIS IS THE PLACE.
MILK
HEY, TRACY! DID YOU HEAR THAT? THE DOOR BELL!
RING
THERE'S NOBODY THERE! BUT LOOK! WHAT'S THAT LYING ON THE STEP?
WE'LL INVESTIGATE, KID.
OH-BOY!
IT'S A PACKAGE OF SOME KIND... WITH MY NAME ON IT!
LOOK OUT! BE CAREFUL OF IT! WE DON'T KNOW WHAT IT CONTAINS!
Junior Tracy
WHAT IN BLAZES..! IT'S--A-A PUPPY.
A PUPPY? FOR ME? A LITTLE SCOTCH TERRIER! WHO SENT IT?
THERE'S NO NAME INSIDE, JUNIOR!
OH BOY! JUST LOOK AT HIM, TRACY!
WHAT A SWELL PUP. BUT WHO WOULD BE LEAVING A SCOTTIE ON MY DOOR-STEP?
GOSH- HE'S A CUTE RASCAL! HM! WHO IN THE WORLD COULD HAVE SENT IT? HM..MM-? MM?
TAKING THE LID OFF THE CARDBOARD BOX THAT THE PUPPY CAME IN-TRACY HURRIES TO HIS LABORATORY, REMOVES A CERTAIN PIECE OF PAPER FROM HIS POCKET, PLACES THE TWO PIECES OF PAPER UNDER A MICROSCOPE AND MAKES A COMPARISON.....
I WAS RIGHT! IT'S FROM HER!
WHAT IF IT DID TAKE THE LAST DOLLAR I HAD! I'LL GET ALONG SOMEWAY AND AT LEAST I FEEL I'VE DONE SOMETHING TOWARD MAKING HIS LIFE HAPPIER.
OCT 21
NOW I CAN RETURN WEST. I'LL GET BACK THERE SOMEHOW. MAYBE I CAN GET A JOB IN THE "COFFEE POT". AFTER ALL, I'M ONLY A HASH SLINGER- THAT'S ALL. AND MY BOY... HE WILL NEVER KNOW.
